Voters set to decide on coal referendum

BY DAVE BRYAN

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

The issue of whether Tallahasseeans should be permitted to decide if coal should be used to power the city's electricity needs in the future will be settled once and for all this week.

Voters go to the polls Tuesday to decide the issue on the same ballot in which City Commission incumbents Steve Meisburg and Jack McLean defend commission seats 1 and 2. Both Meisburg and McLean voted last summer to build a coal plant.

If approved, the referendum would force the city to get voter approval before building a coal plant or buying energy from coal plants in neighboring counties.

"This is the most important issue for a long time in Tallahassee," Rebecca Martin, chair of the Coal Plant Referendum Committee, said Sunday.

The fiery issue began in August when the Coal Plant Referendum Committee formed and began a petition drive to force the city's charter to be amended to allow for the referendum. The group formed in the midst of increasing resistance to steps begun by the city in 1982 that were aimed at making coal energy an alternative fuel source sometime in the future.

General resistance to coal energy increased last summer when Mayor Debbie Lightsey and Commissioners Meisburg and McLean voted to actually build the coal plant by 1995, assuming a recently begun fuel study showed coal would be cheaper for the city to use than natural gas. When the study showed that natural gas prices would remain below those of coal, plans for the plant were scrapped.

But CPR continued its drive, pointing out that the city could still opt for coal, and in late December it accomplished its goal, gaining some 9,000 signatures and winning the

Two members of the FSU men's volleyball club leapt into spring Sunday as Sinjin (NOT!) Smith (the guy in the sweet polka-dot shorts) got ready to block Scott Flanders' (?) spike. Although the guys had just finished practicing inside, they couldn't resist playing in the sand on FSU's intramural fields. Check 'em out!!

Seating for the disabled was moved at Duke game

BY RAJU CHEBIUM

About 20 physically disabled people were left struggling for seats at Thursday's basketball game between Florida State and Duke universities after their designated seats were taken by able-bodied people.

FSU ticketing officials, saying they hadn't expected handicapped-seating sections at Thursday's game in the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center to be filled, sold 20 of the 80 seats to able-bodied people.

"It's just an example of people disregarding the rights of the handicapped," Frank Woodrich, a Tallahassee rehabilitation consultant who got his doctorate from FSU, said Sunday. "The problem got out of hand Thursday night because of the tremendous crowd and because of (FSU's) feeling that disabled people don't need seats, so, let's sell them."

All of the approximately 13,000 seats in the Civic Center were taken for the Thursday game. Consequently, some disabled people such as Woodrich, who has rheumatoid arthritis and uses a wheelchair, were forced to move to other areas in the Civic Center.

"I didn't see them asking any Scientists, environmentalists and presidential hopefuls put their heads together this weekend in Tallahassee to revitalize discussion about global warming, an issue they say President George Bush has ignored.

"George Bush is the kind of person who would cut down a tree, jump up on the stump and give a speech on environmental protection," Iowa senator and Democratic presidential candidate Tom Harkin said Sunday by satellite from New Hampshire.

Approximately 300 people gathered to hear Harkin and others address environmental concerns at the Global Warming Leadership Forum at the Florida State Conference Center. Organizers said the goal of the two-day gala affair was to promote more dialogue on global warming between the scientific community and government leaders.

A main theme throughout the event was what many referred to as the Bush administration's neglect of the environment.

Taking his shot at Bush via satellite, presidential candidate and former Massachusetts senator Paul Tsongas suggested Bush has ignored the environment for economic profit.

"I am an environmentalist and no amount of economic interest is going to change that," Tsongas said Saturday. "We need a leader to say the environment is a real and important issue and Bush is not doing that."

Much of the ruckus over Bush was with the administration's reluctance to compose what participants called a responsible national energy policy.

"Putting together a national energy policy that the American public can believe in and embrace will be no problem," said Tsongas. "If I'm elected, people will know they have a friend in the White House."

Harkin promised similar attention to the environment if elected president.

"The protection of the environment should be elevated to the national security level," Harkin said. "Over the last 11 years, we've had to spend as much time worrying about the White House effect as the

Black History Month

African-American students at Florida A&M and Florida State universities have mixed emotions when it comes to Black History Month.

Some say the month—which is celebrated around the country each February in a tradition that dates back to the 1920s and 30s—helps them feel proud of blacks' contributions to American history. Others say the month-long celebration is designed more to educate non-black Americans about black history.

But many agree that if Americans knew more about black history in the first place, there would be no need for a Black History Month.

"It offends me that people think that our history can be condensed to a month's celebration," John Cole, a junior newspaper-journalism major at Florida A&M University, said last week.

Melody Jones, a sophomore biology major at Florida State University, agreed.

"The month is something for blacks to be proud of themselves," she said. "But I don't think it should be just one month. It must be everyday."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Keith Herring, a senior psychology major at FSU.

"I think it's unfair for the white government to designate one

New FSU student group to tackle rape

BY CATHY AREU
FLAMBEAU WRITER

A new student organization hopes to reduce the incidence of rape in the Florida State University community by sending student volunteers to fraternities, sororities and other campus organizations to educate their members about the issue.

A peer education program organized by the Association of Students for Action and Prevention of Rape (ASAP) marks the first time students will be tapped to inform other students about rape at the university.

FSU administrative departments, university police, and student government agencies have dealt with the problem of rape before, but there is a need for one organization completely focused on the crime, ASAP President Judy Diaz said last week.

"Rape is not necessarily getting worse but getting acknowledged," said Diaz, whose main goal is to make rape a constant issue on people's minds.

The group took its first step toward realizing its goal Saturday with a four-hour training session for ASAP volunteers.

The organization will serve as a rape information base at the university, Diaz said. She added she does not want the organization to scare away men and she hopes to encourage them to help with an issue as important to them as it is to women.

"Some men really want to help," she said, pointing out that the organization's treasurer is a male.

Jennifer Buchanan, assistant dean of student affairs at FSU, said the idea of sending out students to educate their peers about rape is not a new concept. The University of Florida and the University of Georgia have had similar organizations for years, she said.

Mary Ruiz, director of the Peer Education Program at UF, said Wednesday that the program has been successful because of the high demand for rape prevention information at the campus and in the local community.

At UF, students visit a variety of organizations on a daily basis. For the first time at the university, the organization will soon be distributing surveys to audiences, Ruiz said, to find out whether the program has been successful at changing misconceptions of rape.

ASAP has plans to serve schools and other local organizations. But for now the group will concentrate solely on the FSU community, said Tracy Skipper, a graduate student assisting ASAP.

Gary Lauderdale, pledge educator at FSU's Delta Tau Delta fraternity, said ASAP is welcome at his fraternity.

"The more people know about rape, the better," he said.

"In this day and age, fraternities have to be aware of rape," agreed Bart Abstein, president of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Glidden is chosen as FSU's new provost

BY THOMAS AUSTIN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Robert Glidden, former dean of the Florida State University School of Music, was named FSU's new provost and vice president for academic affairs by President Dale Lick Friday.

"He is an outstanding educator, scholar and leader, and will provide very progressive leadership as our chief academic officer," Lick said Friday.

The provost position is the university administration's second highest office. As provost, Glidden will coordinate university-wide budget development and resource allocation with the president, and will generally run FSU when Lick is out of town.

Glidden will also chair the council of deans and will be an ex officio member of the faculty senate.

"I'm very pleased to have this opportunity to continue working with President Lick, the faculty, staff and students of Florida State University," Glidden said in his acceptance speech. "I have great affection for the university and high hopes for its ongoing ascent into a position of prominence among the nation's major public universities."

Glidden

Glidden, who has served as interim provost since July 1, said now that he has accepted the permanent position, he can address issues he had been reticent to address as interim provost.

"There are a few things that have to do with organizational matters that I was reluctant to recommend to the president, because if someone else had been selected provost they might have a different viewpoint," Glidden said.

"I'm not saying there are going to be a lot of changes people will notice right away," he added. "But I've been thinking about several recommendations, which (Lick) and I will be working on for the next several months."

Dianne Harrison-Montgomery, who chaired the provost search committee, said Glidden was recommended to the president unanimously.

"The committee was pleased to recommend Dr. Glidden, based on the significant support he received from every facet of the university community," said Harrison-Montgomery, a social science professor.

Prior to his interim appointment, Glidden, 55, had served as dean and professor of music at FSU since 1979. He said he will meet with administrators of the music school within 10 days to determine when to begin the search for the school's next dean.

From 1985 to 1988, Glidden was president of the National Association of Schools of Music. He also served as board chairman of the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation, and on the Arts in Education advisory committee for the National Endowment for the Arts.

Glidden received a bachelor of arts degree in music in 1958, a master of arts in music performance and literature in 1960 and a doctorate in music in 1966—all from the University of Iowa.

Before coming to FSU, Glidden was music dean at Bowling Green State University and executive director of the National Association of Schools of Art.

Lick chose Glidden from two other finalists forwarded by the provost search committee: Susan Opava-Stitzer, chair of the University of Puerto Rico's physiology department, and Max J. Skidmore, dean of the college of Arts and Sciences at the University of Missouri in Kansas City.

Stone coal sellout

Like many Tallahasseeans, we were shocked to pick up our Saturday morning newspaper and read that dirty money is corrupting the local political process.

The CSX corporation, a railroad that hauls coal and thus has a vested interest in the outcome of the coal referendum, is funneling money through Clean Affordable Reliable Energy (CARE), a political action committee, in a back-door scheme to defeat the referendum.

Equally troubling are reports that the local chairman of the Leon County Democratic party, Jon Ausman—a supporter of the re-election of pro-coal commissioners Steve Meisburg and Jack McLean—is flacking for this outfit.

According to a story in Saturday's Tallahassee Democrat, CSX Vice President Tom Hoppin said Ausman helped develop the advertising message, selected media outlets, and recommended local vendors for mailout.

If this is true, it would seem that the Leon County Democratic Party head has taken complete leave of his senses.

Ausman's slippery explanation is that he offered the same services to supporters of the coal referendum. But the supporters say they turned Ausman down because he wanted part of the money raised from the effort to go into party coffers. Since when, we wonder, is the office of the local Democratic Party for sale to the highest bidder?

Perhaps it's just a coincidence that Ausman supports the two pro-coal commissioners. Perhaps not. But one thing is clear: By providing any assistance at all to CSX's self-serving, corrupt effort to defeat the referendum, Jon Ausman is violating the trust of voters in this election and those who have supported him over the years.

This is leadership at its morally bankrupt worst.

Although there is no smoking gun, the influx of corporate money from CSX reinforces the suspicion held by many in this community that Commissioners Meisburg and McLean are themselves flacks for corporate interests.

Surely this episode has done nothing to alleviate the suspicions, justified or not.

As for the referendum, we couldn't say it better than Jack McLean himself did when he issued a statement of principle on the matter in a flyer for his first commission race. His position then was to:

"Require referendum elections on new major construction. Citizens should have the right to vote on such major considerations."

On Feb. 4, vote yes on the coal referendum.

Say no to coal

Editor:

I became involved in the Coal Plant Referendum petition drive primarily because of my concern for our area's environment. I felt then and I feel now that a coal plant in Tallahassee is a bad idea. Although so-called "clean coal" may emit less acid rain, it will still bring upon us an acceptable amount of lead and mercury. Our health and our children's health are too important to put at risk to help the northern coal industry.

Furthermore, there is no clear evidence that using coal will save money over the present plentiful and nearby natural gas source. The $300 million to build the coal plant, which would only replace and not produce any additional energy, could better be spent by the city in subsidizing individual solar units for your home and mine, as well as subsidizing energy-saving light bulbs and devices. That's the way to save energy and reduce the cost, too.

As it is now, the vote by any three commissioners at any commission meeting can give Tallahassee a coal plant. It's too important a matter for the people not to have a final say. The referendum on Feb. 4 will not say a coal plant can never be built. It will only give the people of Tallahassee a voice in the matter.

Jack C. Wolff

Editor:

Now we have coal plant advocate Jack McLean stating that the city staff was "out of control" when it reported to the city commissioners, apparently influencing commissioners McLean, Meisburg and Lightsey to approve the building of a coal plant in Tallahassee.

If a majority of the city commissioners can be so easily influenced by "out of control" city staff, this is more reason than ever to put the final say into the hands of the voters.

On Feb. 4, city voters should vote for approval of the amendment requiring a majority vote of the people instead of the vote of three commissioners to build a coal plant in Tallahassee.

Blood money

Editor:

Electronic fences. Complete radar systems. Anti-guerilla alarm systems. Communication systems. Computers. Night vision devices. These are the items that permitted the South African government to engage in the efficient slaughter of thousands of black South Africans struggling to overthrow the racist white minority regime that controlled every aspect of their lives.

According to the Nov. 5, 1977 issue of the Economist, a conservative British publication, these components of death and destruction were provided to South Africa by three Israeli companies: Elvit, Isreal Aviation Industries and Tadiran.

Thanks largely to the efforts of City Commissioner Jack McLean, Tadiran and its local subsidiary Tallacom are the beneficiaries of millions of dollars in subsidies from the taxpayers of Tallahassee. Thus we have the irony of black people in Tallahassee paying taxes to enrich a company that reportedly has contributed to the killing of black people in South Africa.

Another indictment of Tadiran's diabolical role in South Africa comes from a recent report published by the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. In a document dated July 18, 1991, Tadiran is listed among these companies that have provided military assistance to South Africa in clear violation of the United Nations' embargo against such assistance.

So the next time you fork over your hard-earned tax dollars to the City of Tallahassee, remember well that those dollars are stained with the blood of your brothers and sisters in South Africa.

Good luck in your career and I hope I soon will see something worth reading under your name.

Collins: Money isn't behind school failures

BY MATT GRIMISON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Education pioneer Marva Collins blasted traditional educational philosophy in Tallahassee Friday and chided teachers who make excuses for their students' failure to learn.

"You do not reform a system with the same experts who messed it up. You must reform curriculum," said Collins, founder of the Westside Preparatory School in Chicago, and generally recognized as one of the nation's top educators.

Collins' lecture, which took place in the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center, was the second one in Florida State University's Distinguished Lecture Series this year.

Collins, who was introduced by Florida Education Commissioner Betty Castor as a miracle worker, said blaming the educational system's problems on a lack of money is a cop-out.

"Teachers are saying that times are difficult now. Things have always been difficult at Westside," Collins said.

"We do not accept government or corporate grants. You are looking at the funding for my school," Collins added, pointing out that she funds her school with revenue generated from her lectures and related income.

Collins taught in the public school system for 14 years before leaving in frustration. She set up her own school on the second floor of her home with only $5,000 and a handful of students.

She took in inner-city students at risk of dropping out, and through her innovative teaching methods, turned many of them into success stories who graduated and went on to college. As word of her success grew, more students applied to her school, and educators began emulating her teaching methods.

Collins teaches her students in elementary school reading through classics such as Dickens and Shakespeare, instead of traditional methods.

"Public schools teach reading with things like 'See the big red ball.' Of course they can see it, there is a big picture of it on the page," said Collins.

There is now a Marva Collins Preparatory School in Cincinnati, and a second school opening on Chicago's south side. Plans for a high school and a college are underway, too.

Collins attributed most of her school's success to its teachers.

"We have teachers who do not miss work, they do not make excuses, they do not whine about pay and they take even one failure personally," Collins said.

The educator expressed annoyance with teachers and administrators who continuously make excuses for failure, not only blaming financial constraints but parents, too.

"Why do we expect so much from parents who have themselves been miseducated?" Collins said.

An Energy Option You Didn't Even Use Just Saved You Over 40 Million Dollars.

Tallahassee didn't use coal last year. But having the option to use coal saved the city an estimated 40 million dollars when negotiating contracts with gas suppliers. So vote against the referendum and let's keep the coal option. Because even if we don't use it, we don't want to lose it.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

FROM STAFF REPORTS

In recognition of Black History Month, the following events are scheduled in the Tallahassee area for February:

In the community

• The Walker Ford Community Center will host its annual Black History Program this Friday and Saturday. The theme for the event, "Where Do We Go From Here?" will be represented through African-American art exhibits, traditional African dance, live entertainment and guest speakers. The event runs from 7 to 10 p.m. on Friday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. The center is located at 2301 Pasco St. and admission is free.

• A Black History Cultural Review Gospel Concert will be held at the Dade Street Community Center at 1115 Dade St. on Feb. 16 at 3:30 p.m. Several local gospel groups are scheduled to perform. Admission charge is $1.

At FAMU

• Florida A&M University Student Government will host a Black Film Festival each Tuesday during the month of February. School Daze will play Feb. 4. The Color Purple will be shown the following week, and on Feb. 18 Cooley High will be played. Glory will be the month's final film on Feb. 25.

All movies will be shown at 7 p.m. in FAMU's Perry Paige Auditorium.

• FAMU's All University Black History Month Convocation will be held in Gaither Gymnasium on Feb. 28 at 10 a.m.

• The FAMU Black Archives Research Center and Museum will host an exhibit entitled "History of Blacks in the Military: Revolutionary War Through World War II" throughout February.

The exhibit is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission is free. Call 599-3020 for more information.

At TCC

• Tallahassee Community College will participate in a nationwide teleconference, "Beyond the Dream IV," Wednesday at 1 p.m. in the student center conference room on Appleyard Drive. The event, which will kickoff TCC's month-long observance of Black History Month, will originate from Washington, D.C. and feature noted author Alex Haley.

Discussion topics include "African-American Leaders of Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," "Emerging Role of Students in Improving the Status of African-Americans," and "Regaining the Civil Rights Momentum." There is no admission charge.

• The Spike Lee film Jungle Fever will be presented Friday at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. in TCC's student center. It will play again at the same time and place Feb. 26 and 28.

• The Black History Brain Bowl will be held Feb. 11 with several high schools competing. The event begins at 10 a.m. in Turner Auditorium on Appleyard Drive.

right to put the issue to Tallahassee voters.

As controversial as the coal plant issue has been—spawning the majority of debate during the campaign for McLean and Meisburg's seats—it took yet another twist Saturday.

That's when the Tallahassee Democrat reported the CSX railroad company, which hauls coal, has given more than $40,000 to a newly formed, anti-referendum political action committee. The group has stormed local media with advertisements aimed at swaying residents to vote against the referendum.

Robert Neff, treasurer of Clean, Affordable, Reliable Energy (CARE), said Sunday his committee is against the referendum because all energy sources should be considered in the pursuit of the cheapest form of energy possible. He added that because the commission postponed the issue until 2015, residents now have 23 years to debate it and shouldn't act in haste.

"I do not want to limit the city's options in any way," he said. "And since it's been postponed why do we have to go out and get emotional about this thing when we have 23 years to debate coal?"

Martin, who criticized the relationship between CSX and CARE, said she fears the last-minute media blitz could hurt CPR's attempts at getting the referendum approved.

"I think it could really hurt it," she said. "But maybe it's in such bad taste it will hinder their efforts."

But Neff defended the group's efforts, saying its pursuit of financial support is in the true fashion of good ol' American politics.

"We went out and sought support, we didn't care where the support came from," he said. "I assume that's the American way . . . If the shoe were on the other foot . . . I would have gone to the oil companies (for support)."

Nine Out Of Ten Voters Want To Keep Their Energy Options.

So How Come We're Voting To Get Rid Of One?

Last year, in an independent survey, nine out of ten people in Tallahassee agreed that depending on one energy source is a bad idea. But if the referendum passes, the only option we'll have is gas, and that's not enough.

Having the coal option saved the city of Tallahassee over 40 million dollars last year in negotiations with gas suppliers. It pays to keep our minds open, because we can keep our options open.

able-bodied people to move," said Mary Ann Farrell, a disabled Tallahassee resident and owner of Hoffman's Chocolates. "Everybody I'd talked to had been asked to move away or move further down ... I didn't talk to a single person (that night) who wasn't mad as hell."

Some people such as Farrell, who has a malformed spine, were seated in the handicapped areas, but were squeezed between able-bodied people. Farrell said she was hurt in the process from people bumping into her.

"The Civic Center has very good seating for disabled people," said Woodrich. "It's a matter of making them available to disabled people."

For their part, FSU and Civic Center officials said they made a mistake and added they will not repeat it.

"We'd just expected a record crowd, maybe even an over-capacity crowd," said John Sheffield, FSU's coordinator of Intercollegiate Athletics, adding that he would call the mixup in seating not a mistake but "a result of overplanning."

"We were experiencing some growing pains," Sheffield said, noting that in addition to handicapped seating, parking and restrooms were also inadequate.

When asked if FSU and the Civic Center were violating the Disabled Person's Act, Sheffield replied, "I don't know about legal problems. I just sell tickets."

The new federal law, which went into effect on Jan. 26, requires all public facilities to be made accessible to disabled people.

Roger Englert, deputy director of the Civic Center, was surprised when he heard security officers had asked disabled people to move instead of able-bodied people. Englert added that he could give no explanation for why that happened.

Woodrich, however, said he had an answer.

"They had already sold the seats to the able-bodied people. The dilemma was that there was no real officer to make that decision," he said.

"If you are disabled, you should not have to find a high-placed official to find a seat," he added.

Sheffield said he has apologized to both Woodrich and Farrell for the Thursday mixup.

Meanwhile, anger over Thursday's incident still lingers.

"I've been waiting 20 years for this game," said Farrell, who got her bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and is a big fan of Duke's Blue Devils team. "My only memories of this is what happened to me, not the game."

month, though blacks have contributed much to this country. It's cheap," he said. "It must be Black History Hour, Month, and Black History Day for 365 days."

Cole said Americans—both black and non-black—are not exposed enough to black history. Even what little is mentioned in American history textbooks is only a sketchy attempt at explaining the role blacks had in shaping this nation's history, he said.

"Our history does not start at slavery and end with civil rights," he said. "... Black American history should be integrated with American history and should be reflected in history textbooks more than it is now."

Kyron Williams, 22, a senior electrical-engineering major at FAMU, described Black History Month as a feel-good measure when African-Americans can feel proud about the accomplishments of their ancestors.

"I think every group of people needs to pat themselves on the back ... the same thing happens in a way in greater American society when you celebrate the greatness of the Constitution," he said.

Daryl Parks, FAMU's student body president, agreed.

"Everyone should be taught history from their people's perspective," Parks said. "I think it's important to see the role that your people played."

Victor Gaines took Parks' statement a step further.

"If you really don't know anything about black history, you can't really understand the black person," said the 25-year-old computer information systems major at FAMU.

Is it possible there will come a time when blacks will no longer need to celebrate Black History Month?

"The day that will happen will be the day people celebrate the contribution of a black scientist such as George Washington Carver just like they recognize the contributions of say, (Thomas) Edison," said Williams.

But Joseph Brown III, a senior photography major at FAMU, disagreed.

"Even in an ideal society, there should still be a Black History Month to uplift our heritage," Brown said.

Keep Your Energy Options Open Or We May Have To Turn To Some Unreliable Sources Of Power.

Tallahassee already depends on foreign countries for some of its gas supplies. And who's holding on to much of the world's natural gas reserves? Countries like Russia. Algeria. Iraq. If the referendum passes, we'll become even more dependent on foreign energy sources. So let's keep our power in the right hands.

Brown lashes candidates, says they're not environment sensitive

BY GLEN TORBERT

STAFF WRITER

Democratic presidential candidate Jerry Brown lashed out at political opponents Sunday in Tallahassee for not paying enough attention to ongoing destruction of the environment.

The former governor of California, who received a standing ovation from nearly 300 people after his speech, complained about having a frog in his throat. He blamed it on California's smog, and said the respiratory problem was proof that pollution needs to be curtailed.

"I spent 20 years in Los Angeles, and I hold pollution directly responsible," Brown said, much to the amusement of the crowd.

Brown was the only candidate to appear in person at the Global Warming Leadership Forum this weekend in Tallahassee—a fact he said demonstrates his concern for the environment.

"I came here in person because I believe what you're doing is critically important," he said.

Brown attacked President George Bush for being reluctant to move ahead with environmental reform.

"I'm a Democrat, so I'm supposed to say, 'George Bush is bad.' You bet he's bad!" Brown said. "He's dragging his feet on global warming."

But Brown added that Democrats aren't doing much better.

"I'm running a campaign that's willing to speak about the flaws of my own party. I'm willing to say, 'The emperor has no clothes,'" he said.

Brown ran down a list of gains in environmental issues he said California made while he was governor in the late 1970s.

"Reforestation—we started that out in California," Brown said. "We led the way to crack down on toxins."

He added that California fought air pollution, car pollution and pesticides during his terms in office. The battle had not been an easy one, Brown said, and he wouldn't expect it to be any easier if he were elected president.

"I can testify by my own experiences, if you really start making changes, if you crack a few eggs to make an omelet, people do recoil and you are going to run into trouble," Brown said.

But he insisted that the United States has much to gain from adopting a more environmentally responsible national policy.

"I know what you know. If we invest in a sustainable energy efficient program . . . that's going to build a great America," Brown said.

Individuals, as well as the government, need to join in the fight against chemicals that damage the atmosphere, he added.

"You can start a recycling program. You can do something in your own home. You have to embody change first right here (in yourself)," Brown said.

FSU sweeps Wake outta here

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

The Florida State basketball team, forced to come back just two days after a hard-fought loss to Duke, scored the first season-sweep over an Atlantic Coast Conference foe Saturday. The Seminoles (14-5, 6-3) held their lead for the final four minutes and beat the Wake Forest Demon Deacons 79-78.

FSU coach Pat Kennedy said he was proud that his team fought so hard against Wake Forest (11-6, 4-5) after losing to Duke Thursday.

"It was just a great gut-check for our whole program," Kennedy said Saturday. "Going in, I told the coaching staff that we've got to be as fired up as we've ever been, because we're going to have to reach so deep ... after the Duke game. I thought Wake (Forest) was playing extremely good basketball and Rodney Rogers is playing as well as anybody in the league."

Wake Forest coach Dave Odom also said he was impressed with the Seminoles' ability to rebound after nearly upsetting the top team in college basketball Thursday.

"I think (FSU) did a great job today coming back from a difficult loss on Thursday night," Odom said. "Not every team in the country can do that."

Down by as many as nine points in the first half, the Seminoles fought back, trading leads with the Demon Deacons until four minutes remained. Then, with his team down by three, Deacon guard Rodney Rogers (who averages more than 20 points per game) missed a foul shot. Forward Anthony Tucker, however, got the rebound and was able to tip it back through the hoop, leaving FSU with a slim, one-point lead.

Wake Forest had a final chance to win but, after getting the rebound from FSU guard Sam Cassell's missed free throw, Tucker couldn't get off a shot from mid-court before time ran out.

Odom said the Seminole's league-wide reputation as a quick, defensive team may have had something to do with Tucker missing the shot.

"(Tucker) had a difficult time getting out of the rebound and I'm sure, in his mind, Charlie Ward or one of those guys was going to run up behind him and take the ball," Odom said. "So he was probably looking for that."

Odom said he was impressed with the clutch play of Cassell, who scored six of his team-high 24 points within the game's final four minutes. Cassell also grabbed six rebounds.

"(Cassell) has been in those situations a lot," Odom said. "He thrives on it. He's a money player. He's an end of the game player and I don't think that's a surprise to any of the ACC coaches."

FSU forwards Doug Edwards and Rodney Dobard scored 15 each. Edwards grabbed five rebounds. Dobard had six.

Senior center Chris King led the 'Deacon frontcourt with 18 points, 11 rebounds and three blocked shots. Tucker scored 18, with seven rebounds and four assists.

FSU sweeps Wake outta here

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

The Florida State basketball team, forced to come back just two days after a hard-fought loss to Duke, scored the first season-sweep over an Atlantic Coast Conference foe Saturday. The Seminoles (14-5, 6-3) held their lead for the final four minutes and beat the Wake Forest Demon Deacons 79-78.

FSU coach Pat Kennedy said he was proud that his team fought so hard against Wake Forest (11-6, 4-5) after losing to Duke Thursday.

"It was just a great gut-check for our whole program," Kennedy said Saturday. "Going in, I told the coaching staff that we've got to be as fired up as we've ever been, because we're going to have to reach so deep ... after the Duke game. I thought Wake (Forest) was playing extremely good basketball and Rodney Rogers is playing as well as anybody in the league."

Wake Forest coach Dave Odom also said he was impressed with the Seminoles' ability to rebound after nearly upsetting the top team in college basketball Thursday.

"I think (FSU) did a great job today coming back from a difficult loss on Thursday night," Odom said. "Not every team in the country can do that."

Down by as many as nine points in the first half, the Seminoles fought back, trading leads with the Demon Deacons until four minutes remained. Then, with his team down by three, Deacon guard Rodney Rogers (who averages more than 20 points per game) missed a foul shot. Forward Anthony Tucker, however, got the rebound and was able to tip it back through the hoop, leaving FSU with a slim, one-point lead.

Wake Forest had a final chance to win but, after getting the rebound from FSU guard Sam Cassell's missed free throw, Tucker couldn't get off a shot from mid-court before time ran out.

Odom said the Seminole's league-wide reputation as a quick, defensive team may have had something to do with Tucker missing the shot.

"(Tucker) had a difficult time getting out of the rebound and I'm sure, in his mind, Charlie Ward or one of those guys was going to run up behind him and take the ball," Odom said. "So he was probably looking for that."

Odom said he was impressed with the clutch play of Cassell, who scored six of his team-high 24 points within the game's final four minutes. Cassell also grabbed six rebounds.

"(Cassell) has been in those situations a lot," Odom said. "He thrives on it. He's a money player. He's an end of the game player and I don't think that's a surprise to any of the ACC coaches."

FSU forwards Doug Edwards and Rodney Dobard scored 15 each. Edwards grabbed five rebounds. Dobard had six.

Senior center Chris King led the 'Deacon frontcourt with 18 points, 11 rebounds and three blocked shots. Tucker scored 18, with seven rebounds and four assists.

CPE catalog is the pick of the litter

BY CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

Like to join the many people practicing Eckankar, Raja Yoga, neo-paganism, and/or meditation? Perhaps you'd rather learn how to belly dance, use your mind to control your bodily health, or learn how current socio/political/economic structures are responsible for poverty, alienation and violence? These are just some of the free classes offered by the Center for Participant Education (CPE) this Spring.

CPE has been active since 1970, and its course catalog is the Land's End of alternative education in Tallahassee, providing a wide variety of free classes taught by people from within the community.

Besides classes, CPE is also sponsoring two film series and a number of speakers. Among those slated for this semester are Michael Albert and Chaia Heller.

Albert is founder and co-editor of Z Magazine, a prominent progressive publication, and the author of a number of books on participatory economics in the 21st century.

Heller will be speaking on social ecology and eco-feminism. "Eco-feminism is a movement of women who understand the connection between the war against women and the war against nature," she says in a column in the catalog.

The film series follow along the same lines. One is a social critique of Western Culture featuring the excellent Sammy and Rosie Get Laid as well as High Hopes and the black comedy Eat the Rich.

The second series features a group of films produced by, directed by, and targeted for women. One is Rate It X, a documentary revealing the embedded attitudes of a cross-section of men who produce and profit from images of women. Another is Mirror Mirror, in which 13 women are interviewed talking about their bodies in an exploration of the idealized female form.

A bastion of alternative culture and one of the U.S.'s original "free" universities, CPE offers diverse educational and cultural growth opportunities not available anywhere else in Tallahassee.

Registration begins today. You can pick up a catalog just about anywhere on FSU's campus (it's the one with the big yellow sun on the cover), or visit CPE's office on the second floor of the FSU student union. You can also call CPE at 644-6577.

Simple Math.

You don't need to be a math wiz to figure out that it takes a lot of money to go to college. The fine folks at Jeep and Eagle would like to help subtract some of that financial burden by reimbursing a lucky student for a semester's worth of tuition.

If you can picture yourself as that lucky student, get over to your participating school bookstore and pick up the new Jeep and Eagle college folder while supplies last. It's free, and inside there's a contest called "Where in the World?" that will award up to $10,000 in tuition reimbursement. The official program rules are detailed in the folder.

So if you think you're smart (and we know you are), enter the Jeep and Eagle college folder contest. You never know—filling out the entry form could save you from filling out financial aid forms next term.

Charlotte hangs tough with FSU

BY PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

To admit a moral victory is sports taboo. Yet the College of Charleston baseball team was hardly tacit about its satisfaction Sunday with a 4-1 loss to Florida State.

Especially after Charleston, in just its second year with a baseball program, was demoralized 15-3 Saturday.

"For this group right here, after losing 15-3, it would have been very easy to take another beating," Charleston Coach Ralph Ciabattari said. "The biggest thing I'm proud of is that we came out here focused ... we're going to be heard from."

The Howsler Stadium crowd of 2,099 was given all indication that Sunday would be the same as Saturday when FSU shot out to a 4-0 lead in the first two innings.

However, Charleston's Ned Timmerman had other ideas, shutting out the Seminoles over the final 6 1/3 innings. Afterwards, Timmerman appeared as if he'd pitched the game of his life.

"That was a dream come true for me," said Timmerman, who allowed just four hits, "To pitch against the No. 7 team in the nation and be effective. I'm kind of at a loss of words right now."

Timmerman was by no means overpowering, but he kept the Seminoles guessing.

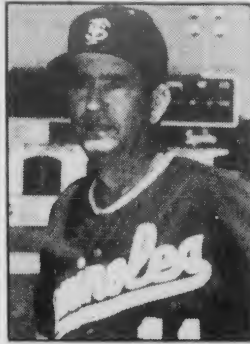

"He just had us off-balance," FSU leftfielder Chris Roberts said. "He threw a lot of off-speed pitches and we were a bit anxious."

Although FSU went 2-0 in its season-opening series, Seminoles coach Mike Martin believes the close game Sunday with a program in its infancy proves his team has room for improvement.

"I think that it just goes to show you that this ballclub has a long way to go," Martin said.

Perhaps hitting-wise, but FSU's pitching was strong all weekend. Jim Rushmore got the win Sunday, allowing three hits in four innings with six strikeouts. Paul Wilson and John Nedeau each pitched a shutout inning with two strikeouts. John Davis closed the day with three shutout innings and six strikeouts.

Saturday, Roger Bailey pitched five innings, allowing just one run, to pick up the win.

'... this ballclub has a long way to go.'

greenhouse effect."

But presidential candidates weren't the only ones bashing Bush's inattention to the environment.

"If the Bush government would agree to binding timetables for environmental progress like the other industrialized nations, something could get done," said Jeremy Leggett, director of Science for Peace International's Atmosphere and Energy Campaign.

"Bush is in the way," Leggett added.

One of the forum's organizers, Mary Beth Healey of Citizens to Preserve Florida, said nothing phenomenal would result from the event, but she added that any discussion of global warming is important.

"There needs to be a push to make global warming an important part of the presidential campaign," Healey said. "That's what we're doing."

Kicking off the weekend's events was a panel discussion composed of both scientists and environmentalists, who spent most of their time talking about the rise in sea level caused by the greenhouse effect.

"If current rates continue, 100 years into the future the planet's temperature will have risen three degrees," said Daniel Albritton, a director of the Aeronomy Laboratory of NOAA's Environmental Research Lab. "A three degree warming will have huge impacts."

According to Albritton, the greenhouse effect is a natural part of the Earth's climate and without it our planet would remain in a frozen ice shroud. The amount of greenhouse gases, however, has quadrupled since the start of the Industrial Revolution, causing an increase in the world's temperature and a rise in sea level.

Another issue, which Leggett said was related to the greenhouse effect despite common misconceptions, is ozone depletion.

Leggett explained that deterioration of the ozone layer, caused by chlorofluorocarbons emitted into the atmosphere, results in an increase in ultraviolet rays reaching the planet's surface. This in turn kills plant life, which Leggett said, contributes to global warming.

"They take carbon dioxide, the main greenhouse gas, out of our atmosphere, keeping the planet," he added.

Former Arizona governor and panelist Bruce Babbitt went on to explain that marshland is destroyed when sea levels rise too fast.

"In Louisiana for example, there're losing four acres per hour or 100 acres per day of marshland," Babbitt said, adding that marshes are vital to the existence of many marine plants and animals.

"You can think of the sea level as a dipstick for the greenhouse effect," Babbitt said. "The higher the level, the worse off we are."

"Some people say life's a beach, and now even that is slipping away," Babbitt added.

HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make up your mind to see a major project through to the end and you will be royally rewarded. Although your determination will falter at times, persistence is the key ingredient for success. Business travel enjoys especially favorable influences in June. Curb a tendency to always reach for the check in restaurants. The money you save now will come in handy later on. Romance could have you on the run next fall. A December wedding is possible if you accede to mate's wishes.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: novelist James Michener, quarterback Fran Tarkenton and Bob Griese, actress Morgan Fairchild.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone contacting influential people and turn your attention to your family and friends. Do not take on additional financial responsibility without consulting your mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New projects thrive. A current plan is approaching perfection. Employment and financial benefits can be wrapped up in a neat package. Romance holds some pleasant surprises this week.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be careful when reading and signing documents. Ignoring the fine print could prove costly. Social plans could change at a minute's notice. Keep your schedule flexible if you can.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you are satisfied with your surroundings and financial opportunities, do not be hasty about making a change. Giving romance a second chance could be the smartest decision you ever made.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Avoid making any comments that could antagonize others. Mark time until work conditions improve. An innovative idea will get a better reception if you wait until next week. Keep spending within limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A happy meeting of minds makes it easier for you to approach higher-ups now. Be objective, instead of suspicious about a colleague's efforts to improve work procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Consolidate recent gains before making a new commitment. Now is the time to discuss a work's home conflict with those directly involved. Speak your mind and let loved ones do the same.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relatives need your help in sorting out a problem. Be patient. A hobby could become a real money-maker. Join a community group or social club if your time and energy permit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Meeting your financial obligations will be easier if you eliminate certain frills. Strike a better balance between work and play. A romantic relationship improves when you show greater consideration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Strive to improve your relationships with your co-workers. A friend offers excellent financial advice. Follow it and you will win big! Career mailers are stressed later in the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fall back on your financial reserves if necessary. Believe it or not, a no-frills journey can be just as satisfying as traveling first class. Important people begin to notice your efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who share your interests are particularly important to your financial success. Be realistic. Original ideas abound! Strike out on your own if your associates lack vision.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are gifted speakers, eager to discuss the larger social questions of our times. Born humanitarians, these Aquarians are passionate about improving the plight of the needy and the oppressed. Anything new will attract these youngsters like moths to light. They are fascinated by advanced technology and will want to learn all they can about computers. The business world will benefit from their practical yet compassionate approach to personnel matters.

Anti-referendum ads misleading, critics say

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

The CSX Railroads corporation has sunk a whopping $114,000 into a group that was formed only last week to fight the coal plant referendum on today's ballot, and much of that money has been used on an advertising blitz that critics say is chock full of misleading information and scare tactics.

Robert Neff, treasurer for Clean, Reliable, Affordable Energy (CARE), said Monday evening his organization had received about $114,000 from CSX Railroads, its only contributor. CARE, which bills itself as a citizens group in its advertisements, was formed to oppose passage of the coal referendum.

If passed, the referendum would require the city to get voter approval before building a coal-burning power plant or obtaining electricity from coal-burning plants in neighboring counties. The referendum was spawned by protests against the city's proposal last summer to convert a natural gas-burning plant to coal.

Neff said CARE had mailed its financial statement—which contains a breakdown of how the money was raised and spent—before Friday's deadline, but the Leon County Elections Office had not received the statement from CARE by the end of business Monday. Elections Supervisor Ion Sancho said the law only requires it be postmarked by midnight Jan. 31 to meet the filing deadline. Organizations that file late are assessed a fine of $50 per day.

Although CARE filed as an organization on Jan. 28, only one week ago, it has sponsored a massive media campaign that includes radio, TV, and newspaper ads, as well as mailouts and phone solicitations.

According to Sancho, if the $114,000 figure is correct, it would easily be the largest single contribution ever for a local issue campaign. It's also far more than the combined contributions to all seven candidates vying for two city commission seats on today's ballot.

Sancho said the previous record was between $5,000 to $10,000 given by McKenzie Tank Lines to oppose the Pennys for Potholes initiative, which raised local gas taxes by 1 cent per gallon in the mid-1980s.

Contributions to candidates must be $500 or less, according to Sancho, but there is no limit on contributions for issue campaigns.

Racism is not a thing of the past at FSU

BY AMY ELLERSON
NEWS EDITOR

Susan Cadogan, an African-American junior at Florida State University, couldn't believe her ears when a student yelled "Gross!" at her as she walked through campus holding hands with her white boyfriend.

"When I first came to FSU I thought most people would be very liberal, when in fact it's not that way at all," Cadogan said Monday.

The biology major added that the incident has not been her only run-in with racism since she's been at the school. She recalled a message she saw on an elevator wall that had once read "Negroes are great," before somebody came and scribbled "Not!" over it.

"It just made me realize very quickly that I am an outsider," Cadogan said. "You cannot be black and be accepted. That's the message this campus has conveyed."

While university officials admit

Black History Month

there is still a lot of racism at FSU, they say many improvements are being made. And of all the universities in Florida, or Southeast for that matter, FSU does the best job in addressing racial relations, they say.

"I believe there is good faith that the university is trying hard," said Freddie Groomes, who monitors FSU's affirmative action programs.

According to Groomes, the university is making many attempts to recruit more minority students and faculty members. She said progress has been slow but sure.

"We need to do things now. We have to accept the fact that it's important to fully utilize all human resources," Groomes stressed.

As an example of some success, she pointed out that the university's new business and human resources deans are African American.

Nevertheless, only 3.5 percent of all faculty members are African American, and 6.7 percent of FSU's executive administrative pool is African American. On the other

The former associate dean of Florida State University's criminology school is angry about the way he was abruptly transferred over to another school, and he says racism played a part.

Daniel Georges-Abeyie said Friday he was sent a memo by the criminology school Jan. 14 telling him he would be moved to FSU's geography department. When he returned to the school the next day, he said he was met by snickering and laughter from faculty and staff.

U.N. decries U.S. policy on Haitian refugees

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UNITED NATIONS—The U.N. high commissioner for refugees said Monday she regrets the United States has decided to forcibly return Haitian refugees to their homeland, warning that the United Nations cannot monitor their safety there.

Sadako Ogata said she had sought assurances from the U.S. government, "at a very high level," that the refugees should not be forced to return until the political situation in the Caribbean nation has stabilized.

"The U.N. high commissioner for refugees regrets the decision of the government of the United States to resume the return of Haitian asylum seekers," Ogata said from her Geneva headquarters.

Ogata said there have been continuing reports of human rights abuses and violence by the military regime in Port au Prince.

"For this reason, UNHCR fears that those being returned may, in fact, be exposed to danger upon their return, and UNHCR is not in a position to monitor the safety of those being returned to Haiti," Ogata said.

The U.S. Coast Guard returned 162 Haitians to their homeland on Monday after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the government could send back those who do not qualify for political asylum.

U.S. officials have said they believed the Haitians fled their country for economic reasons and they would not be harmed when they returned.

Coast Guard cutters have picked up 15,470 Haitians on the high seas since the Sept. 29, 1992, military coup that ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. The State Department said 3,379 Haitians have been found to have claims for political asylum, and 1,402 had been brought to the United States.

U.N. decries U.S. policy on Haitian refugees

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UNITED NATIONS—The U.N. high commissioner for refugees said Monday she regrets the United States has decided to forcibly return Haitian refugees to their homeland, warning that the United Nations cannot monitor their safety there.

Sadako Ogata said she had sought assurances from the U.S. government, "at a very high level," that the refugees should not be forced to return until the political situation in the Caribbean nation has stabilized.

"The U.N. high commissioner for refugees regrets the decision of the government of the United States to resume the return of Haitian asylum seekers," Ogata said from her Geneva headquarters.

Ogata said there have been continuing reports of human rights abuses and violence by the military regime in Port au Prince.

"For this reason, UNHCR fears that those being returned may, in fact, be exposed to danger upon their return, and UNHCR is not in a position to monitor the safety of those being returned to Haiti," Ogata said.

The U.S. Coast Guard returned 162 Haitians to their homeland on Monday after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the government could send back those who do not qualify for political asylum.

U.S. officials have said they believed the Haitians fled their country for economic reasons and they would not be harmed when they returned.

Coast Guard cutters have picked up 15,470 Haitians on the high seas since the Sept. 29, 1992, military coup that ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. The State Department said 3,379 Haitians have been found to have claims for political asylum, and 1,402 had been brought to the United States.

Racism

hand, 80 percent of the campus's maintenance personnel is African American.

"I think those numbers are good when compared with other universities in the state system," Groomes said in reference to the faculty and administrative figures. "But they could be better, and I think they will be better."

University President Dale Lick echoed the same concern for more diversity among faculty and students.

"We're saying that in creating a pluralistic environment we're trying to show respect and value for differences that exist there," Lick said.

"We're trying to create an environment where racism is not wanted, desired or hopefully not there," he added.

But according to Daniel Georges-Abeyie, former assistant dean of the criminology school, the university has a long way to go before that's the case.

In the last three years he's taught at FSU, Georges-Abeyie says he has been called a "nigger" by faculty and staff in the criminology school, and has had to endure demeaning remarks about his nationality—African Caribbean—and religion, which is Baha'i.

"It's been a bizarre and ugly situation," he said last week. "I've had statements made directly to my face regarding my nationality, race and religion."

Georges-Abeyie was the school's only black faculty member before he was transferred to FSU's School of Social Sciences two weeks ago. Now that he's out of the criminology school, he says he's seriously considering filing charges with the state Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and Board of Regents.

"I've been under harassment by many of the faculty and staff for nearly three years, and it's been unabated for that period of time," Georges-Abeyie said.

Bill Jones, director of FSU's Black Studies department, said he found a note on his office door several years ago that said "Die, nigger, die." But there's not that much blatant racism on campus anymore, he said—it has instead taken on other forms.

"If you'll look around, you are not going to find a lot there. Therefore, many are going to make the erroneous conclusion that racism doesn't exist anymore or that it's on the decline," Jones said.

The powers-that-be no longer have to use race to discriminate against African Americans, he said. Instead, all they have to use is college entrance exams such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test and Graduate Record Exam to exclude African Americans from achieving power, according to Jones.

"To me, it's as widespread and prevalent as classical racism. It's not the David Duke type, which is open. It's the George Bush or Ronald Reagan type," Jones said.

He added, however, that FSU has maintained a pretty good record on addressing racial issues compared to other universities in the Southeast. Jones referred to the university's newly-adopted multicultural component as one reason.

The guideline requires students to take at least six credit hours of classes that deal with different cultures and outlooks. FSU is the only state university in Florida to have a multi-cultural requirement.

"That to me is very important. But that's not to say the problem has been solved," Jones said. "Some changes will be made, but not changes that will dismantle the system. Oppression doesn't work that way."

FSU junior Cassandra Cooper says she looks racism in the face every day. She lives on campus in Dorman hall, where she and her roommate are the only African-American residents on their floor.

"We're treated like outcasts on our own hall. The girls do not talk to us. We even get nasty stares from them," Cooper said. "It makes us feel like we're not wanted, and that to us is racism."

Bernard Johnson, president of FSU's Black Student Union, said part of the problem is there just aren't enough African Americans at FSU. The senior criminology major said he is often the only African-American student in his classes, and except for times when he took black studies courses, he has never had an African-American professor.

"It's like you're sitting there in class and you're defending your entire race," Johnson said. "The stereotype comes into play that if one black person feels that way, all black people must feel that way, and that's not necessarily true."

According to Johnson, the main goal of the BSU is to make it easier for African Americans to attend a predominantly white university. He added the group also hopes to improve the university's recruitment and retention of African Americans.

Eight percent of all full-time students at FSU are African American, while 6.8 percent of all full-time graduate students are African American, according to Groomes.

As for the university's retention rate, Pat Stith, an administrator at FSU's Center for Retention and Academic Support, said retention rates for African Americans are improving, but they are still not nearly as good as those for white students.

The retention rate for first-year African Americans is 85 percent—the highest in the country, according to Stith. But she added the university will have to wait several years to see if retention efforts hold water.

"We have had to work hard in developing the kind of environment where minority and black students want to be," Stith said. "We're beginning, I believe, to make a lot of progress."

FSU Vice President for Minority Affairs Thyria Greene said her office does numerous things to help minority students feel more comfortable at FSU and also to make students more appreciative of different cultures. Nevertheless, she said, there is a problem with racism.

"We still have a long way to go," Greene said. "And while we're experiencing racism, we still have to take care of the victims."

One way her office does that, she said, is by encouraging students to fill out discrimination report forms. But she added most students don't file reports, and on average, only five forms are filled out each year.

Just f*&%g VOTE

To vote or not to vote?

In 1992 America, the choice of the people is more times than not the latter. And the reason is rather obvious: American democracy has been hijacked by parasitical corporate interests, corrupt political consultants and political action committees. They bombard voters with corrosive, negative ad campaigns until the voters keel over in disdain.

The result: voter apathy and voter cynicism and low voter turnout.

Hopefully this won't be the case in Tallahassee today—election day—when voters can choose to re-elect or dump two city commissioners and vote yes or no on the so-called coal referendum amendment.

To be blunt, we hope all registered voters will ignore the nefarious ad campaign being run by the CSX corporation front group, in which it's actually suggested that to vote yes for the right of Tallahasseeans to have a say in city energy policy is a vote for Saddam Hussein.

This corporate feeding frenzy, so full of distortions that it borders on false advertising—and which the local media would have done well to turn away from—in essence says either stay home, or vote against your own interests.

We hope you do neither. First we urge you to vote. The stakes are high. On the coal amendment we strongly urge voters to vote YES. A yes vote means you the citizen have the right to decide via referendum whether the city can burn coal in the future.

In the commission races, the Flambeau has endorsed Oliver Hill for Seat 1 and Perny Herman for Seat 2.

What with so much at stake it would be a tragedy if predictions of a low turnout prove true. So, don't even think about it.

VOTE.

Get up, stand up

Editor:

Do you live on campus here at FSU? If so, you really need to open your eyes and see what's going on with your lives. Are you tired of overcrowded classes? Are you tired of not getting into the classes you need? Are you tired of the legislatures down the street not listening to your concerns? Due to the shortfall of revenue from the state, the Housing Department here at FSU is left with no choice but to increase the cost to live in a residence hall on campus for next year. You can expect the price to live in a residence hall for one semester to be over $1000. How can they expect us to afford an increase in housing fees while our tuition is increasing every year? With all this money being squeezed out of the students' pockets to pay for the decreasing quality of our education is totally absurd!!! We as students can not and will not take it anymore. I am strongly urging you to attend the student rally at the Civic Center today at 11 a.m. I am challenging you to stand up for your rights to a quality education. If we don't show the legislatures we students mean business this time they will continue to walk all over us another year with rising costs of tuition. If you cannot run, then walk. If you cannot walk, then crawl, but by all means, don't just sit on your DUFFS and let your right to a quality education slowly wither away.

Adam Ringhof
Director, Inter-Residence Hall Council

Therefore, I ask why were two different courses of action taken for two similar crimes. Are there two different sets of rules and regulations? One for the taxpayers and one for the governmental nobility?

This representative was accosted entering a local bar. If an FSU student was attacked entering a Tennessee Street establishment, would they call out the dogs? I think not. Why are His Royal Representative's rights seemingly much more significant than four plebian FSU students? Do I smell a bit of discrimination? Yes, and I don't need a K-9 unit to detect that!

Karen M. Martin

No justice

Editor:

Within the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice, one is taught many significant aspects of the criminal justice system and our Constitution which guarantees due process. According to a professor at FSU this term, due process entails a level of fairness which is reasonable for treatment in a particular issue. However, recently I have witnessed a situation which seemed neither just nor one in which due process was applied. Jay T. Stephens, an instructor in the school, was terminated without explanation. Students filled the classroom awaiting a lecture on criminal delinquent behavior—Stephens' area of expertise—only to hear Stephens announce his termination. Why? No one could answer. We asked one individual responsible for his termination to explain but no reason was given as we, his students, were left wondering. The level of fairness, or lack of one, left many distressed. Is it fair to Stephens, an instructor who was left to announce his termination unable to explain to his students why? Was it fair to his students, who were left angry at the termination of their eagerness to become educated by a man who understood his students and left wondering how just our School of Criminology and Criminal Justice actually is?

Laurie Generalli

Double standard

Editor:

In the Friday, Jan. 24 Cop Beat, Che Odom reported that State Representative Harry Goode had his wallet stolen. The police, upon arrival, sent a K-9 unit out to find the representative's wallet. The police department chased the thief all around Apalachee Parkway until the 'gentleman's' wallet was found.

In my dorm, on my floor, approximately $300.00 worth of books and thirty compact discs were stolen on two occasions. On the second occasion, one of the thieves, while running down the corridor, lost his hat. Both times the police were called, and they came and took a report. That's it. Why wasn't the K-9 unit sent out to find the books, even when a "calling card" with the thief's scent was left? Could it possibly be that students are not seen as equals in the eyes of the police?

Even though the FSU Police Department and the Tallahassee Police Department are two separate entities, departmental policies should be similar.

DISSENTING OPINION

Fairness is the issue here and FPIRG's waiveable fee isn't fair

BY WINSTON W. GARDNER

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

My, my. Me thinks thou dost protest too much.

I'm a member of Audubon, Sierra, 1000 Friends of Florida, Wilderness Society, World Wildlife Federation, Florida Wildlife Association, Nature Conservancy, Cousteau Society, Save the Manatee Club, National Geographic Society and the Conservation Association.

Since I've been in the Legislature, I've won three national awards and several state awards for my efforts on behalf of the environment. In 1991, I was named Legislator of the Year by the Sierra Club.

To suggest that my motivation in filing legislation to stop negative check-off of student fees to support FPIRG (or any other group for that matter) was prompted by big business is ludicrous. I go up against big business on environmental issues all the time. My record on environmental issues is very clean and well known by those on both sides.

I also believe strongly in individual rights and freedoms. I filed the legislation after representatives of FPIRG came to lobby me on the container deposit legislation several months back. After 13 years in the Legislature, I was not familiar with FPIRG (which in itself ought to say something about the organization). Frankly, I wasn't very impressed with their description of the level of participation by students.

I'm very encouraged that students want to actively participate in protecting Florida's environment, and the place to best influence that is probably where laws are made.

But that's not the issue here. A university should be a place for the free exchange of ideas and FPIRG is probably an excellent forum for that. I'm very encouraged that students want to actively participate in protecting Florida's environment, and the place to best influence that is probably where laws are made.

I do take exception though with how the fee is collected. It is not truly a voluntary fee. If it were, it would be a positive check-off. Should the unaware student be assessed the fee? Should student aid or student loans or scholarships pay the fee? Should the unaware parent pay the fee?

I believe the answer to all these questions should be no.

Last week (Jan. 23), I met with Ann Whitfield and Hank Hernandez of FPIRG. I also asked one of my staff members (a very recent FSU graduate) to attend. I must admit that her questions were a lot tougher than mine. I asked Mr. Hernandez if a positive check-off would be satisfactory and he said "no." The reason given was that a positive check-off would not generate sufficient money to properly fund the organization.

That can only mean that when the fee is truly voluntary, the number of students who volunteer to pay it isn't very large.

I guess my legislative assistant who graduate from FSU last year says it best:

"I feel that if a student wishes to contribute to an organization then I applaud their efforts to become involved. That is a decision that should be made by each individual student. Contributions are voluntary. I do not object to the efforts of the organization, what I object to is

FPIRG and Gardner can work through disagreement

Editor:

I am writing in regards to your Jan. 23 editorial in support of Florida PIRG. While we appreciate your strong support of PIRG and opposition to the Kill PIRG Bill, S. 1514, we were dismayed that you chose to attack Sen. Gardner personally and condemn the Legislature generally as part of your defense of our group.

While the Legislature certainly isn't perfect, it is the best we have and we do our best to operate within it. Sen. Gardner may have filed a bad bill, but that does not make him a "political hack" as you charge. In fact, Sen. Gardner has championed many environmental issues from Preservation 2000 to manatee protection. Florida PIRG and Sen. Gardner disagree on the Bottle Bill, but it is our goal to agree to disagree in a cordial manner. There are few people who agree on every topic. Personalizing a disagreement makes the process unpleasant and the challenge of working through differences more difficult.

We want to work through our differences with Sen. Gardner. It is our hope that we can do so. We believe he cares about the environment and should want not to defeat, but to defend the only statewide student group in Florida working to advance environmental protection. Perhaps we will never see eye to eye with him, but please give us the opportunity to try.

the fact that many students are assessed the fee beforehand and then may elect to waive the fee.

"If the fee was made to be a positive check-off instead of a negative check-off then the students will have some degree of responsibility for pursuing what they are interested in. The student should be given an option as to whether or not he or she wishes to pay this fee. If there is support with a waiveable fee then there will be support with an optional fee."

I agree. Negative check-off is not truly voluntary. If you truly supported a voluntary fee, then I think you would agree that a positive check-off is much more fair to students.

After all, isn't fairness the main issue here?

Winston W. "Bud" Gardner is president pro tempore of the state senate.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—Thousands of people in Croatia's main Serbian rebel enclave rallied Monday in support of their leader, who accused his estranged political and military patrons in Serbia of using "torture" and "threats" to try to force his consent to the deployment of U.N. peace-keepers.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina—President Carlos Menem signed a decree Monday to make available to the public secret police and government files on suspected Nazi war criminals who fled to Argentina during and after World War II.

"Argentina has hidden the truth for 40 years that everyone from all over the world wanted to know," Menem said in a ceremony in the Government House attended by diplomats, Jewish leaders, cabinet ministers, police and military authorities.

TOKYO—Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, escalating the angry rhetoric between the United States and Japan, lambasted American workers Monday, charging they lack the "work ethic" the country needs to be commercially competitive.

"Because so many American university graduates were recruited into Wall Street, the number of engineers in charge of developing goods has declined," Miyazawa told lawmakers in the Diet, Japan's parliament.

WASHINGTON—Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, of the House Banking Committee, contradicting a report by President Bush last year, said Monday his committee has evidence that dozens of U.S. firms assisted Iraq's weapons development program.

Gonzalez said the evidence was uncovered during his committee's investigation of the Italian-owned Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, which he said lent $2 billion to the Iraqi procurement network.

WASHINGTON—The Commonwealth of Independent States does not now pose a threat to world peace but, if economic reforms do not take hold there, war could erupt, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell said Monday.

The commonwealth "is still a baby in diapers," Gen. Powell told a Senate Budget Committee hearing on the 1993 defense budget proposal.

Powell defended President Bush's proposal to cut $50 billion maximum from defense spending over the next five years, saying the United States must be prepared to defend against strategic threats unknown at present but which may arise to threaten national security.

WASHINGTON—Earth's protective ozone layer is becoming depleted over populated areas of northern New England, Canada and Europe, raising concerns about heightened risk of skin cancer and other dangers, NASA researchers said Monday.

Releasing data from two NASA projects, the scientists said they observed what soon will be a new ozone hole over the Arctic, including large, populated areas of Europe and Asia. Increasing levels of ozone-depleting chemicals were found as far south as Bangor, Maine.

MILWAUKEE—A police detective testified admitted serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer killed only men to whom he was sexually attracted.

Detective Dennis Murphy, reading the remainder of Dahmer's 179-page confession into the court record, said Dahmer read from the Satanic Bible but never killed for ritualistic reasons.

Assaulted and robbed

A Tallahassee man was beat in the face with a four-foot long piece of pipe and robbed Sunday night while walking in the 500 block of Putnam Drive, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Monday.

At 8:55 Sunday, the victim passed a group of three men. One of the men, who the victim knew, asked if he had any money. When the victim replied no, the assailant began striking the victim in the face with the pipe until he was knocked to the ground. The suspect then robbed the victim.

The other two men did not participate in the robbery. The victim was able to escape to his home, and then his father took him to the hospital for treatment. The incident was reported from Tallahassee Community Hospital where the victim received treatment for several lip lacerations, bruises to his face and a chipped tooth. He was treated and released.

Escape

A man arrested for a variety of traffic offenses Monday morning escaped from TPD by climbing through the ceiling tiles of the interview room where he was left unattended, Garrett said Monday.

An officer stopped Darvin T. Koonce, 43, of 755 Wailes St., at 10:05 p.m. for weaving in the 2500 block of Holton Street. Koonce, whose license had been suspended 10 times previously, was then arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol, driving with a suspended license and unlawful display of a vehicle tag.

The suspect was allowed to sit in an interview room with one hand cuffed to a bar on the wall while officers finished their paperwork in an adjoining room.

While officers were out of the room, Koonce managed to slip his hand free of the cuff, climb up through the ceiling tiles, drop down in another part of the building and escape through a door. The building was searched and a K-9 unit was used to track the suspect but he was not located.

Woman raped

A Tallahassee woman was walking down West Tennessee Street early Sunday when a man drove up to the woman, forced her in his car, tied her up and raped her, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said Monday.

At 1:20 a.m. the suspect pulled alongside the victim and began screaming at her. He then got out of his car, forced her in the vehicle and drove to a building on West Tharpe Street.

While there he tied her up and raped her. Despite remaining tied up, the victim managed to escape her attacker by hobbling away.

A couple of men spotted the woman escaping, picked her up and took her to the Sheriff's Office. The woman was treated and released by a local hospital and an investigation is ongoing, said Simpson.

It is difficult to determine how many different ads CARE is running or how much of the $114,000 it has spent on advertising. Neff said although he filed the report, he did not have a copy with him and he did not know off the top of his head what the breakdown was.

A story in Saturday's Tallahassee Democrat reported that Art Collins, CARE's chair, had refused to discuss advertising strategy. Collins did not return repeated phone calls to his home or office Monday.

Employees of the ad firm of Long, Haymes & Carr, Inc. of Winston-Salem, N.C.—which has been retained by CARE to run the media campaign—were also unable to answer questions Monday, saying the person in charge of the campaign was in a meeting. The person did not return repeated calls.

Tom Hoppin, a CSX vice president, said Monday that his company became involved as soon as it was aware there was a group against the referendum.

"As far as I know, there was no decision to wait," he said in a telephone interview from Richmond, Va. "We don't view ourselves as coming late to the party."

Hoppin said that although CSX, which transports coal, would benefit economically from a coal plant, "We haven't stated that we're for coal generation. We're for keeping options open."

"We take a position on many issues we have no economic interest in," he added.

Hoppin said he did not know if CARE had solicited CSX for funds, or if CSX had approached CARE with an offer of support.

Neff also said he did not know who had initiated contact between CSX and CARE.

Members of the Coal Plant Referendum committee (CPR), the group which collected the 9,000 signatures necessary to get the referendum on today's ballot, said they had a variety of complaints about CARE's campaign.

"They're not a citizen group," CPR member Jack Wolff said Monday. "They're lobbyists with their own special interests."

CPR has raised $2,579 in its campaign.

CPR chair Rebecca Martin said CARE's approach was to try to scare Tallahassee with their misleading ads.

"The worst is this Saddam Hussein ad," she said Monday.

The half-page ad appears in both the Democrat and Flambeau.

"Keep Your Energy Options Open Or We May Have To Turn To Some Unreliable Sources of Power," reads the ad in large type under a picture of Hussein.

And continuing in smaller type it says, "Tallahassee already depends on foreign countries for some of its gas supplies. And who's holding on to much of the world's natural gas reserves? Countries like Russia. Algeria. Iraq. If the referendum passes, we'll become even more dependent on foreign energy sources."

But according to Pete Koikos, Tallahassee utilities fuel procurement officer, no one knows where Tallahassee's natural gas comes from because it is purchased from a variety of sources.

Koikos said all of Tallahassee's eight natural gas suppliers are American, but some buy their gas from other sources and then re-sell it, making it difficult to determine the point of origin for the gas.

CPR member Bill Bilkovich, a pollution prevention engineer with the state, says his research shows that the U.S. meets almost all demand for natural gas through domestic sources. He pointed to U.S. Department of Energy figures which give the following breakdown for all U.S. natural gas consumption: 91.6 percent is produced domestically, 8 percent is imported from Canada, and 0.4 percent is imported from Algeria in the form of liquified natural gas.

Bilkovich says the ad is a perfect example of CARE's "last-minute lies campaign."

Several CARE ads claim that having coal as an option has saved Tallahassee over $40 million by allowing the city to negotiate better contracts with gas suppliers. But CPR contends the savings have nothing to do with a coal plant and that the city actually wasted $3.6 million for a project that is now postponed.

"It's important people know that the CFB coal plant has not been cancelled, just postponed," Green added, pointing out that all it takes is three of five commissioners to approve a coal plant unless the referendum is passed.

Candidates' flings no big deal, survey says

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

NEW YORK—A survey of 300 women around the country indicates 62 percent would forgive a candidate's marital infidelities if they agreed with him on major issues, Redbook magazine reported Monday.

The survey showed tolerance toward extra-marital adventures ran toward the younger women, with 77 percent of the 18 to 24 age group willing to forgive, compared with 55 percent of those over 55.

However, 65 percent of those questioned said politicians should be held to higher moral standards than the average American.

Asked if they believed Gennifer Flowers' story of having an affair with Democratic presidential candidate Gov. Bill Clinton, 19 percent said yes, 38 percent said no, and 43 percent said they were undecided.

"When I came back on the 15th, I faced a lot of demeaning behavior," he added. "I've been under harassment by many of the faculty and staff for nearly three years . . . and I think it's been on the basis of my race, religion and nationality."

Georges-Abeyie's religion is Baha'i, which he said many faculty and staff confused with Islam. His nationality is African Caribbean.

Georges-Abeyie came to FSU three years ago from California State University at Bakersfield, where he was chair of the criminal justice department. Since then, he has received recognition as the teacher of the year at FSU's Panama City branch.

University Provost Robert Glidden said he met with Georges-Abeyie Friday afternoon because the professor was upset with rumors in the criminology school that he had been fired instead of transferred.

"That's just not true," Glidden said Sunday. "He is a very good teacher and a valuable researcher."

Georges-Abeyie will take over as associate dean for the geography department which, according to Glidden, needs him more than the newly reorganized School of Criminology and Criminal Justice.

"We're going through structural changes (in criminology) and we're overlaid with administrators," Glidden said. "His real discipline is geography. And we are aiming toward having a Ph.D in geography, for which we need more faculty if we're going to do it."

Glidden added he has heard Georges-Abeyie's claims of racism in the criminology school. He said the university is looking into the matter.

"I'm not at all sure if that's true. I'm not saying it's not true because it may be," Glidden said. "We have had difficulty in the past with that in the department, and it's disturbing to say the least."

According to Glidden, a commission was set up a while back to look into allegations of racism in the criminology school, and its results will be released at a faculty senate meeting this month.

Interim Dean of the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice Charles Cnudde did not return calls to his office Monday.

Georges-Abeyie said he is seriously considering filing charges with the state Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and Board of Regents. For that reason he would not name members of the staff and faculty that he says harassed him, and he would not go into detail of specific incidences.

Georges-Abeyie said he is also considering leaving FSU.

But Glidden said the university will do what it can to keep him.

"He has not been comfortable there, and we don't want to lose him from this university. We really made the change to keep him at FSU," Glidden said.

So How Come We're Voting To Get Rid Of One?

Last year, in an independent survey, nine out of ten people in Tallahassee agreed that depending on one energy source is a bad idea. But if the referendum passes, the only option we'll have is gas, and that's not enough.

Having the coal option saved the city of Tallahassee over 40 million dollars last year in negotiations with gas suppliers. It pays to keep our minds open, because we can keep our options open.

Local boy makes gumbo

BY ANDREW ARVESON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Local legend and gourmand extraordinaire Bill Wharton so delights audiences with his special brand of blues guitar and spicy sauce that he's featured in this month's GQ. In this photo, he delights a Downunder crowd by demonstrating the finer points of creating cajun cuisine.

He picks up the phone and speaks in a voice at once slick and gravelly, a southern voice, the voice of a Romeo porcupine. It is Bill Wharton, Tallahassee's maestro of blues and hot sauce, lauded as Godlike in February's issue of Gentleman's Quarterly magazine.

I wanted to interview Wharton, because while the GQ article is a grandiloquent hymn of praise, it left out some of the important questions readers want to know.

"Who's your tailor?" I ask, just to set the record straight.

"I don't really have one."

"What are your pick colors for spring?"

"Chartreuse and purple. Bright purple," Wharton laughs. His laugh sounds like catfish playing in a tidal pool.

Wharton's appearance has certainly improved sales of GQ around town. "I was looking for another copy and I can't seem to find one anywhere," His Sauciness reveals. It's true. Whenever there is any media coverage of our fair Hamlet, Tallahasseeans go wild.

Folks around here seem to have an inferiority complex because we're capital in name only, Miami being the cultural capital and Disney World the economic center of the state. Any attention helps to counteract our feeling of living in the boondocks.

The Sauce Boss agrees.

"Well it is a small town, even though it's had its growing pains lately. Everyone knows everyone else. . . . (Compared to New York) it's sort of a cultural wasteland, but it has its own charm. It allows you to work on your own inner thing. I've lived here for years and I love it."

Wharton is Tallahassee's hardiest of hybrids. His blues guitar and lusty Liquid Summer Hot Sauce have spread his fame around the world. The sauce is sold everywhere from the Virgin Islands to Boston to California. "It even showed up in Kuwait during Desert Storm. It's the Smart Sauce."

His guitar is getting even wider attention. His first album The Sauce Boss got rave reviews in Billboard, Mademoiselle, and even the French magazine Le Monde De La Musique, which gave it a four-star (highest) rating.

"Being in GQ feels natty," Wharton says. "This year is going to see

Can you separate fact from fiction? Find out at Finale's Readings tonight

BY THOM CHESNEY
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Realists beware. Separating the real from the imagined is next to impossible in the poetry of Donna Long and the memoir/fiction/poetry (what's in a name anyway?) of Sheila Taylor. Both will be featured in tonight's edition of the Finale's Poetry Reading series.

Long's life has taken her from her New Hampshire birthplace around the fringe states of the U.S.—no Midwest here—and landed her in Tally for a stint as a Master's in English student. She's not into "I" poems, but most of what she writes is a twist on or a skewed view of her personal and family relationships.

Long says Florida State University English Professor David Kirby sees her poetry's strength as its "psychological realism," a term that's difficult to define but sounds really good.

"I guess I write poetry because it's a more difficult form than fiction for me, but fiction writers will be upset about that," she said. "Nonetheless, I came to FSU wanting to work and study in whatever challenged me the most." The words sometimes come to her while she's cycling or cooking.

Her list for tonight has been narrowed to a dozen poems from which a handful will make the final cut. She plans to read those that allow her to "step out of herself" and consider couples' and familial relationships without having any fingers pointed at her.

If Long's praise is accurate, then English and Women's Studies professor Sheila Taylor is the headliner on tonight's bill. Her name may sound familiar, because Taylor has tried out nearly everything she has written in front of a Finale's audience.

"It's like trying out new recipes on old friends, and there's a real sense of support and solidarity there," she said. "When I'm not reading, I go to hear the others. I get inspiration and ideas from them."

Taylor has had no shortage of either for her most recent work. Tonight she'll be sharing a mixture of inseparable fact, fiction and a smattering of poetry that has become an

Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown No Looking Back Alligator Records

"All you guitar players grab what you can and run!"—Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown.

Since the late '40s, when he began playing professionally, "Gatemouth" Brown has successfully avoided allowing his music to be categorized. Brown, 67, has never limited himself musically and he's not ready to start now.

"Nobody forces me to play nothing," Brown said, after his sold-out show at the Club Downunder last Saturday night. "A man's supposed to be an individual."

The appropriately titled No Looking Back features Brown (on vocals, guitar and fiddle), his powerful touring band, an added horn section and a guest appearance by folk star Michelle Shocked. Brown and Jim Bateman were the album's co-producers.

The album's eclectic mix of tunes ranges from traditional blues ("Better off with the Blues"), to swing ("Straighten Up"), to jazz (dig Duke Ellington's classic "C-Jam Blues").

And "I Will be Your Friend," the slow ballad Brown croons with Shocked, has a distinct country & western feel. It's not the first time the unlikely pair has teamed up. Brown sang on Shocked's version of the standard "Frankie and Johnny."

Singing country comes easy to Brown. He's long been known as one of America's most unique roots-oriented (that's not a label is it?) musicians—using blues, jazz, zydeco, big band, cajun and bluegrass in his repertoire. He's appeared on "Hee Haw" and "Austin City Limits." But his country influence comes from farther back.

"Before I ever played blues and jazz, I played country, cajun and bluegrass," Brown said. "My dad played 'em all, man. Clarence Brown Sr., they called him Fiddlin' Tom for short."

For laughs, check out "Alligator Eating Dog."

"Gatemouth" Brown

Brown closed his Saturday night show with this hilarious blues number. But on the recorded version you get a real mutt (for the record, sax player Bill Samuel's pooch).

The anti-drug "Dope" may be the only cut on his new album with an overtly serious message. But Brown said he feels it's important that each of his songs have a positive, healing effect on all people.

"I'm not a minister . . . I hate church. I'm a minister in my music," Brown said. "I'm a minister for the world. People don't come out to hear how bad you've lived. They come out to see how good you're making it."

No Looking Back proves that after 45 years in music, Brown's still making it just fine.

Give students the good seats babeee!

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

ESPN's Dick Vitale mentioned Thursday how unfair he thought it was for Florida State officials to seat students in the Civic Center's upper-sections while alumni/boosters fill the courtside seats (sometimes). And Dick's not the only one who's pissed.

Several callers on WTNT's post-game show (1-800-67N-OLE) expressed anger that most of the choice seats go to those apparently more interested in FSU football-recruiting than in the fact that Kennedy's boys are burning up the ACC.

"I'd just like to know why we can't get any fan support from the alumni!" said one caller Saturday. "Us students were down there all day waiting (for good seats). And we can't get those alumni, sitting right at midcourt, in the game unless we're playing somebody like Duke."

Having the Pep Band play less "China Grove" and "I Can't Get No Satisfaction" and a bit more of the Seminole War Chant just might breathe some life into the courtside crowd. The chant seems to be the one aural stimulus that pulls 'em out of their bourbon-induced trance.

Need another reason to hate the University of Florida?

Ex-New York Yankee czar George M. Steinbrenner is a member of the Bull Gator Club, a booster group whose members each donate $10,000-plus to Florida athletics annually.

Steinbrenner was in Gainesville Jan. 27 where he saw Florida State guard Sam Cassell shed Gator defender Stacey Poole and fire up a last-second shot that beat the Gators 68-67.

Apparently there's no truth in the rumor that a despondent and tequila-scorched Steinbrenner, realizing the NCAA would never let him fire Poole or Gator coach Lon Kruger, canned Billy Martin posthumously.

Country singer Miel Tillis is also in the Bull Gator Club. G-G-G-Go G-G-G-Gators.

Steinbrenner (l) and Tillis give I-I-lotsa m-m-money to the Gator athletic program. Dig that hair George.

Was I the only one who saw Duke forward Brian Davis giving the Civic Center crowd the finger after the FSU/Duke game Thursday night? That hurt. Davis better be glad he's a senior, 'cause if he comes back to Tallahassee, I'll do everything in my power to make sure fans abuse him worse than a lonely prisoner's palm.

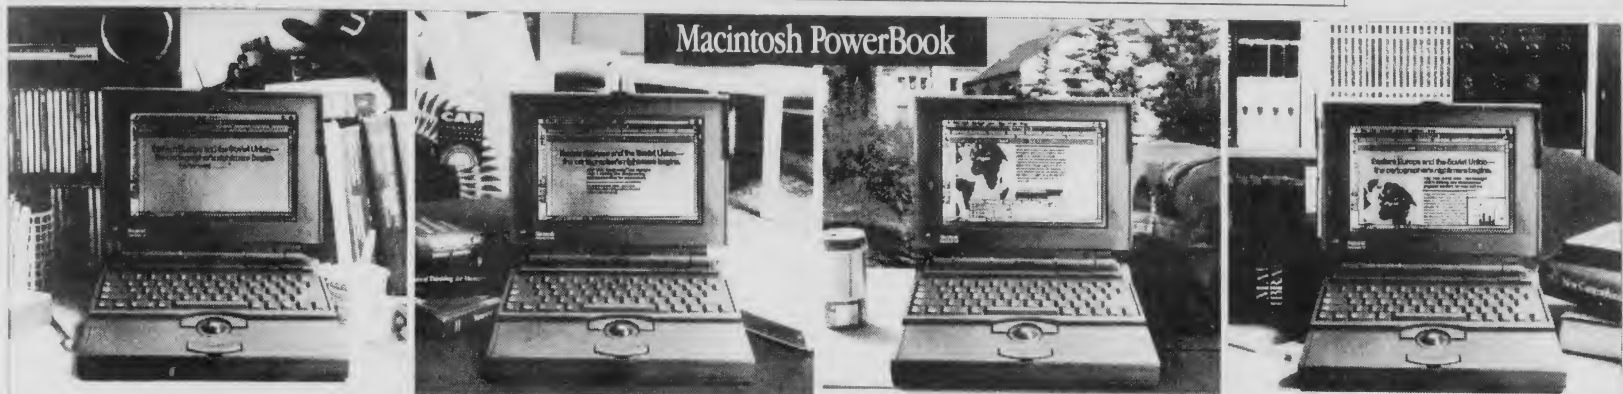

More on the Atlantic Coast Conference leader: Limiting the offensive output of Bobby Hurley and Christian Laettner is always a priority for opposing teams and, although FSU lost, they defended the two fairly well. "Pee-Wee" and

Sometimes to do your best work, all you need is a change of scenery.

The new Apple® Macintosh® PowerBook™ computers give you the freedom to work anywhere you want, any time you want.

They're small enough to fit in a book bag. Powerful enough for your toughest class assignments. And they're affordable, too.

They run virtually all Macintosh software. And can run for up to three hours on a single battery charge.

They can be expanded to up to 8MB of memory and come standard with plenty of hard disk storage.

The Apple SuperDrive™ disk drive reads from and writes to Macintosh and MS-DOS formatted disks—allowing you to exchange information easily with almost any other kind of computer. Add SoftPC and you can run MS-DOS programs, too.

With built-in AppleTalk® Remote Access software and a modem, you can use a PowerBook to retrieve files from your project partner's Macintosh without leaving the library. Or log on to the library computer without leaving your room.

There are three models from which to choose the PowerBook 100 is the lightest, most affordable PowerBook, the PowerBook 140 offers higher performance and a built-in Apple SuperDrive disk drive, and the PowerBook 170 is the highest-performance PowerBook. All three offer bright, adjustable backlit screens and the simplicity of Apple's latest system software innovation—System 7. And their ergonomic, all-in-one design makes them comfortable to use—no matter where you do your best work.

See the PowerBook computers at our place today, and while you're in, be sure to ask us for details about the Apple Computer Loan.

There's no telling where a PowerBook could take you.

It's the next thing.

imaginative memoir from the point of view of a sophisticated child—one who rummages through her mother's closet in one chapter and moves on to her father's in the next.

Taylor claims Virginia Woolf and E.M. Forster as her literary "parents" and has three novels and a collection of poetry already on the shelves. Tonight she'll push aside the classroom podium in favor of a barstool on the Finale's stage, while her fairy godmother, Jane Austen, looks and listens in with the rest of the crowd.

Literary critics and other merchants of the mind are invited to come deconstruct the relationship between Long's and Taylor's writing and the cheap beer prices at Finale's at 8. Come early, though; the big round tables go fast.

an amazing turn of events. We're growing more peppers because we're anticipating increased demand for the sauce. Things are really gonna be cooking. We just got a new LP in the can, and there's lots of other projects. We'll be doing a lot of traveling, touring the Northwest, the Midwest. This year is going to be good for all our business ventures."

Wharton leaves this Friday with his Ingredients for said Northeastern tour. He says he'll check back with us when he comes home.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1992

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You finally break free from longtime bonds. Spring brings an exciting career change or business expansion. You can expect to travel or relocate by midsummer. A casual flirtation could develop into a lasting passion. Focus on creative projects in the fall. New alliances lead to greater financial security next November. Check the references of anyone you hire to work in your home.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Vice President Dan Quayle, aviator Charles Lindbergh, comedian
David Brenner, rock singer
Alice Cooper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for meditating on the future.
Get to the heart of a matter, even if you may not like what you find out. A young person teaches you new tricks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Artistic pursuits should prove very rewarding.
Do your best to support someone in need of encouragement. Tomorrow brings several important choices. Be a decision maker.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be aware of possible errors in a business report or billing statement. It is essential you correct any mistakes as soon as possible. Avoid repeating gossip or others could point an accusing finger your way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A health matter may require immediate attention.
Do whatever is necessary to protect yourself. Conferences held during overnight hours will result in new cooperation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Curb your impatience with your work associates today. Losing your temper will accomplish nothing. Travel is best postponed. Review your options if you feel that you are spinning your wheels.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cancellations could work in your favor in the long run. An out-of-court settlement is possible. Your keen attention to detail pays off. Protect your health. Keep a dental or medical appointment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let other people take the lead in both business and romance today. This is not a good time to negotiate agreements or sign contracts.
Sit back quietly and watch your associates maneuver.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Career progress comes when you act more selfreliant. Show those in power what you can accomplish. Constructive changes are in the wind. Family and friends are your biggest boosters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):
Forward motion is essential this time.
You can no longer postpone acting on recently made decisions. A child enters your life with a bang. Spruce up your living quarters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Fate places you in the driver's seat at work.
Adult offspring cannot be pushed into being successful. Be as patient as possible with them. Take a break and visit friends tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid dwelling on your emotional state today.
Plunge into work and creativity! Getting the job done will boost your spirits. Have a heart-to-heart talk with your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your career regains its momentum. An influential person is in your corner. Think twice about attempting to hide the truth from your family. You will suffer if rumors spread.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are creative, inventive and community-minded. Generous to a fault, these Aquarians like to think the best of everyone. Tolerant and forgiving, they invariably give people a second chance. Although many of these Aquarians work hard to gain power, they use their influence to help others. They pride themselves on being good judges of character and their trust is usually rewarded. Their chances for a long and happy marriage are excellent.

Witness alleges Tyson had 'octopus' arms at pageant

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL.
INDIANAPOLIS--A Miss Black America contestant testified Monday former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson was an "octopus" during a beauty pageant rehearsal last summer, constantly grabbing at the competitors.

Stacy Murphy, who struck up a friendship with the 18-year-old woman who has accused Tyson of rape, said the complainant was dazed and rambled about the alleged attack a few hours after it occurred.

Tyson, 25, is charged in Marion County Superior Court with rape, confinement and criminal deviate conduct for the alleged attack early last July 19 in his Canterbury Hotel room. If the nine-man, three-woman jury convicts the fighter, he faces up to 63 years in prison.

Lead prosecutor Greg Garrison said after Monday's session he expects to rest his case Tuesday.

In the fourth day of testimony, Murphy said the accuser's demeanor was quite different at mid-morning July 19 than it had been previously during the weeklong pageant preparation.

"People say a look says so much. This look told it all," Murphy said. "She didn't even look like herself. It wasn't her. She was like a zombie. That's when I realized she was hurt."

Another contestant, Charrisse Nelson of Hyattsville, Md., also noticed the change in the accuser's behavior in a conversation late July 19.

"I was with Mike last night," Nelson recalled the accuser as saying. "I said, 'Mike who?' She said, 'Mike Tyson.' I said, 'Oh.' She said, 'No, I was with him and he raped me.'"

"She acted as if it was a dream and she was waiting for it to be over and somebody would wake her up."

Nelson, in a combative exchange with defense attorney F. Lane Heard, said she immediately urged the accuser to press charges.

Nelson testified she objected to Tyson's behavior from the time he arrived at a pageant rehearsal July 18, where he met most of the contestants. Nelson said when she posed for a picture with Tyson, he grabbed her hip and she objected.

"He had his hand around my waist and he squeezed a little bit," Nelson said. "I said, 'Stop that,' and he did."

"He was like an octopus (at the rehearsal)," Murphy said. "He was feeling one girl's behind while drawing another close to him."

Also Monday, the Indianapolis police detective who spearheaded the rape investigation reluctantly admitted he told the accuser to alter the outfit she was wearing at the time of the alleged attack.

Detective Thomas Kuzmik, under cross-examination by lead defense attorney Vincent Fuller, said he told the accuser and her father to cut sequins from the outfit to see if they matched a sequin Kuzmik found on the floor in Tyson's room at the Canterbury Hotel.

Kuzmik testified he thought it was owned by a friend of the accuser, and the accuser did not want to tell her friend about the alleged attack.

Police later obtained the outfit, which was presented as evidence.

"Meat" both shot below their season average.

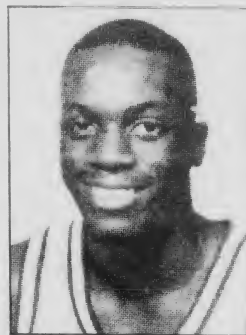

In recent, totally un-related hockey news, a bunch of white guys punched each other.

The Seminole lineup is sadly lacking in decent nicknames. Vitale, however, did his part Thursday night. After a first-half slam by 6-3 Chuck Graham, Vitale squawked, "The Skywalker, the Highrider, the Elevator—Mr. Graham!"

Take your pick.

You've got to see it to believe it.

3,000 students protest education cuts at Capitol

See commentary, page 9

BY RAJU CHEBIUM
STAFF WRITER

It was kind of like a giant pep rally—except the participants were furious.

An enraged crowd of approximately 3,000 students descended upon the Capitol Tuesday to lash out at the Florida Legislature's proposal to cut another $44 million from state universities.

"No more cuts!" the students roared again and again in unison as they marched three blocks from the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center to the Capitol.

The rally, attended by students from as far away as Miami, drew appearances from a number of government and university officials, including Gov. Lawton Chiles and State University System Chancellor Charlie Reed. Both joined students in wearing t-shirts that read "We're off our duffs—now it's their turn."

The t-shirt slogan captured the mood of the protesters, who demanded that state lawmakers provide more funding for higher education during the current session.

"We are sick of the government. We need to lobby for tax reform," Jeanne Belin, a Florida State University student senator, said before marching to the Capitol.

"It doesn't take a scientist or an engineer to know that 125 students are not learning as much as a class of 25 students would," said Leslie Jorgenson, an FSU English student.

Students didn't mince words when it came to signs, either. Among those seen popping up in the crowd were "Don't up ours (tuition) ... Up yours," and "Ha, Ha, your children will be stupid."

The plan at the protest rally was to march to the Capitol in a collective show of anger and meet legislators to demand money for the state's nine public universities. Organized by the Florida Student Association—a student-run lobbying group—it began at the Civic Center at 11 a.m.

Tracey Newman, FSA's chief lobbyist, estimated approximately 3,000 students representing all nine state universities attended the rally.

Florida A&M University students did not march from the Civic Center, but instead proceeded from the FAMU campus to the Capitol.

Despite the turnout, once the rally broke up the event disintegrated into chaos, many students said.

"Half the people out here don't know what they're doing," said Angelique Grant, a Florida A&M University student. "I hope (the rally is) not a waste of time. The turnout outside was good, but when we entered the (Capitol), we didn't know what to do."

Many students said they were unable to talk to the legislators from their home districts. A few students who spoke to lawmakers complained legislators hemmed and hawed and dismissed them with vague answers.

"They want to say they're for you, but you wouldn't know from their actions," said Terry McCue, a University of Central Florida Student who said he spoke to Sen. Quillian S. Yancey, a Democrat from Lakeland.

"I didn't get straight answers. He answered

A squeaker, a walk and a runoff were the results of Tuesday's city elections, as 34 percent of Tallahassee's registered voters turned out to dump one incumbent city commissioner, force a second into another election and overwhelmingly approve a referendum requiring the city to get citizen approval before building a coal plant.

In the City Commission Seat 2 race, challenger Penny Herman upset two term incumbent Jack McLean by only 310 votes out of 20,184 votes cast, a victory of only 1.5 percent.

And in the crowded City Commission Seat 1, incumbent Steve Meisburg, who got 43 percent of the votes, was forced into a runoff with challenger Dan McDaniel, who came in second out of five candidates with 23 percent.

Frances Powell placed third with 18 percent, while John Gibby and Oliver Hill trailed far behind with 8 percent each.

The runoff election, which will be held Feb. 25, is required because no candidate received a majority of the 19,893 votes cast.

The coal plant referendum was approved by a better than two to one

Grocers dig what the prez is doing

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

ORLANDO—President Bush, stung by criticism from outspoken Democratic governors, traveled to Florida Tuesday where grocers cheered his embattled plan to rescue the economy.

"You don't have to be a rocket scientist to understand how" the program would work, Bush declared. "You just have to stick with the basics. I've proposed a common sense, comprehensive action plan."

At the White House Monday, Democratic governors ripped the proposal. They charged that a series of business incentives and tax breaks would favor the rich, were rife with gimmicks and would create a "sewer of debt."

"I know my plan will work," the president countered in addressing the 10th annual convention of the 2,500-member National Grocers Association. "I need your help."

He got it with repeated applause as well as an endorsement and a pledge.

The administration felt Bush had become the victim of a snipe attack by Democratic governors during their meeting with the president at the White House Monday. Following remarks by Bush touting the program, the governors insisted that the news media be permitted to stay in the room for their stinging review.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One Tuesday, "The easiest and cheapest trick in the world is to be rude to the president to try to get in the news."

Deputy chief of staff Henson Moore, also traveling with Bush, said: "Just let it be clear, by God, we don't think the president's economic program is a gimmick."

With Bush's subordinates lashing out, the president took the high road Tuesday telling reporters: "I have no hard feelings" but "I don't think that the criticism is valid, obviously. I don't think its resonating."

CARACAS, Venezuela—Rebel paratroopers attacked the presidential palace in a coup attempt Tuesday but were beaten back by loyal troops in an intense firefight. The leader of the uprising later admitted failure and urged his confederates to surrender.

The rebels seized two military airports in the Caracas area and took at least partial control in Maracaibo, the country's second largest city 400 miles west of Caracas, and Valencia, about 90 miles outside the capital, air force sources said.

BELGRADE—Politicians from Croatia's main rebel Serbian enclave called Tuesday for the resignation of its hardline leader for rejecting a plan for the deployment of a U.N. peace-keeping force, and said his feud with Serbia over the proposal could ignite "fratricide" between Serbs.

"Milan Babic has humiliated the ... people of Krajina. He created a split between the people living there and the motherland of the Serbs," said Jovan Opacic, an economist and a founder of the enclave's Serbian Democratic Party (SDP).

MOSCOW—American environmentalists testified Tuesday before the Russian Parliament and then stalked the halls of the Russian White House lobbying to protect the wild Chukotka Peninsula, which reaches across the Bering Strait almost to Alaska.

Lobbying the Russian Parliament just as he might the American Congress, National Audubon Society President Peter Berle boasted a breakthrough in environmental politics, with what he said was the first such Western lobbying effort before the Russian government.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland—A suspended policeman opened fire Tuesday at the Belfast offices of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, killing three people and wounding two others, then drove to a remote area where he shot himself, officials said.

The attack came as Irish Republican President Mary Robinson was making a goodwill visit to the British-ruled province and thousands of Protestant and Catholic workers held a rally in the city center, calling for an end to sectarian violence.

MEXICO CITY—Mexico takes the next step toward a planned free-trade accord with a politically stabilized Central America during a trade summit this week but it is the U.S. market the war-ravaged region is after, analysts said Tuesday.

"I think this is a solidarity gesture on the part of Mexico toward Central America," said Michael E. Conroy, director of Latin American economic studies at the University of Texas at Austin.

WASHINGTON—In sharp contrast to last year's battle with President Bush, Congress moved quickly Tuesday to give bipartisan approval to a bill extending unemployment benefits for jobless Americans.

The House passed the bill on a 404-8 vote and the Senate was expected to quickly follow suit, sending the measure on to the White House for Bush's promised signature.

WASHINGTON—The Senate, blocked from acting on a far-reaching bill to set the nation's energy policy well into the next century, agreed Tuesday to consider a stripped-down bill that the bars drilling for oil in the pristine areas of Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee and a strong backer of exploration in ANWR, said the provision was dropped "not out of a lack of conviction (but) a recognition that it cannot pass."

Readers' page Put Duke on ballot

Editor:

Not only should David Duke be placed on the Republican ballot for the presidential primary in Florida, he should be placed on every state ballot in the country.

This would not give Duke an opportunity to win the presidency or occlude any other candidate from winning. This isn't the purpose and is also impossible. Duke campaigned for the presidency in 1988 and failed miserably. But allowing Duke to be placed on the ballots would serve as an indicator. His collected votes would respectively gauge the political ideology in Florida and America. Bigotry and racism are inevitable and the attitudes must be dealt with accordingly and at all times. Unless there is a cross burning, riot or some other obvious indication of bigotry, racism is sometimes invisible and therefore cannot be dealt with.

Thanks Flambeau

Editor:

I'd like to thank the Flambeau for its non-partisan but rather opinionated writing. Too many times in our society, newspapers around the country are too concerned with pleasing advertisers to make a difference with their writing. The Flambeau, although obviously aware of the need for advertisement to stay financially sound, has not let the capitalistic and greedy tendencies of businessmen compromise journalistic integrity. There was once a time when newspapers were the vehicles by which public debate was exercised. But with the coming of the Industrial Revolution and urbanization, communities became apathetic to political issues and debate, and the newspaper's role as instigator became the role of informant. It feels good to know that at least there is one newspaper that can engage in public debate and still maintain its rapport with advertisers. Thanks for having the balls to print D.K. Roberts and Mary Jane Ryals. Maybe the others will realize what freedom of the press really means and stop bowing down to pressure from those influences that dangle the green in their faces to make them print what they want to read.

Too much hype

Editor:

After watching the trial involving William Kennedy Smith, I have had a hard time with the fact that this particular trial got so much more publicity than any other rape trial. Just because one of the persons involved had a famous name, the trial became more important than any other case of the same nature. In the long run, this extensive media coverage led to an unfair trial because people were too influenced by all of the hype. Nobody knows what happened exactly except for the parties involved but many opinions were strongly formed by "false" publicity. The question that I would like to ask is—why wasn't the case of the man who attacked and raped a woman behind Denny's televised on national television. Was it not important enough? Maybe if one is bored and flips through the back pages of the local newspaper, he might find a few lines about such an everyday rape trial. Since I am from West Palm Beach, where the alleged rape took place, I was exposed to much more publicity than the average person. There were T-shirts, jokes and articles all over town and the newspapers. People were so affected by the publicity in my hometown, they stopped going to the bars that Smith went to the night of the incident. Something as serious as the verdict of a rape trial should not be judged by the names of the persons involved; neither should the question of the trial being televised. If one rape trial is going to be televised nationally, then every rape trial should also be televised nationally.

Slave to the polls

Editor:

Well, a year has passed and not much has changed in the Mideast. That is, except that most U.S. troops were pulled out of the area hastily after Jan. 16, 1991. This was George Bush's attempt to gain popularity by saving American lives instead of finishing the war. And now Iraq, tattered by our bombs and embargo, is still under the cruel leadership of Saddam Hussein. Think of all the people who have died in Iraq because the U.S. failed to stop a madman.

The president had to know it was a mistake to end the war without stopping Saddam. But he would rather win the votes of American people than win the war in the Gulf. Even Gen. Schwarzkopf knew the mistake Bush was making. He was possibly more popular than Bush right after the war, and could have had almost any position in Washington. But instead he resigned upon returning to America. He knew the consequences of Bush's decision and wanted out of the whole deal.

Yes, another few weeks of fighting and we could have saved the Iraqi people a year's worth of troubles. But now they continue to be repressed by a maniacal dictator. It's time the politicians stop doing what is best for their career and start doing what is best for the people of this country and the world.

Speak from ignorance

Editor:

The critics of State Attorney Willie Meggs' action concerning pornographic videos are reacting by emotion instead of knowledge. They speak from ignorance of the law and ignorance of what the state attorney's responsibility is to uphold that law.

Florida law concerning obscenity is very clear. Obscene material, in any form, is not, and never has fallen under the protection of First Amendment rights. Several cases ruled upon by the U.S. Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Florida support that point of view.

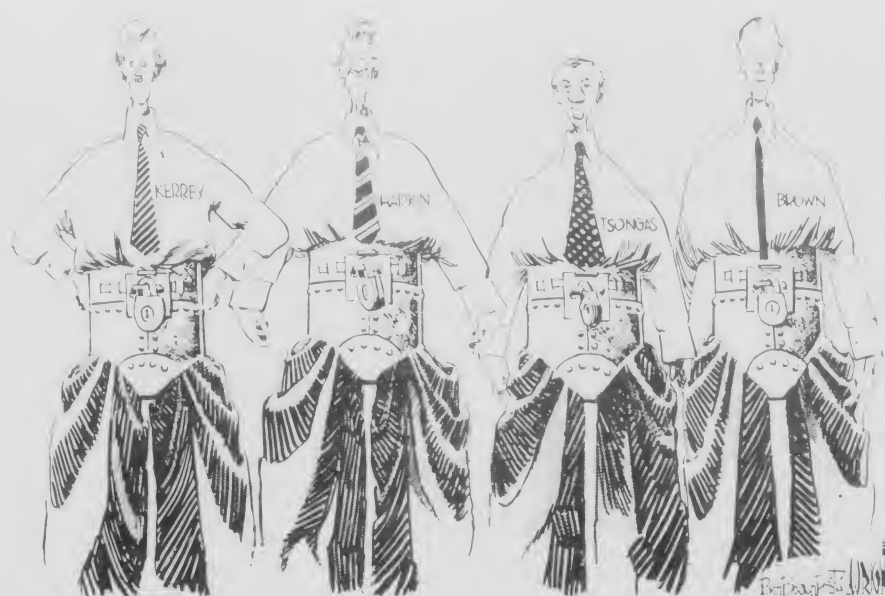

In addition, Florida statute is very clear that law enforcement personnel are to "vigorously" investigate and prosecute violation of obscenity laws. Our state attorney, Willie Meggs, is constitutionally bound and sworn to uphold the Florida statutes.

If the critics would take the time to educate themselves on this issue, they would find that Willie Meggs actually gave the video store owners the benefit of the doubt by sending the correspondence in question. He could have simply prosecuted the considered violations without the correspondence. If the critics would take the time to get a copy of the correspondence in question, they would realize it is neither intimidating nor threatening.

As a final point, I would like to say that the American Family Association has had a chapter in Tallahassee since 1985, with a current membership of over 400 people. The complaint was filed by the state executive director, David Cannon, on behalf of the local chapter. The American Family Association is dedicated to upholding traditional family values of morality and decency. Values that have been proven to positively enhance the health and well being of the entire community.

Readers' page Put Duke on ballot

Editor:

Not only should David Duke be placed on the Republican ballot for the presidential primary in Florida, he should be placed on every state ballot in the country.

This would not give Duke an opportunity to win the presidency or occlude any other candidate from winning. This isn't the purpose and is also impossible. Duke campaigned for the presidency in 1988 and failed miserably. But allowing Duke to be placed on the ballots would serve as an indicator. His collected votes would respectively gauge the political ideology in Florida and America. Bigotry and racism are inevitable and the attitudes must be dealt with accordingly and at all times. Unless there is a cross burning, riot or some other obvious indication of bigotry, racism is sometimes invisible and therefore cannot be dealt with.

Thanks Flambeau

Editor:

I'd like to thank the Flambeau for its non-partisan but rather opinionated writing. Too many times in our society, newspapers around the country are too concerned with pleasing advertisers to make a difference with their writing. The Flambeau, although obviously aware of the need for advertisement to stay financially sound, has not let the capitalistic and greedy tendencies of businessmen compromise journalistic integrity. There was once a time when newspapers were the vehicles by which public debate was exercised. But with the coming of the Industrial Revolution and urbanization, communities became apathetic to political issues and debate, and the newspaper's role as instigator became the role of informant. It feels good to know that at least there is one newspaper that can engage in public debate and still maintain its rapport with advertisers. Thanks for having the balls to print D.K. Roberts and Mary Jane Ryals. Maybe the others will realize what freedom of the press really means and stop bowing down to pressure from those influences that dangle the green in their faces to make them print what they want to read.

Too much hype

Editor:

After watching the trial involving William Kennedy Smith, I have had a hard time with the fact that this particular trial got so much more publicity than any other rape trial. Just because one of the persons involved had a famous name, the trial became more important than any other case of the same nature. In the long run, this extensive media coverage led to an unfair trial because people were too influenced by all of the hype. Nobody knows what happened exactly except for the parties involved but many opinions were strongly formed by "false" publicity. The question that I would like to ask is—why wasn't the case of the man who attacked and raped a woman behind Denny's televised on national television. Was it not important enough? Maybe if one is bored and flips through the back pages of the local newspaper, he might find a few lines about such an everyday rape trial. Since I am from West Palm Beach, where the alleged rape took place, I was exposed to much more publicity than the average person. There were T-shirts, jokes and articles all over town and the newspapers. People were so affected by the publicity in my hometown, they stopped going to the bars that Smith went to the night of the incident. Something as serious as the verdict of a rape trial should not be judged by the names of the persons involved; neither should the question of the trial being televised. If one rape trial is going to be televised nationally, then every rape trial should also be televised nationally.

Slave to the polls

Editor:

Well, a year has passed and not much has changed in the Mideast. That is, except that most U.S. troops were pulled out of the area hastily after Jan. 16, 1991. This was George Bush's attempt to gain popularity by saving American lives instead of finishing the war. And now Iraq, tattered by our bombs and embargo, is still under the cruel leadership of Saddam Hussein. Think of all the people who have died in Iraq because the U.S. failed to stop a madman.

The president had to know it was a mistake to end the war without stopping Saddam. But he would rather win the votes of American people than win the war in the Gulf. Even Gen. Schwarzkopf knew the mistake Bush was making. He was possibly more popular than Bush right after the war, and could have had almost any position in Washington. But instead he resigned upon returning to America. He knew the consequences of Bush's decision and wanted out of the whole deal.

Yes, another few weeks of fighting and we could have saved the Iraqi people a year's worth of troubles. But now they continue to be repressed by a maniacal dictator. It's time the politicians stop doing what is best for their career and start doing what is best for the people of this country and the world.

All kinds of yes to coal plant referendum

BY CHRIS TALBOTT
and GLEN TORBERT

STAFF WRITERS

Voters who overwhelmingly approved a coal-plant referendum on Tuesday's election ballot cited reasons ranging from pollution concerns to wanting to keep wily city commissioners on a short leash.

As voters left the precincts, many of those interviewed said they were most interested in having a hand in deciding how and from where Tallahassee's energy needs will be met.

"Anything that gives more power to the people and more choice ... I'm for that," said Matt Hauser, an employee of the local restaurant, The Grand Finale.

Hauser was not alone. Most people said they wanted to tell city commissioners how to run the city, instead of letting the commissioners tell them what's best for Tallahassee.

Now that it has been passed, the coal-specific referendum will force the city to seek voter approval before building a coal plant or buying energy from coal plants in other areas.

"I think it's stupid to have a coal plant when there are alternate energy sources available," said Marc Diaz, a Florida State University sophomore.

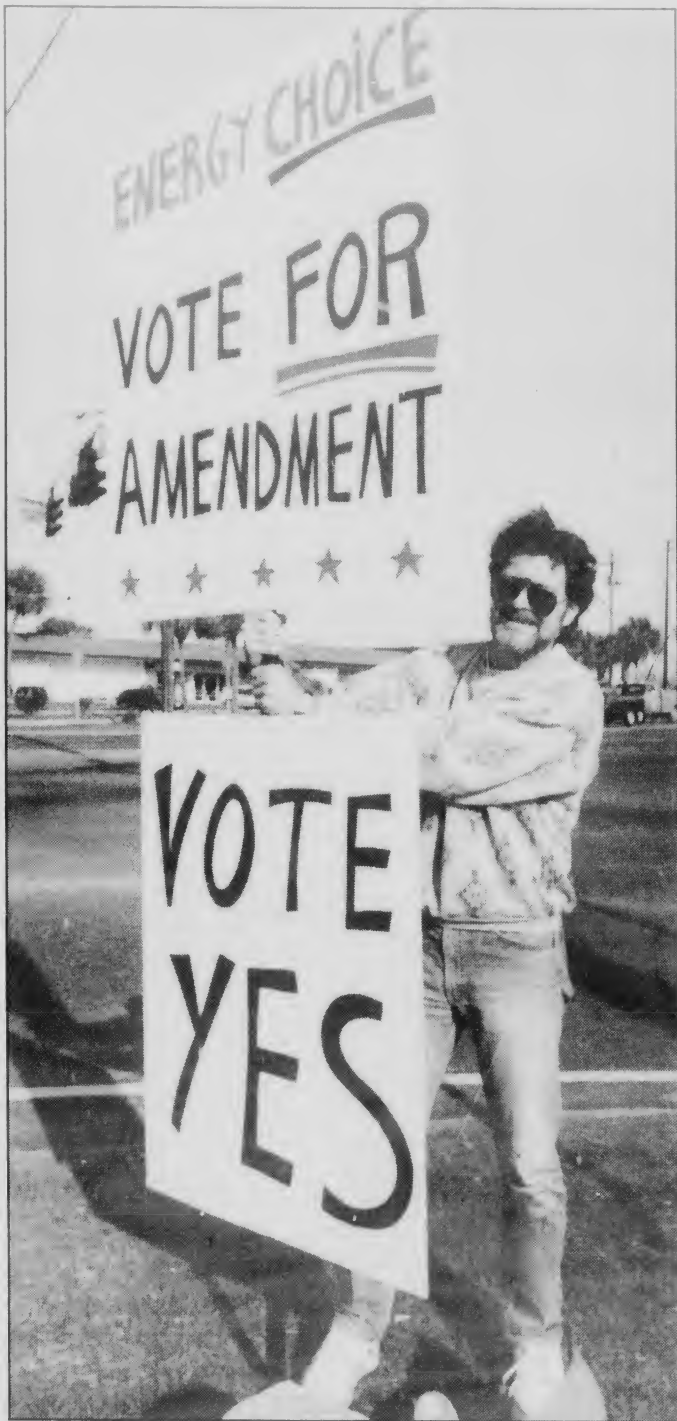

Although most voters were in favor of the referendum, there were a few who weren't so willing to give citizens the power to decide against using coal as a local energy source.

"Philosophically I'm against it because it's taking the vote away from the people I put in office," said John Bailey, who, despite being against the referendum, is opposed to the use of coal to power the city. "I voted for the people that I trust to make these decisions, these judgments for me. If I don't like the decisions they made this time, then I'll vote them out next time around."

Dena Shrum, a Florida State University sophomore, said keeping coal as a viable option would give the city more flexibility, allowing coal to be used as a bargaining chip in future energy decisions.

"By telling the natural gas company that we might use coal, ... it could lower the prices," Shrum, who is against the use of coal, said after voting at the Lincoln Neighborhood Center.

Others, who voted in favor of the referendum, weren't so eager to let the city have the last say. Some felt the city had snookered them when it voted in favor of bringing a coal plant to the area last summer.

The proposal was eventually reversed when a new city study of natural gas prices indicated natural gas would remain cheaper than coal for the foreseeable future.

"I don't like coal," Maurice Thomas said after voting at Optimist Park. "They should let us know before they start pulling tricks like that."

Other voters didn't want the pollution they thought would come with coal-produced electricity.

"I was born and raised in Birmingham, Alabama," said Sidney Hutto, who voted in precinct 41 in Optimist Park. "Next to Pittsburgh, it was the dirtiest town in the United States. And it was all from coal."

On the south side of town where the plant would have been built, voters didn't want to see another dirty industry in their back yard.

"I don't want it over here. Why don't they put it over near Killearn," asked David Daniels, Sr., a driver's education and physical education teacher at Cobby High. "That's why I voted against it and against (City Commissioner Jack McLean) who's for it. Let them put it over by McLean's house."

Economic sanctions are just an extension of war

BY LARRY EVEREST
PACIFIC NEWS SERVICE

The argument that sanctions—not war—are the way to bring down bloody dictators has gained wide acceptance among peace activists. Yet far from being a weapon for peace, sanctions are a weapon for war, often less discriminating than bombing.

Before last year's Gulf war, many in the anti-war movement endorsed sanctions as a "humane alternative" to military confrontation. Today an estimated one million Iraqi children are malnourished as a result of both sanctions and wartime destruction. Greenpeace estimates that 70,000 Iraqi civilians have died from starvation and disease since the fighting ended.

That's 10 times more non-combatants than lost their lives during the war itself, and more are dying daily.

Iraq isn't the only country where U.S.-sponsored sanctions are taking a human toll. Last October an embargo was imposed on Haiti following the anti-Aristide coup; now fuel is scarce, malnutrition is even more widespread than before, and thousands are desperately trying to flee.

In the 1970s and 1980s, sanctions against South Africa were widely supported by Western activists and the ANC. During the Gulf war many activists viewed sanctions as a reasonable middle ground between total war and non-intervention—a way to get Iraq out of Kuwait without bloodshed.

Today sanctions are the weapon of choice of President Bush's New World Order to force compliance from upstart regimes. The U.N. may soon threaten both Libya and North Korea with sanctions, and the U.S. is considering intensifying the economic boycott of Cuba.

The events of the past year highlight the problems with this approach. To begin with, sanctions aren't humane. They are especially deadly for a semi-industrial country like Iraq, which depends on imports for everything from food to medicines to essential machinery (a dependence deliberately heightened by the bombing of Iraq's infrastructure).

Today many Third World countries are increasingly dependent upon imports for the basic necessities of life. Haiti imports 80 percent of its food. In 1960, for example, the Middle East was a net exporter of food; by 1981, it was buying nearly 40 percent of all Third World food imports. Today, Oman imports 90 percent of its food; Iraq and Libya import 70 percent of theirs, Egypt and Tunisia 50 percent.

Sanctions can be a far less discriminating weapon than even bombs. Food and medicine may officially be exempted from an embargo (as is the case with Iraq), but without export earnings, sanctioned countries don't have the money to buy them. The primary victims end up being civilians, while the impact of the ruling group is minimal.

The lesson is that it's impossible to see sanctions as a non-violent means of warfare against abusive regimes.

Nor are sanctions ever an alternative to war. As Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell admitted in the case of Iraq, "sanctions and war were a seamless process." They served to soften up Iraq, buy time for the Allied military buildup and convince the world that the Coalition had gone the last mile for peace (even after the decision to strike had secretly been made).

In the case of South Africa, peace activists saw sanctions as a means of waging non-violent warfare to bring down the apartheid regime. But the U.S. government, when it finally came around to accepting sanctions, viewed them only as a way to push for certain reforms. And in the end, U.S. sanctions (which cost the South African economy an estimated $30 to $40 billion during the 1980s) were never as airtight or comprehensive as those imposed on Iraq.

Many progressives, both Haitian and American, supported the embargo against Haiti. Yet according to Haitian activists, the embargo has been enforced selectively by the U.S. as a means to pressure not just the military junta but Aristide himself to moderate his demands. Haitians have expressed their readiness to sacrifice for liberation, but hardly to further U.S. goals.

The lesson is that it's impossible to see sanctions as a non-violent means of warfare against abusive regimes. Even in cases where governments accede to peace activists' demands to impose sanctions, they will use them only to further their own agendas.

The legacy of the Gulf war is now clear: Saddam Hussein is a tyrant and a bully, but U.S. intervention has proven to be a greater evil for the people. This is powerful testimony that peace activists should oppose any foreign intervention by the U.S. government, whether it's direct military involvement or selective use of sanctions. A great place to start is demanding the immediate and complete lifting of sanctions on Iraq, and calling for an end to their use against other Third World countries.

like a politician," added Trami Nguyen, another UCF student, referring to Yancey.

But most students agreed the march—which drew three times the number of students as a September march—was a success.

With a protestor holding a sign in the background that read "Education Cuts Don't Heal," FSU student Jay Northey said he is looking forward to a time when education in Florida is adequately funded.

"I think it will be a great day when education gets all the money it needs," said Northey.

The universities' budgets have already been slashed by $165 million in the last two years. If the latest proposed $44.6 million cut passes legislative muster, Florida's nine public universities may be forced to scrap even more funding for summer school, lay off faculty and staff, take money away from financial-aid programs and raise tuition. FSU stands to lose about $6 million and FAMU nearly $2 million from the latest proposed cut.

To counter that, Gov. Lawton Chiles has asked the Legislature to pass his "investment budget," under which universities stand to receive $200 million in added revenue.

Legislators, however, have balked at his plan mainly because it calls for a tax increase—not a popular political move during an election year such as this one.

"Florida's broke," Reed said. "The Legislature needs to pass a tax increase. We're willing to pay for it."

At the steps to the Capitol, speaker after irate speaker called on legislators to dedicate more money to education and pass Chiles' plan.

"We're tired of their political games and they need to give up their bulls—t," said Daryl Parks, FAMU student government president and chairman of FSA.

A sign held by a protestor asked for "Mo' Money, Mo' Money, Mo' Money" for education. "We've got you surrounded!!! Don't even cut our budgets," read another.

Tina Jones, student body president of University of North Florida, likened education to an insurance policy.

"Education is our insurance policy for our future and the future of Florida," she said. "We're paying higher premiums . . . how about changing our insurance policies."

However, when Chiles—whom rally organizers praised earlier in the march as being a friend of students—spoke to protesters, he was booed. In fact, a sign held by the FAU delegation read: "Wanted: A governor who cares about FAU."

"(My) investment budget will take care of your needs," Chiles said. "One of its main spokes is education."

Chiles praised the marchers for their orderly conduct, drawing boos from the audience.

Brian Philpot, FSU's student body president, explained that the students' boos to Chiles were probably because they were unaware of Chiles' latest budget proposal, which gives about $200 million to public universities.

"I don't know what to tell you . . . I guess (students) are not reading the papers," Brian Philpot, FSU's student-body president, said with a shrug.

Rep. Al Lawson, a Democrat from Tallahassee, agreed by adding that few students have knowledge of politics.

"A lot of them don't know their legislators," he said. "Most often, only students in student government and the Florida Student Association know about politics. Other students are so wrapped up in their own educational process that they are in foreign territory (when it comes to politics.) It's unfortunate, but not unusual."

more time available for his job as director of Legal Services of North Florida, a group that provides free civil legal help to those who cannot afford it.

McLean said he didn't believe his connection to the coal plant issue was the cause of his defeat.

"I think this was a very confusing race," he said.

With the coal plant referendum now approved, McLean said he hoped the city could now move on to address other important issues.

Meisburg said because the seat 1 race had so many candidates, he "didn't know what to expect."

He said since the race is now between just two people, he hoped the runoff campaign could better address the issues.

"Between a progressive Democrat and a Libertarian we'll see lots of difference," said Meisburg.

Meisburg said Libertarians are against taxes, and if you are against taxes all the time, you don't have enough money for basics like roads and schools.

"It's also the party that supports legalizing marijuana," he added.

McDaniel, a former Libertarian who is now registered as a Republican, said getting into the runoff was step one of a two-step process.

"Steve Meisburg apparently is not a popular incumbent," he said.

Supporters of the coal referendum were ecstatic over the easy passage of the measure.

"I'm so happy that $115,000 can't buy-off the citizens of Tallahassee," said Carol Green, treasurer of the citizens group that got the referendum placed on the ballot.

Green was referring to the $114,000 the CSX Railroads corporation poured into an anti-referendum campaign over the past week.

"Maybe it's the end of special interest politics here," she added.

margin—with a vote of 13,696 for to 6,188 against—despite an expensive ad campaign against the referendum in the final week before the election. Passage of the referendum means the city must now get voter approval before building a coal-burning power plant or obtaining electricity from coal-burning plants in neighboring counties.

A small crowd of about 70 people, including all the candidates, watched the results being posted in the Tallahassee City Commission meeting room on the second floor of city hall.

The polls closed at 7 p.m., and at 7:50 p.m. the first results were announced. All the votes were counted and announced at City Hall by 9 p.m. in a smooth debut for the new voting machines.

The first precincts to be reported were those from the downtown area, and early results showed McLean with 56 percent to 44 percent for Herman in the Seat 2 race. Herman steadily closed the gap as the outlying precincts came in, and by 8:30 p.m. the race was even. She held a slight lead from then on, and the final count at 8:55 p.m. drew cheers from her supporters as her victory became final.

Herman said her win over the commission's longest-serving member showed Tallahassee wanted new people and ideas.

"We're ready for a change in a lot of different ways," she said.

McLean said he didn't know whether he was through with politics, but he definitely ruled out a run for any of the county commission seats coming up for election later this year. He said his immediate goal was to spend some time with his wife and have

Out with the old and in with the new

With Penny Herman taking eight year veteran Jack McLean's Seat 2 City Commission seat and Dan McDaniel now vying with incumbent Steve Meisburg for seat 1 following Tuesday's election, it's not surprising voter sentiment showed that single constant.

Scott Ward said outside the Lafayette Park Community Center after voting that the city needs some new faces on the commission. Ward, who cast his ballot for Oliver Hill Sr. in the Seat 1 race, said the idea was to get the incumbents out because the challengers represented the lesser evil.

"I really just want to get some new blood in the commission," said Ward, who also voted for Herman. "For Hill and Herman it was the same reason—get those other guys out of there."

Lynn Barrera, also voting at the community center, opted to unseat Meisburg and McLean as well. She voted for John Gibby and Herman.

"I voted for Gibby because I think he's just enough of a vanguard to get things done, get some of his ideas into action," Barrera said.

Over at Myers Park, Katya Taylor said she voted for Herman and Frances Powell. She said those two candidates had the most progressive attitudes about curbing crime in Tallahassee.

"They want to stop crime through education, not just by putting more and more people in prisons," Taylor said.

June Conn, who was voting at the precinct in front of the Tallahassee Little Theatre, said she voted for Gibby and Herman.

"I think we need new blood and we need a woman's voice who's for the populace," Conn said about Herman.

For FSU student Beth Simone the choice was simple. She voted for Herman because she didn't like McLean's support of the proposed coal plant. She also voted for Dan McDaniel over Meisburg because her mother told her it was the smart choice. Plus, she said, it was anybody over Meisburg.

"I'm tired of seeing Meisburg's face," Simone said.

Harold Maciejewski just showed up to vote on the coal referendum—not the candidates.

"They didn't offer any new positions that I could identify with," he said about the candidates in both races. "I'd like to see the None-of-the-Above option placed on the ballot."

But not everybody was anti-incumbent Tuesday. Les Epperson said he voted for Jack McLean and Steve Meisburg because understanding the workings of city government is no easy task and the two incumbents know more about what is going on in Tallahassee than their opponents.

"It takes four years to know what's going on and I don't think the challengers know which way the city of Tallahassee is going," Epperson said after voting at the Georgia Bell Dickinson Apartments. "I have a tendency to go with the incumbents because ... well it's just hard for a newcomer to understand the comprehensive growth plan for example."

At FAMU's Gaither Gym, Carrie Hoffman—the only African American to go on record Tuesday afternoon—said she voted for Meisburg and McLean because they are proven leaders.

"Enough said," Hoffman said.

Pizza guy robbed

A driver for Doubles Pizza was robbed outside the back door of the restaurant by two men early Tuesday morning after he told them they couldn't order a pizza, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said.

The 21-year-old victim was approached by a man asking what time the restaurant closed. He replied it had been closed for over an hour. The man then called to his partner and told him they couldn't order a pizza.

The second man then came at the victim with a gun pointed at him. The armed suspect covered the victim's mouth, put the gun against the victim's neck, ordered the victim to his knees and took his money.

The assailants then fled on foot toward the Park Point apartment complex.

A TPD officer saw a man in dark clothing jump over a fence behind the complex and run away. A K-9 unit was called and was able to track the suspect to a house on Crabapple Drive where he was found crouching behind some bushes.

The man, Kim Andrew Burton, 20, of 630 W. Virginia St. apartment 114, was taken to the victim who was unable to positively identify him as one of the robbers. However, Burton was charged with loitering and prowling. According to officials at the Leon County Jail, Burton has been released.

A revolver and a black jacket were recovered from underneath a stairway at the Park Point complex. No other suspects were located.

pay attention here—12:15 p.m. Then we'll tell them to stop the education cuts.

Yessir, we'll tell those 160 legislators what we think of the job they're doing today. And let's be polite, she says, we don't want anybody getting arrested.

So un-middle class, un-ladylike, un-panhellenic. Sorority sweatshirts swarm the place, a fraternity flag. A fraternity flag? Our clan is bigger than your clan. Nanny nanny boo boo.

We'll tell them what we think, Newman says. People together get a bit feisty about not having any bucks for school. Chant "Bulls—t, bulls—t, bulls—t."

Is this an excuse to party or is it a serious rally? Students have bused from Dade, Pasco, Seminole, Brevard, Hillsborough, St. Johns, Flagler, Citrus, Duval, all kinds of counties.

Florida A&M's meeting over on top of their hill—the highest in Tally town—and joining the rest over at the Capitol. Interesting message—maybe for minority students there's not much room for a party when it comes to school and finances. Serious business. Is anybody listening in this crowd?

Signs say "Chiles is an education governor. NOT." "Education cuts don't heal." Up at the Capitol, students start the tomahawk chop. How embarrassing: This ain't no football game.

FAMU's signs say things the most clearly. They mean business, don't beat around the bush. "FAMU says NO NO to budget cuts." "Ha ha your children will be stupid."

Student body presidents from all universities—future legislators no doubt and mostly white guys—get up and say their lala. Good lala. Gets the crowd going. They say things like Let's make them be statesmen, not politicians.

We've gotten off our duffs, the FAMU guy says. We're tired of their political games. We're tired of their bulls—t. He can't finish the crowd's clapping so loud. Feet stomping.

It's the right time to get rid of these legislators, can't get the right times for classes, can't get the right classes, can't get any classes. If we don't get what we need, this state will go down.

Everybody's revved up, ready to go into that Capitol and tell off some legislators. Yep. But.

Here's where it looks like a trick. Out here in the sun the students stand around yelling "Bulls—t" and wave signs that say "MO MONEY, MO MONEY, MO MONEY."

Out comes Sen. Carrie Meek. She's on the side of education for all. "I know how to march," she says. "We've had enough. Florida's fresh out of money, but we can't take it anymore." Why don't we have more Queen Latifas up there on the hill?

NO MORE CUTS echoes through the Capitol's front, hits the Supreme Court across Duval Street, bounces back and forth and back.

Up steps the Guv saying students got off their duffs like they said they would. He starts up.

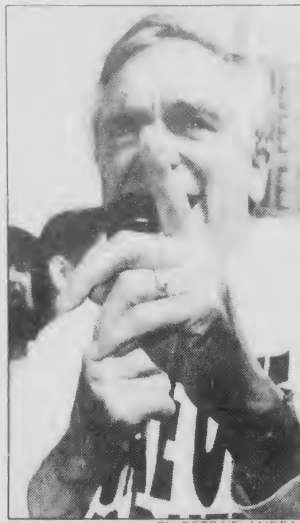

"The lottery will go back—"

BOO BOO BOO BOO he can't even finish for the angry crowd. He's on their side, but they don't even know it.

'Student body presidents from all universities—future legislators no doubt and mostly white guys—get up to say their lala. Good lala. Gets the crowd going.'

"We won't vote for you again," somebody says. "Shut the hell up," somebody else says. "We're off our duffs, no more cuts." Chiles takes off.

He seems to be an unwitting decoy. At 12:15 p.m., when the House is supposed to get out, students get inside, thousands of them. Keep the signs down so as not to hurt anybody, the FSA is saying. Take your sticks off the signs. Somebody mumbles, "Use the sticks—kill em!"

JEN BEERS/FLAMBEAU

The Guv

The crowd booed Chiles despite his most recent budget proposal.

Inside shouts big public polite art. Cows we milk, gargantuan saccharin orange flowers, cowboy hats. Get it? Some students take the elevator, some the stairs to the fourth floor.

Something's gone haywire here. Up in Lobby Land, the land time forgot that quietly crucifies the citizens of the state, nobody's really around. What happened to all those 3,000 students?

Where are the legislators? Oh, that's right, the security guards say—they split at—get this—11:45 a.m. Escaped to their offices. Scattered to scatter the mob strength? Aha. Rat fink rat stink.

Up to Hurley Rudd's office, you can wind for hours watching students wind around for hours trying to find their rep. Good ole Hurley's taken off for lunch. In fact, so has his secretary, his aide, everybody but a lone dude working on a computer. Is there a message? he asks. Yeah, there is, a grad teaching assistant in the humanities at Florida State says. Tell him we need not only NO CUTS but GIVE US SOME MORE MONEY.

Some rep walks by mumbling to another: "Yep. The usual tricks we play."

Rep. Elvin Martinez from Hillsborough has a group of about 25 gathered outside his office. They're getting pissed, they say. Waiting for 20 minutes. A secretary says somebody will answer questions, but be polite. If you have a question, raise your hand.

"Feels like f...ing elementary school," one woman mumbles.

Some students come out of his office, says Martinez made sense about taxes. Can't raise taxes, it's an election year. Some neo-Nazi South Florida sense. Can't blame these students. They've never been taught. Certainly not to question authority. Above all, be polite.

Martinez even coaxed these sweet young things into believing that we just need to increase class size a teensy bit more. The grad assistant in humanities says, "Hey, don't you see you're just getting cheated again? Can't you see he's sweet talking?" The babes shrug and walk off.

"This place is filthy," the humanities student says, "I can't believe the sleeze."

Some guy walks by, another bureaucrat. Says, "Hey, you oughta have to work here." Buys Maalox by the bottle.

"Let's get out of here," says the nervous humanities grad student. Too surreal for me. A girl, the girl-next-door type with blonde hair and freckles, stops him, asks "Can I buy your shirt from you? Ten bucks." His shirt says "We're off our duffs."

He shakes his head No. She works for Florida Close Up. Says the Legislature wants to cut them out of the budget. Says she's in junior high school, and part of a group that comes up and makes their own laws about education and other important issues like how half the lottery money never reaches education.

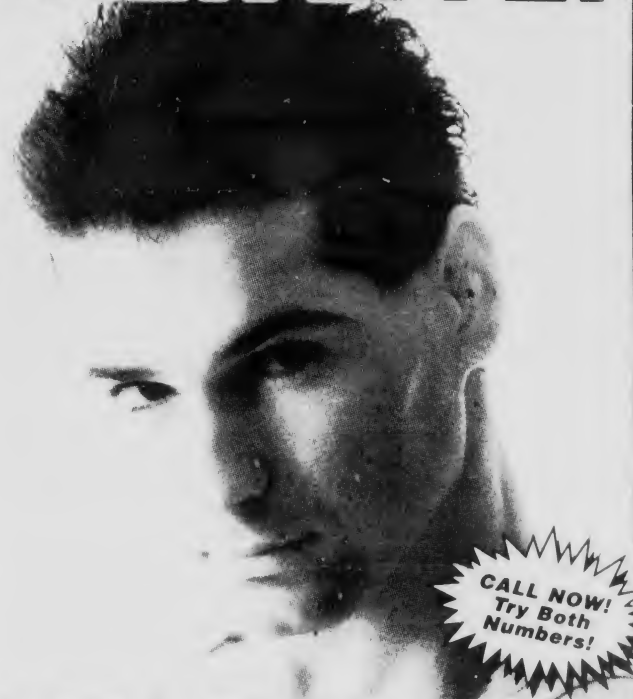

"Where'd it go?" the humanities guy asks. To the Legislature. They bought their own stuff with it. Like a walk-in freezer for the governor. There's a funereal silence.

He hands her the shirt, says "Five bucks." Nirvana? Nevermind.

Multi-faceted director now at FSU

BY MARTIN ALLEN

STAFF WRITER

Renowned Broadway director Jose Quintero is a difficult person to talk to.

Not because he has some sort of attitude (nothing could be further from the truth), or because he has to speak with an electronic voice box because of throat cancer surgery a few years ago.

The man has so much experience in the theatre and so many good stories to tell that an hour here or there is simply not enough. You can barely get into a conversation with him and suddenly your time is up, and you can't figure where it's gone.

Fortunately, Florida State theatre students will have an opportunity to speak with him over the next several weeks, and as an added bonus, they get to watch him work.

Quintero, who brings decades of theatre experience with him, has returned to the campus as Eminent Scholar for the second year in a row. He will be teaching both acting and directing workshops at the Lab through late February.

"I've never really thought of myself as an actor, from early on," he said last week. "I wanted to be, but I act while directing, so that satisfies me."

This is easy to see. During his first acting session two weeks ago, Quintero placed himself in the center of the room and gave suggestions for what the 18 students in the class should look for while doing a scene.

"Body language in itself is what you use to project yourself," he offered. "By using our minds, our emotions, we recall feelings. How? There are millions of ways. I allow the experience to come into my body, my being. You cannot do it simply by thinking it—use your senses, they remember."

When a couple of students did a rough version of a scene from Eugene O'Neill's Strange Interlude, which deals heavily with interior monologues, Quintero was seated near the other students and lent the actors his full attention. When the scene was over, he gave them more clues as to how to internalize their roles.

"We are dealing in this play with a woman who needs to be complete. She needs a husband, a lover and a son," Quintero advised. "Think of the cycles of the moon—a woman goes through an internal cycle in much the same way. Women are much more complex than men. Emotionally, biologically. A woman's sexuality exists much more internally than a man's, whose sexuality is much more visible externally."

Quintero brings much of the same understated approach to directing. Not surprisingly, his philosophy comes into direct opposition to the current thinking on Broadway, where more attention is seemingly paid to the auteur director, rather than the original author.

"One of the main functions of a director is to encourage and bring out the best he can in his actors as well as the playwright's message," he said.

Jose Quintero, FSU Eminent Scholar in theatre, will be in town through February.

During a directing workshop two days later, Quintero was again seated among the students. The study group was analyzing a difficult moment, when a young man has to tell his mother the news that he has contracted AIDS.

One of the directing students suggested the actors compare the forthcoming moment to the times when they brought a bad report card home to their parents, suggesting that there is only a difference of degree, not kind.

The scene had barely resumed when Quintero gently interrupted and said "Now, do what he says—and look for the lies. Where is the first lie in what you've read?"

He was addressing the need to look for truth in the context of a performance, that actors need to believe completely in the characters they play. Even if the character is totally unsympathetic, they can use lies as a means of discovering inner truth. He then went a step further— "Don't tell me how you're going to play this, show me."

Afterwards, Quintero told the students one of his personal stories, illustrating a way in which sense-memory can add truth to a performance. "I was in Norway during the winter. There was a time when the sun gave light for only 15 minutes a day. I lived for those moments, even if the sky never got more than a pale blue—this is like the way you feel in a strange dark room."

He then let the actors resume their work with a final note. "Go on building your monument of respectability—but remember—no matter how hard you try, Life will not let you lie your way out of it."

Syrupy gimmicks weigh down otherwise buoyant Tomatoes

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

Fried Green Tomatoes is a Beaches-esque movie about lifelong friendship playing on a sentimental mixture of sorrow, happiness, and courage.

The central story is about Izzy (Mary Stuart Masterson) and Ruth (Mary-Louise Parker), two different people connected by a powerfully emotional scene in the movie's first few minutes. Over time the free-spirited, poker-playing Izzy develops a kinship with the prim, responsible Ruth, which grows into a powerful friendship of female bonding similar to the Robert Bly-influenced male bonding of The Fisher King.

The story of Masterson's friendship with Parker is a compelling one, set in a small Alabama town where they run a cafe together. Masterson's performance is impeccable, giving buoyancy, energy, and a sort of naivete to her rich character. Parker's role is more subdued, and is overshadowed at times by Masterson's strong character and performance.

Though occasionally pandering to easy emotional ploys instead of playing to the strength of its characters and story, Tomatoes scores on many of the intangibles, such as the feel of Whistle Stop and the rural southern post-war town. The story keeps moving despite the long stretches of time it covers and the high pitch of the first scene, which would seem hard to maintain but isn't.

The problem is the frame. Instead of trusting Masterson's and Parker's characters to bring this story of friendship home, director John Avnet and screenwriter Fannie Flagg bring in Kathy Bates and Jessica Tandy as their real-time counterparts.

Tandy recounts Izzy's story on Bates' visits to her retirement home. From the opening scene, Bates' character is a lonely, pathetic person, eating donuts and candy bars by the dozens while fretting about the slow entropy of her marriage. The idea is that Tandy, by recounting the story, affects a change on Bates.

But Bates' sitcomish attempts at developing herself and saving her marriage undermine any believability she might have had as a thinking human being. The frame's telegraphed eventuality leaves one speechless, wondering why Avnet didn't stick with the central story.

What you're left with is an excellent story hamstrung by a weak gimmick in what should have been an powerful period piece about the strength of women and their friendships.

Terrapins creep into Tally

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

A three-day break probably came at just the right time for the Florida State Seminoles.

FSU (14-5, 6-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference) is coming off one of the toughest parts of its schedule, a stretch that saw the Seminoles play seven games over 15 days. And now, after taking a few days to recuperate, the Seminoles (third in the ACC) play conference cellar dweller Maryland (8-10, 1-7) tonight at 7 in the Civic Center.

Coach Pat Kennedy said his 23rd-ranked Seminoles have begun to realize how tough the ACC is and that they appreciate the importance of each conference game.

"One of the nice things that's starting to happen is that our guys are really starting to zero in on the conference standings and they're starting to realize where we are in the conference," Kennedy said last Saturday after his team took a last-second victory from Wake Forest.

Charlie Ward, Sam Cassell and Chuck Graham will start as the Seminole guards. Ward's been an effective point-guard averaging 5.6 assists and 2.7 steals a game, second in the ACC. Cassell leads FSU with 19 points a game.

In the frontcourt, look for Rodney Dobard and Doug Edwards to again line up as the forwards. Dobard has hit more than 74 percent of his shots against ACC teams. Edwards scored 22 and grabbed 13 rebounds against Maryland Jan. 18.

Freshman guard Bob Sura has averaged playing 27 minutes a game mostly off the bench. But, lately, he hasn't been the only sub seeing courttime.

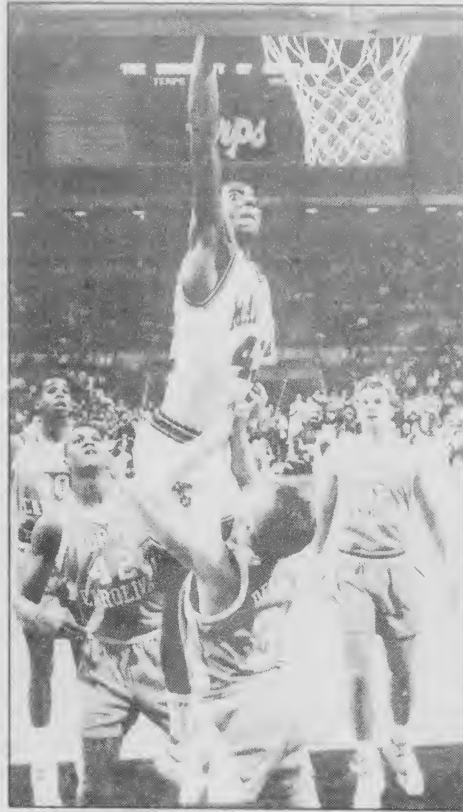

Kennedy said center Andre Reid has been making strides both offensively and defensively. He said he was especially encouraged by Reid's play against Wake.

"I thought Andre Reid once again played a key role on both the defensive end and even just his one opportunity of getting the ball and turning and dunking," Kennedy said. "That really encourages us when we see signs of Andre moving along because of . . . our lack of depth."

Kennedy's squad had to go to overtime to beat Maryland (91-83) the last time they met mostly because of the outstanding play of Terrapin guard Walt Williams, who scored 30, grabbed seven rebounds, and dished off six assists.

Williams is the heart and soul of the Maryland offense, having averaged 26 points a game and scoring in double figures every game this season. Williams has also led the Terrapins in scoring in all but two of their games.

Kennedy said his defensive strategy will have to center around stopping Williams but that the Maryland's Walt Williams, shown here taking it to the hoop against North Carolina, could do the same to FSU.

Seminoles won't overlook Maryland's other scorers.

"Walt Williams is a great deal of Maryland's offense-but it's important to stop their other guys," Kennedy said. "So we're going to play them straight up and try to stop all five of them if we can."

The Terrapin backcourt features center Chris Kerwin (6-10) and Vince Broadnax and Evers Burns (15.8 ppg) are the forwards.

Maryland coach Gary Williams said the two things that make the Seminoles dangerous are their confidence and speed.

"Obviously they have a lot of confidence from winning so many close games and they're coming off a good win with Wake Forest," Williams said Tuesday. "So, we have to really be ready for their quickness."

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1992

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Thanks to your good heart and sensitivity, you have much to look forward to. A parent plays an important role in the choices you make now. Put your expertise in dealing with the public to good use in May. The bottom line will improve substantially by August. Welcome a change of lifestyle in September. You gain new financial independence once you learn how to showcase your special talents.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: slugger Hank Aaron, columnist Jane Bryant Quinn, comedian Red Buttons, actress Barbara Hershey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Working with other people may be unavoidable today. Use caution when choosing new allies. Burdening yourself with other people's problems would be a mistake.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take a chance today. A new venture should prove quite profitable if you let yourself "wing it." Bypass trivial pursuits on the road to major accomplishments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A golden financial opportunity suddenly presents itself. A thin line separates triumph from defeat. Plot your moves carefully. Confiding in trusted colleagues brings offers of assistance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Although the outlook for a new relationship is not too promising, you must have faith. Set aside a stubborn attitude and try to see things from loved one's point of view.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Slow down the decision-making process. Otherwise, you will make mistakes that others must pay for. A good day to set long-term goals. Be specific leave as little as possible to chance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you find yourself at a loss for words, let your actions reflect what is in your heart. Devote real effort to making a house a home. Otherwise, loved ones could look elsewhere.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get a taste of the good life today. Do not let materialism overcome your usually shrewd judgment. Friends are loyal and supportive. A younger person sheds new light on an old problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day to experiment during daylight hours and study at night. Do not let a golden educational opportunity pass you by. Focus on both your physical health and psychological well-being.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Not everything you are told now is the truth. Demand proof if someone makes ugly allegations. Open your eyes to the value of cooperating with your associates. Cultivate a bit more humility.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An increase in funds could give you unexpected qualms. Relax and enjoy yourself, having money can be fun! A family member shares some good news. A romantic relationship takes a new turn.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be cautious about placing your problems in another person's hands. Someone may try to take advantage of you. Turn your back on analysis and trust a hunch. Listening to music relaxes you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Recognize that certain changes must be made and make them as quickly as possible. You have a tendency to be too hard on yourself. Concentrate on having a good time this evening.

Lady 'Noles travel to College Park

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

With the fifth upset of a ranked opponent under its belt after a 70-66 win over No. 15 Clemson Saturday, the Florida State women's basketball team is set to take on the nation's top team when it plays Maryland tonight at College Park.

The Lady Seminoles were left scratching their heads after a disappointing 15-point loss they suffered at the hands of the Terrapins in the first week of January. Until the last 10 minutes of that game, it looked like FSU was going to undo the Maryland squad, only to have the Terrapins put together a 14-point run to silence the Seminole offense.

Maryland coach Chris Weller said after that game her team wasn't 15 points better than FSU and that playing against the Seminoles' running style was rattling for the Maryland offense.

Maryland is undefeated in Atlantic Coast Conference play and is the No. 1 team in the country with an 18-1 overall record. FSU checks in as the ACC's No. 4 team with a 6-5 league mark and is 11-6 overall.

Saturday, in ACC action the Seminoles were down by six at the half against Clemson, but came back with 20-point efforts from Danielle Ryan and Tia Paschal to win get the win.

Tyson defense loses testimony

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

INDIANAPOLIS—Defense attorneys Tuesday lost a bid to call three surprise witnesses who say they saw former heavyweight champ Mike Tyson and the woman who has accused him of rape kissing shortly before the alleged attack.

The request came just before the start of the fifth day of testimony in Tyson's trial on rape, confinement and criminal deviate conduct charges in Marion County Superior Court. If convicted, Tyson faces 63 years in prison.

Defense attorneys said the three women, all Indianapolis residents, were willing to testify they were at the Canterbury Hotel when Tyson and the accuser, an 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant, arrived shortly before 2 a.m. on July 19.

Defense attorney F. Lane Heard said the women looked into the limosine and saw the accuser and Tyson kissing. He said the women were initially dissuaded from coming forward by an attorney not related to the case. However, they made themselves known to defense attorneys last Thursday and the state was notified Sunday.

Prosecutor Greg Garrison said allowing the testimony would be prejudicial and highly suspect since the three failed to come forward earlier.

"Continuing the trial and allowing the state to investigate further is not in the interest of justice," Judge Patricia Gifford said in denying the motion. "I am of the opinion that not excluding the witnesses would be extremely prejudicial to the state of Indiana. The court does not appreciate being put in the position."

Gifford, however, ruled to allow part of a 13-minute phone call placed by the accuser to police on the 911 exchange early July 20. Portions will be deleted from the jury including the police urging the accuser to press charges.

Garrison said he expected to rest his case later in the day.

In testimony Monday, Stacy Murphy, another beauty pageant contestant, testified Tyson's accuser was dazed and rambled about the alleged attack a few hours after the incident occurred.

In the fourth day of testimony, Murphy said the accuser's demeanor was quite different at mid-morning July 19 than it had been previously during the weeklong pageant preparations.

"People say a look says so much. This look told all," Murphy said. "She didn't even look like herself. It wasn't her. She was like a zombie. That's when I realized she was hurt."

Another contestant, Charrisse Nelson of Hyattsville, Md., also noticed the change in the accuser's behavior in a conversation late July 19.

Pavement paintings

Rainy days sometimes turn us into moody creatures. The grays melting everything into sameness, trapped inside ourselves and dealing with being wet. If you could remember to look like a child at the world then strange twists occur in perception and something new appears where it should not be. The rain has left mirrors to another world or places to get our feet wet.

Endorsements and accusations are underway in seat 1 race

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

With the dust barely settled from Tuesday night's election, new accusations are flying in the runoff race for City Commission Seat 1 and two former challengers eliminated in the race have already endorsed a candidate.

Frances Powell, who came in third in the race with 18 percent of the vote, said Wednesday afternoon she will opt for incumbent Steve Meisburg, who faces second-place finisher Dan McDaniel.

"When I ask myself who would I vote for if not me, quite honestly it's Steve Meisburg," she said.

According to Powell, now that the coal plant referendum has been approved, the coal issue is basically over. She added that a lot of Meisburg's philosophies are similar to hers.

But John Gibby, who trailed the field of five with only 8 percent, said Wednesday he is now backing McDaniel.

"I'm going to be actively supporting him," he said. "My mission was to pass the (coal plant) referendum and boot the incumbents out. My work is only two-thirds done."

History-maker at FSU says racial segregation remains

BY KEVIN LOUGACHE
STAFF WRITER

Millicent Brown, a graduate student of history at Florida State University, not only studies history, she's a part of it.

At the age of 12, Brown led the way in her home state of South Carolina toward desegregating a system unwilling to break with its old ways. And in 1963, three years later, she became the first African American in South Carolina to attend an all-white public school.

As someone who was in the front lines of the fight against racial segregation, Brown speaks from experience when she says the system that divides black and white is far from dismantled.

"The big picture is a lot more devious than many people ever thought," Brown said last week. "The dismantling of oppression is a far more intricate process than we want to believe."

Even though Millicent's name has been the one to go down in history books, her family's fight for desegregation in South Carolina began several years before she stepped into the picture with her father and older sister.

The year was 1959, and in Charleston, South Carolina, if you were black you went to a black high school, and if you were white you went to a white high school. Period.

There were no exceptions—regardless of the fact that five years earlier the Supreme Court ruled in Brown vs. the Topeka Board of Education that racially segregated schools were unconstitutional. A year later in 1955 the language "with all deliberate speed" was added to the ruling, but neither decision specified how soon desegregation efforts should begin.

This leads us to Charleston County, S.C. and School Board District 20, where Millicent Brown's older sister Minerva was attending Burke High School, an all-black school.

Minerva's and Millicent's father, J. Arthur Brown—an independent realtor at the time—was struggling to bring up his family in a world divided sharply, and unequally, along color lines. And like others of his day, he felt a need to challenge the system.

Working with the NAACP, Brown placed Minerva's name on a petition against School Board District 20. If approved, the petition would have enabled Minerva to transfer from Burke High School to Rivers High School, an all-white school.

"There was a great burden placed upon the NAACP to deal with all of the challenges," Millicent said. "You knew the Supreme Court ruling was there, but the responsibility continually fell on the individual litigants."

Despite her father's tireless efforts, a single petition for a black student to transfer from an all-black school to an all-white school just wasn't enough.

One reason is that school boards were permitted time to process petitions before getting back to litigants, a procedure called "utilizing all administrative remedies." Minerva's petition exhausted these remedies, moving the case into the court system.

"People just locally found ways to make things drag out," said Brown. "What happened is that my sister became a senior while waiting for the petition to be approved, making the whole issue a moot point."

And to make matters worse, Millicent couldn't just pick up where her sister left off—instead, she would have to start the whole process over again. Or so her father thought.

"My father took great delight when, by some sheer stroke of luck, he was able to get the case changed from Minerva to Millicent Brown," she said. "Overnight I had been bumped into the lead position."

Millicent's name was placed on the petition in 1960. Shortly afterward, she found herself standing in front of a review board explaining why she wanted to transfer to an all-white school.

"There I was, a 7th grader, standing before an all-white, all-male review committee, trying to explain why I wasn't happy with my own school," she said. "You bet they were trying to make me break down."

In actuality, Brown had little reason for wanting to change schools. She had been happy with her life, her friends, and her school.

But there was always the principle of the matter.

Clinton still leads in New Hampshire

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
BOSTON—Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton maintains the front-runner status among Democratic presidential candidates in the New Hampshire primary with voters apparently shrugging off unproved allegations of adultery, according to a new poll published Wednesday.

Clinton

The Boston Herald-WGBV-TV poll showed Clinton at 32 percent, with former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas in second place at 23 percent. An earlier poll had Clinton at 34 percent and Tsongas at 20 percent.

The latest poll had Sens. Tom Harkin of Iowa and Bob Kerrey of Nebraska virtually tied in third place, with 12 percent and 11 percent respectively. Former California Gov. Jerry Brown trailed at 5 percent. One percent went to "others" while 16 percent were undecided.

The poll questioned 285 registered Democrats and 114 Independents who said they planned to vote in the Feb. 18 primary, the first in the nation. It had a margin of error of 4 percent. The poll was taken Saturday and Sunday by Opinion Dynamics Corp. of Cambridge.

The poll said that 73 percent of those questioned said charges of infidelity against Clinton made "no difference" on whether or not they would vote for him. Sixty-one percent said they disagreed that Clinton lacked the "character" to be president.

Tsongas continued to gain in the polls. Several weeks ago he was the choice of 17 percent. The New Hampshire Poll released Tuesday showed Clinton with 34 percent and Tsongas 20 percent.

The Herald poll Wednesday also had Tsongas as the leading "second choice" among supporters of almost every other Democratic candidate.

It said Clinton was easily rated the most electable Democrat. The poll said 53 percent believed he will be the eventual nominee, while none of his rivals hit double-digits.

Clinton's favorability rating among Republican primary voters polled separately was nearly as high as GOP challenger conservative columnist Patrick Buchanan's, at 46 percent favorable, 38 percent unfavorable for Clinton and 50 percent favorable, 35 percent unfavorable for Buchanan.

Burdine's ad inadvertently pops a boner, causes radio wave ruckus

BY JOSH MITCHELL

STAFF WRITER

Prospective shoppers browsing perceptively through last Friday's edition of the Tallahassee Democrat likely caught more than an eye full when checking out the full page Burdine's advertisement on page 6A.

Close examination of the ad reveals something that appears to have an uncanny resemblance to a scrotum and fully erect penis protruding from the pants of one of the models in the ad.

WGLF-FM radio disc jockeys Vince Mertz and Scott Jackson, who say the ad has caused a mild stir in the radio-listening community, have been having a ball with the issue on the airwaves over the past couple of days.

"We're trying to see if people noticed (the ad) first and then see what they think it is," said Mertz, an afternoon DJ.

"We're asking people whose (penis) it is, why the models are smiling and why it's just laying there," said Jackson.

Mertz said the ad has generated more humor than controversy.

"Most people, they think it's hilarious," he said. "And we just think it's funny so we're having some fun with it."

One individual who doesn't think the ad is all that funny is Carlton Watson, head of Burdine's ad department in Miami.

"It's definitely embarrassing," Watson said in a phone interview. "Some people were very upset by it."

Trying to keep the issue from swinging out of control, he compared the public's perception of the ad to a Rorschach test: "Not everybody sees the same thing when they look at it."

But at least 117 people in Orlando saw the same "thing," according to a Friday Orlando Sentinel article. The article described the ad—which ran in the Sentinel, too—as having "certain incongruities."

Watson said his office thoroughly checked out the ad before releasing it.

Watson offered his explanation of how the whole phallus came into being.

"That ad was exactly the same ad we ran in our pre-season sale ad," he said. "It's actually a combination of a jacket laying in (the model's) lap and the way his pants are folded."

An employee in the Democrat's ad department who wished to remain anonymous concurred with Watson's statement.

"There's really nothing wrong with the picture," said the ad employee. "Honest to God, it was the fold in the guy's pants."

After examining the same photo in the pre-season sale ad, it appears the real culprit is the process involved with transferring the photo from color—in the pre-season ad—to the black-and-white photo used in the Democrat ad.

Jackson and Mertz agreed.

"The same picture appeared in a color flier and that (penis) feature didn't appear," said Mertz.

Jackson was a bit more graphic.

"When the photo was made black and white, it became the schlong of the decade," he said.

State Attorney Willie Meggs, who recently launched an anti-obscenity campaign against local video stores carrying adult videos, could not be reached for comment on the matter.

Get a clue!

Tuesday's march to the state Capitol in protest of more education budget cuts could have been a success, but it wasn't.

Sure, there were a lot of people out there screaming, laughing, doing the Seminole war chant and hooting it up—more than 3,000 people, in fact. But many of them, or at least the loudest ones, simply had no idea what the hell they were talking about.

And in the meantime, they made the whole rally look like one big fat joke. What they may not realize, however, is that the joke's on them.

Legislators must have gotten a hardy laugh out of watching Gov. Chiles take a licking from students while they hid in their offices or went for early lunches. We can only imagine the big sighs of relief they exhaled knowing that many of the students weren't blaming them for choosing budget cuts instead of new taxes.

Heck, most of the students there didn't even know who their representatives were.

As a result, legislators can rest assured students once again won't be a big threat to their re-election bids this November. Now Gov. Chiles, on the other hand... He might have a bear of a time getting students' votes three years from now.

But what makes their attempt at protest look even sillier and more misdirected is the fact that Chiles is more or less on their side. If students had read the newspapers, they would have known that Chiles has proposed a budget that would restore more than $100 million to the state's nine universities. And they would have been mad as hell at their legislators for brushing the governor's proposal off in a slimy attempt to avoid raising new taxes in an election year.

Nevertheless, students seemed unaware of all that, and instead they booed Chiles out of the way and carried clueless, ineffective signs such as "Chiles is an education governor—NOT!" Besides being stupid and cliché, the sign tells legislators just how little they have to worry about pissing students off this spring when they pass some $44 million worth of cuts in the universities' budget.

Needless to say, students aren't the only ones to blame for the fiasco. The rally's organizer, The Florida Student Association—a lobbying group for university students—is partially at fault.

Granted, they deserve some credit for arranging so many students to show up at the march, but in this case, quality would have been much better than quantity.

Rather than spending all of their energy on mustering enthusiasm at the rally, the lobbyists should have done a little more educating on the matter. It also would have been a good idea to make sure students knew who their representatives were and where their offices were.

That way, maybe there wouldn't have been quite as many students running around the Capitol looking like chickens with their heads cut off, crying "Help me! Help me! I don't know who my legislator is!"

In addition, the FSA and other student groups should make more of an effort to organize grass-roots campaigns made up of just as many students to protest the cuts on a more regular basis, not just once a semester.

The anti-athletic-fee committee at Florida State University is a prime example of a dogged effort on the part of students to prevent a policy from going into effect. Because of the committee's relentless activity in stirring up protest against the fee, students seem more concerned about plans for a hike in their athletic fee than about proposals in the Legislature to slash more money from education.

Why not, then, form a Committee to Stop Education Cuts at all of the universities? It might do more good than simply donning "We're off our duffs" t-shirts and painting signs. But, then, where would be the fun in it?

More response to athletic fee hike

Editor:

The recent controversy over the "football ticket" scam seems to have abated almost as suddenly as it erupted. I hope that this is not for lack of support for the student initiative to block the increase.

The case against this most idiotic of daft measures has been articulated on many an occasion but it bears repeating here: At a time when the university is starved for cash to fund its academic programmes, our President Lick (who, I recall, came to the university with the purpose of shoring up its academic and not athletic programme) proposes that each student contribute approximately $60 to the athletic department. It is not that the majority of students are opposed to this nominal increase in their tuition fee. What students are (or should be) adamantly opposed to is that this increase will not in any part be used to fund library acquisitions or provide any of a variety of services that would enhance the academic environment of Florida State, but rather these increases in tuition fees will only serve to fatten an already obese athletic department.

Being of moderate political persuasion, I do not advocate that students display their outrage by occupying the president's office or tearing up the football pitch. Rather, opposition to this measure could be more constructively demonstrated if all students were to:

- Sign the petition circulated by student groups opposed to the fee increase (thus far only a shade over 6,000 have seen it fit to register their opposition) and

- Write letters addressed to the BOR stating, in no uncertain terms, your opposition to this vile measure.

We are all quite aware that when football clashes with academics, the latter generally is given short shrift. However, if the response is sufficiently large, it might be just enough to convince the BOR to veto President Lick's proposal.

Ram Krishnan

Editor:

I am writing in response to the pending tuition increase involving the FSU athletic fee. I am a student at TCC and I will be attending FSU in the near future. The proposal states that by next fall the tuition will jump from $1.15 a credit hour to $3.35 per hour. This increase will give FSU students "free" admission to football games. This idea is ridiculous! Florida State is a large university with over 20,000 students. There isn't even enough seats to accommodate this many students. This proposal just can't possibly work for a school of this size. Many students feel that the athletic fee wouldn't be fair to everyone. Again, with a school with so many students how could it be fair? Some students have no interest at all in sports. They feel they'd be paying for something they would never see. The president of FSU's chapter of Graduate Students United, Ann Holt, said students should decide how to spend their money. Making every student pay more money to have "free" tickets is simply unfair.

Some FSU students don't really care about the athletic fee. They feel they will have to pay more for tuition in the long run. Any way you look at it, the athletic fee doesn't make much sense. Everyone was perfectly happy with the old method of purchasing tickets. Most students don't see any reason to change it. It is not making the situation better. The tickets are not free, but then, what in life is?

Erika Hurley

Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to comment on the Jan. 14 article written by Mark Nessmith concerning the anti-athletic fee group. This article was very well-written in that it alerted people to the problem of a possible athletic fee hike at FSU. I personally found the article very informing due to the fact that I was unaware of the possible "hike" or the group that opposes the fee.

I am presently a student at TCC and I am planning on transferring to FSU. I am of the opinion that such a fee hike is a ludicrous idea. I agree with Robert Mince in that people should pay for football games they actually see and that people should be able to choose when they want to see a game. Why should people pay for games that they aren't going to see just to support the school? The proposed fee hike could prevent numerous people from attending FSU because of the increased tuition. Our education should not suffer in order to support a football program.

CSX was McLean's downfall and Herman's lashing at her critics

BY JACK MCCARTHY
MANAGING EDITOR

When Jack McLean learned the final results of Tuesday night's election he probably wished Art Collins, who led the clumsy attempt to derail the anti-coal plant express, would hop aboard the next CSX railroad coal car. Preferably one headed out of town.

Before the election, I spoke to more than a few people who said that until CSX entered the picture, they were going to hold their noses and vote for McLean. But the ads were just too much. So, they either voted for Herman or didn't vote at all.

A great unknown at this point is what role McLean's position on the Tadiran/anti-apartheid ordinance issue played in his defeat. Did McLean's coddling of Tadiran convince many black voters to stay home instead of vote?

Neither of the so-called "coal commissioners" up for re-election, Meisburg or McLean, issued public comment on the ad campaign. If anything, the ads probably reinforced past images of McLean's dogged determination to force-feed the coal plant down the closed mouths of Tallahassee.

In the end, one has to agree with an observation made Tuesday night by Elections Supervisor Ion Sancho. Speaking on WFSU radio, Sancho said Herman's defeat of McLean was an old-fashioned "backlash." And at the front of the backlash was the coal plant's most ardent defender, Jack McLean.

In the larger scheme of things, however, it wasn't the idea of the coal plant per se that defeated McLean. It was his consistent display of arrogance in the face of overwhelming opposition to the damn thing. And his propensity to fund other borderline boondoggles couldn't have helped.

What a political irony that someone with McLean's smarts, and otherwise progressive bent, decided, for whatever reason, to throw in his lot with the old-style politics. After all, it was McLean's image as a new-style, populist people's candidate that made him so attractive eight years ago in the first place.

Despite the loss, and pardon the cliché, we haven't heard the last from Jack McLean. Don't be surprised to see him run for a county commission seat—or something bigger—in the future.

Hopefully, when we do, we'll discover he's learned where to draw the line when it comes to political compromise. I suspect there are many who voted against McLean Tuesday night who want to see him get back on the right (or is it left?) track.

Penny for your thoughts

According to Flambeau reporter Jay Schroer, who spoke to her Tuesday night, Commissioner-elect Penny Herman had few kind things to say about this paper, despite our (lukewarm) endorsement of her.

Well excuuuusse us, Penny.

Herman thinks we called her a racist because we criticized her unsatisfactory answer to our question: "Do you support the anti-apartheid

STEVE CANNON/FLAMBEAU

STEVE CANNON/FLAMBEAU

Defeated and victorious

Herman (right) is already reacting to media criticism and we may not have seen the last of Jack McLean's political career.

ordinance?" Herman waffled, saying she didn't really follow the issue.

How, we wondered, could a serious political person ignore so prominent an issue? She also didn't like being called "whitebread" in editor Ron Matus' column. Hopefully, Herman's skin isn't as thin as it now appears.

Personal or political

A neat political debating trick is to charge your critics with issuing "personal attacks." The response of Florida Sen. Bud Gardner and FPIRG's Ann Whitfield to a critical Flambeau editorial leaves the impression that Gardner took the editorial personally and is now prepared to make PIRG suffer for it.

Such was perhaps the reason for Whitfield's well-meaning but wrong-headed letter in Tuesday's paper—and Gardner's column defending his motives. Whitfield complains that the Flambeau editorial was a "personal attack" on Gardner. I sympathize with PIRG's dilemma, but I don't see the necessity in distorting the truth in order to fend off Gardner's (personal-attack alert) weasly bill.

The editorial was a political—not a personal—critique of Gardner. And we didn't call Gardner a "hack" (although an argument can be made . . .). What the editorial said was that by going after PIRG, (Gardner's dissenting column and yammering about negative vs. positive check-off to the contrary), he reinforced the image that the Legislature was run on behalf of lobbyists and special interests. As to Gardner's true motives, the editorial simply said, "Beats us."

If we wanted to flesh out the hack angle, we could've pointed out that Gardner was one of many legislators caught up in last year's scandal involving legislators who accepted paid trips and other goodies from lobbyists without reporting it. But, we didn't. Neither for that matter did Gardner in his love-me-I'm-a-liberal-laundry list of achievements to prove he wasn't in the pocket of any lobbyist.

Finally, just because Gardner is an environmentalist doesn't mean he should be coddled, either when he beats up on PIRG or steps over the ethical line with lobbyists. Put another way, it wouldn't be in the public interest.

Demonization of Islamic Fundamentalism is 'self-inflicted disaster'

BY FRANZ SCHURMANN
PACIFIC NEWS SERVICE

The tides of militant religion are rising all over the world, and the West's believers in secular modernity are terrified they portend a return to the Dark Ages.

But as exasperated Egyptian commentator Fehmi Howaidi recently observed in response to all the Westerners pestering him about "another Iran" looming up in the Arab world, "I believe what's happening in Algeria could give Muslims a greater chance for well-being in the present and hope for the future."

A decade ago Hollywood mirrored Western foreboding with films about the world after nuclear holocaust. Now Western intellectuals fear similar desolation if Islamic fundamentalism should capture the minds of the world's one billion Muslims, if Protestant evangelicals should sweep up millions of souls in Latin America and Africa, if militant religions should replace fallen Communist ideology in the former Soviet empire, and if cults should conquer the minds of young people in America and Europe.

So far only East Asia seems spared by the religious tide, but many Western intellectuals see another kind of threat growing there: some two billion hard-working superpersons forming an economic tsunami that could finally drown the West in rampant consumerism.

Almost a century ago Germany's Kaiser Wilhelm II, fearing a similar tide, called it the "yellow peril." Some Western intellectuals suspect the East Asians may be driven by a strange spiritual force they call "Confucianism."

But an Iranian exile, Amir Tahiri, who now writes almost daily in the Al-Sharq Al-Ausat, recently offered some cool-headed analysis which presents Algeria's Islamic fundamentalism as a much more complex and rational phenomenon than Western demonizers believe.

The first aspect of Algeria's Islamic Salvation Front, Tahiri emphasizes, is its pluralism, so different from Communist monolithism. It has many currents and leaders, a feature that gives it a certain democratic groundness and has made it virtually impervious to mass arrests by the secular regime.

Tahiri then sets forth the four major political currents in the Front, each of which mirrors a state-of-mind widespread not just among Algerians but Muslims elsewhere.

The first group believes that the primary identity of Algerians is Islamic. The second, growing out of the Egyptian-based "Muslim Brotherhood," feels itself part of a universal Muslim world. The third or "Army of God," witnessing the country's depravity and corruption, endorse armed struggle. And the fourth consists of urban intellectuals, professionals and workers, many of whom used to be in leftist parties.

Its economic doctrines, taken in good part from classic Qur'anic teachings, make up another major component of Islamic fundamentalism. Those teachings hold that profit ("ribh") is good but interest ("riba") is bad.

Like the American populist economist Henry George a century ago, the Islamists hold that encouraging profit but banning interest pushes capital toward production rather than unproductive money market speculation. And that means more jobs, which are horrendously lacking in Algeria and so many other Muslim countries.

Taking these spiritual and economic considerations together, it is not surprising why so many in the Muslim world turn to fundamentalism.

If one looks more deeply at Protestant or Hindu fundamentalism, or the new so-called cults in Western countries, one can also find a mix of spiritual and economic elements. These movements may be threatening to Western secularism, but they are neither demonic nor harbingers of a return to the Dark Ages.

Demonization of fearsome foreign enemies has long been a source of self-inflicted disaster

Greenies wanting green

A whole slew of environmental lobbyists were at Wednesday's press conference to issue a warning about the future of the state's environment should funding for its major land-buying program be scrapped this year.

Environmentalists urge Legislature to find the money for Preservation 2000

BY RAJU CHEBIUM
STAFF WRITER

Florida is bound to become an environmental wasteland if the Legislature does not set aside at least $300 million this year to buy environmentally sensitive land, lobbyists said Wednesday.

Fearing a cut in environmental funding, environmental lobbyists from around the state called on lawmakers to continue funding Preservation 2000, a program through which the state buys land for conservation purposes. But because of revenue shortfalls in the state budget, environmental programs such as this one are in jeopardy of being underfunded.

"We don't want education or human-services dollars," said Curt Blair, a Sierra Club lobbyist, at a mid-afternoon press conference. "What we want to do is hold on to what we have right now."

The environmentalists also issued a warning.

"The budget ... about to be adopted will wreak havoc on the environmental systems of this state," Blair said.

The environmental gathering was prompted by a proposal put forth Tuesday by a House appropriations subcommittee that in effect urges lawmakers not to sell bonds to raise $300 million for Preservation 2000.

"We're not just cutting the program, (but) we're walking away from contracts that we have with landowners," Eric Draper, a lobbyist for the Nature Conservancy, said of the Legislature.

Preservation 2000, which began three years ago under former Gov. Bob Martinez, is the largest program of its kind in the United States. Once hailed by Martinez as the perfect solution to Florida's environmental woes, Preservation 2000 is a $3-billion, 10-year project.

Lawmakers agreed to set aside $300 million a year over the program's 10-year span, but they did not make funding it a law. Consequently, environmentalists have had to grapple with lawmakers each year to get the money.

Charles Lee, a Sierra Club lobbyist, said if legislators act on the subcommittee's proposal, they will be betraying Floridians.

"The pattern is clear: The public wants to protect their environment," Lee said. "What we have here is a clear break of faith with the electorate of Florida."

Further, if the Legislature cuts funding for Preservation 2000 and other environmental programs, the environment will suffer an "unequal hit," Lee said. He pointed out the environment commands only between 2 and 3 percent of Florida's budget.

Nature Conservancy's Draper agreed.

"In the name of fiscal responsibility, (the Legislature) has launched an onslaught on environmental programs," he said.

But Rep. Ron Saunders, a Key West Democrat and chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, defended the Legislature's position.

He said all recipients of state funding, ranging from education to the environment, will have to swallow painful budget cuts this year.

"We've gored a lot of sacred cows," Saunders said.

"You're stigmatizing people when you say that different races can't live together. That had to be dismantled," she said. "My father had sat me down and explained to me that somebody had to do it. The system was just sitting there waiting for someone to successfully challenge it."

On Aug. 29, 1963, Judge Robert Martin Jr. ruled in favor of Brown and 12 other black students who had been added onto Millicent's petition. Consequently, they were allowed to transfer to all-white schools in their districts.

But they were the only blacks able to do so at the time. The excuse given by the judge was that parents would have to be notified of any integration at their children's schools, and there wouldn't be enough time to do that before the new school year, which was set to begin in a few weeks.

Others wishing to transfer to white schools would have to wait until the following year.

"But they still had to petition, and it didn't mean they had to accept them," Brown added.

Prepping for her first day at an all-white school, Brown had no idea what kind of reaction the students at Rivers would have towards her. But once she got to school, there was no question in her mind how they felt about her presence.

"Sometimes I would walk through the hallway and someone would call out a sign that everybody knew but me, and people would run to the walls and cringe," Brown said. "They made sure that I walked alone and that I knew that I wasn't wanted."

But she did gain some good out of going to the school. By attending both all-white and all-black systems, she says she was able to break through the misconception that to get a good education, she would have to sit in a class with a white child.

"Like we were led to believe that there was something mystical about being with white people," Brown said. "You thought that if you kept your nose clean, made the good grades and did all the right things, you were going to change people's minds."

Ironically, what hurt Brown more than the rejection from white students was the rejection she received from members of her black community.

"Some of my black friends thought that I was trying to be white. I was a 15-year old, whose major concerns were worrying about my bra size and if I'd have a date for the weekend," she said.

Brown would later learn that the decision would also negatively affect black teachers and black businesses throughout the community.

"There were teachers screaming they would be systematically removed from the system, and guess what: they were," she said.

"Black businessmen who supported us were also saying that it was good that blacks could now use white businesses, but it didn't mean the opposite would occur," Brown added, referring to the fact that whites did not patronize black stores.

According to Brown, there is an assumption that because American society is racially intermixed, segregation has successfully been dismantled. But that's just not so, Brown said.

In fact, Brown thinks there's just as much segregation today as there was during the pre-civil rights days. For instance, many schools today are mostly all-black or all-white, she pointed out.

"The (all-white) school that I... went to became virtually an all-black school," Brown said.

"Rather than deal with it and create excellent school systems that would be a benefit to our community, people chose to just keep switching around," she added. "And we virtually have the same situation prior to 1963."

One of the biggest barriers to integration efforts today is a belief that African-American society is inferior, and therefore, not worth integrating into white society, Brown said. But she added the reality is that African-American society has been underfunded and deprived of adequate facilities, faculties and materials.

"I had excellent black teachers, and the level of teaching was far more intense than anything I see today," Brown said. "African Americans have made achievements in a less adequate system than its white counterpart."

percent, said he would decide by next week who he will support.

Meisburg received 43 percent of the votes cast Tuesday, while McDaniel picked up 23 percent, leaving the remaining 34 percent split among the three defeated candidates.

If Meisburg's supporters stay in his camp, he will only need to pick up about one of every five votes of those cast for his former challengers to achieve a victory in the Feb. 25 runoff.

But now that the race has been narrowed to two contenders, the level of rhetoric is heating up.

At City Hall Tuesday night after election results were final, Meisburg said he hoped the campaign can now concentrate on more than just the coal issue.

"Between a progressive Democrat and a Libertarian we'll see lots of differences," he said.

Meisburg said Libertarians are against taxes, and if one is against taxes all the time, there isn't enough money for basics like roads and schools.

"It's also the party that supports legalizing marijuana," he said.

Meisburg said McDaniel's approach to crime involved no more than locking people up. It's also important to address the social problems that lead to crime, Meisburg said.

McDaniel clarified the libertarian issue Wednesday morning. He said although he has never been a Libertarian Party member, he has been philosophically supportive of libertarian ideas.

"I have been a Republican all my life," McDaniel said. "It's the difference between big 'L' and little 'l'."

McDaniel added he is not against all taxes, citing his support for the penny sales tax increase in 1984 to fund construction of the Leon County Courthouse.

Responding to Meisburg's statement that the Libertarian Party is for legalizing marijuana, McDaniel said he thought Meisburg was resorting to political jabs.

"Apparently it's some campaign garbage he's trying to start up," he said. "No, I don't support legalization."

He added, "I don't condone it (marijuana use), but I don't think police should crack down in people's houses."

McDaniel said it's a problem when people drive while intoxicated on any drug, but if people want to "mellow out" in their own house, they should be left alone.

"We need to continue to make it illegal to sell drugs," said McDaniel. "But we should lighten penalties for users and concentrate on sellers."

Meisburg said Wednesday afternoon he had referred to McDaniel as a Libertarian because of what he read in the Tallahassee Democrat's candidate profile on McDaniel.

Meisburg also said he believed McDaniel's campaign manager was the former head of the College Libertarians at Florida State University.

Curtis Deiterich, who is McDaniel's campaign coordinator, said he has never been involved in the Libertarian Party or with libertarian causes. He said he believed Meisburg was trying to tag McDaniel with an unfair label.

However, Eric Rittberg, a volunteer in the McDaniel campaign, was the chairman of the FSU College Libertarians in 1989 and 1990.

Rittberg said Wednesday he was no longer a member of the Libertarian party, and has been registered as a Republican for almost two years.

Deiterich said although Rittberg was one of the "key, core people," in the campaign, he stressed Rittberg was not in any way a decision maker.

Cocaine arrest

A 17-year-old girl was found carrying over $800 worth of crack cocaine in her coat pocket Tuesday after being picked up for loitering and prowling, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Wednesday.

Officers patrolling in the 1900 block of Holton Street saw a group of people loitering on a vacant lot around a barrel fire at 9:53 p.m. Although the girl had been warned away from the area, the police found her hanging out with the group. After a brief struggle, police arrested her.

When searched, the girl had three grams of crack cocaine in one coat pocket and six grams in another pocket. The suspect, Tamara T. Bryant, of 4010 Martha Drive, also had $255 dollars in cash.

Bryant was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to sell, battery on a law enforcement officer, loitering and prowling and resisting an officer without violence. She was taken to the juvenile detention center.

Drug arrest

After arresting a suspect Monday for shipping marijuana through the mail, U.S. Postal inspectors and the Tallahassee Police Department discovered 50 hits of LSD in a second package the suspect was supposed to receive, TPD's Garrett said Wednesday.

On Monday, a package mailed to Kurt Mahler, 19, 106 Hoffman Drive, was found to contain pot. Mahler was arrested for possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana and taken to the Leon County Jail under a $1,000 bond.

A second package was searched Wednesday and 500 hits of LSD were uncovered. Mahler was then charged with possession of LSD with intent to sell, and bond for that charge was set at $2,500.

The street value of the LSD is estimated at $2,500 while the pot was valued at $350.

Juvenile gun bust

A Fairview Middle School student was shocked Tuesday when she found a gun in a bag that a male schoolmate asked her to hold on to, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said Wednesday.

At about 12:45 p.m., the girl alerted her teacher to the gun, which was in her locker. The girl's teacher notified the school principal, who then called the sheriff's office. The school's resource officer responded and the boy was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon and was later turned over to relatives. The boy's name is not being released because he is a minor.

for Western countries. As Princeton historian Arnold Mayer has written, Hitler's obsessive demonization of Russian communism was the main cause of Germany's destruction. America's demonization of Chinese communism produced the Korean war and then the Vietnam disaster.

Too many Western intellectuals are now churning up a third wave of demonization, this time against Islamic fundamentalism. As elites who are all too often dangerously out of touch with society, they do not understand the profound reasons, usually quite rational, which make so many people in so many countries turn towards religion.

All people need direction in life, and for the last two centuries such direction has come from secular governments. But as the state now has shown itself incapable of providing direction-giving leadership, people are once again looking to revitalized religion.

Don't be afraid, New York won't hurt you

BY MARY JANE RYALS

STAFF WRITER

Behind every Jesus, there's a devil; behind every devil, a god. Apollo needs Dionysus, yin gets boring without yang, death is beauty, you catch the drift. And no place can you find the epitome of the good, the bad and the ugly as the Big Apple, New York City.

Everybody's heard the myths: 1—watch it on the streets; 2—carry a gun; 3—only place to really be an artist; 4—costs an arm and a leg to go.

Who's afraid of going to New York? But who's afraid of Virginia Woolf or the big bad wolf? They're stories. Metaphors. And knowledge is power when it comes to New York City. Main thing is keep your cool, expect anything, realize the myths are only that.

My first visit/lesson came from my New Jersey streetwise undergrad friend, Elaine. I'd grown up a sleepy silly southern girl, now a senior in college. I felt so sorry for these poor bums on the streets of NYC. One came wavering up to me and held out his hand. I hesitated, reached in the pocket of my big black coat for change, a dollar, something. Elaine grabbed my arm, yanked, shoved me on past him.

"Look straight ahead," she said sternly. "Don't look at them. Keep walking. He had a knife. Don't look at anybody in the eye." she said sternly. Wise words. She'd been mugged a few times.

I've been back to my fave city many times, never got mugged, robbed, nothing.

The keys to visiting New York are threefold; 1—Know somebody who lives there, and hey, doesn't everybody? 2—Go with friends, at least two. 3—If you get lost, you got somebody. Don't let 'em trick you into spending all your bucks. Plenty of free and cheap entertainment.

Since New York is a storefront for a bankrupt country—face it we are—go with that in mind. Go wary. Like your parents always told you in their WA-WA-WA Peanuts Adult Voice when you went out at 16 with the car. You know, BE CAREFUL. DON'T SPEND ALL YOUR MONEY. But don't be scared. Hey, museums, concerts, foreign films, funky shops and people from all over the world.

If you want to Spring Break New York cheap, tolerate long travel times. You can take the train out of Jacksonville for less than $200 roundtrip. No gas money, no speed to keep you up so you can drive straight through, no snow tires necessary. No stolen tires or cars after you arrive. Trouble is, it takes 17 hours. Hey, take your homework, take good books, take trashy magazines, take your headphones, whatever. You can maneuver around on the train. That's how I did NY in January.

The bar holds the action on the train. Lots of card playing going on. Amtrak sells beer and wine. Meet weird people you'd never see in your life. I always meet people in the Marine Corps or the Navy. They've seen a lot of the world, will tell you about the Persian Gulf or what you eat if you live in Germany. Tell you Santiago has the most buses in the world. Fun facts. Gypsies can spot a gypsy head. Avoid talking politics.

Once you're in New York, Penn Station, have friends meet you there. Subway maps can be tough to figure out. All those blue, green, yellow, red lines running like mole trails underground, going you're not sure where. Especially since a quarter of the routes are torn up for reconstruction. This time at Penn Station where it was warm (eight degrees outside), I noticed a guy street person, hanging out by the phones by The Gap store. He rocked back and forth, saying "Ga hanya, han dao dao Ga hanya." I asked Elaine what language he was speaking. She looked at me with that oh-you-country-bumpkins look and said, "English."

We had to meet our other two former undergrad friends at an Ethiopian restaurant. It was our Little Chill. We found it was cheaper to take a cab than the subway. Subway costs $1.20 now. Depending on where you're going, a cab split between several people costs just a little more, maybe a dollar or two more. Warmer, safer, easier. Especially at night.

Safe and funky are Greenwich Village and Soho and parts of the Lower East Side. Good bookstores, theatre (off and off-off Broadway), movies stores with Annie Hall hats and John Lennon glasses.

Never ever miss the ethnic delectable—that is, FOOD. It's cheap, authentic and delicious. Ethiopian—yep, Ethiopian food is grand, especially with a Little Chill thing with Carol and Sandra. And you get to eat it with your fingers. How Last Supperish. Sit in tiny scooped-out stools and listen to sitar music.

Next day we cabbied to the Metropolitan Museum. Elaine has a pass since she's an arts administrator in NYC, so we got freebees, but it only costs about four clams if you've got a valid student I.D. Not much more if you're a real adult. People do the Met different ways. It's so much to take in, we decided just to do the Egyptian exhibit.

Just. It took two hours, and we weren't being meticulous. Statuary, stone carvings, metalwork, woodwork, wall paintings, jewelry, glass, papyrus and textiles, pottery, all kinds of funerary accoutrements. Mummies. Sandra's a sleuth and found a mummy case with a real dead body inside. She's a defense attorney for folks facing life sentences in D.C. She's got an eye for danger.

I wondered about the Egyptians' fetish for cats. They carved HUGE kittens with LONG tails that wrapped around their derrieres, hips, stomachs. Did they love them like we do, cause they let us domesticate them, but they know at any moment they could go back to wildness if they needed to? Adaptability.

Unlike us and the Egyptians. They had their heyday, then their ridiculous age of

Spring broke

A guide to cheap thrills

BY ANDREW ARVESEN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

So you're stuck in town for spring break. Well, that's all right, you've probably spent enough years trying to relive Porky's. Staying in town gives you the opportunity to explore the twisted heart of Tallahassee without a lot of annoying people around. This is your shot at being a pioneer, an amateur anthropologist, or a cat burglar. Make the most of it.

Those of you who want family-type activities can skip to the end of this article. If you have a taste for adventure, read on.

A few basic tips:

SOLITUDE—The first thing you'll notice is how quiet this place is when the students leave. Tallahassee becomes a ghost town: Stores close, traffic disappears, normally crowded places become venues for lonely contemplation. The flipside is that no one will see you. Loosen up and explore.

DITCH YOUR CAR—If you travel by car you'll only do car-oriented activities, like the other 51 weeks a year. Hoof it this week and marvel at the weirdness along the way.

GO NOCTURNAL—Adopting a vampire's schedule lets you avoid the worst of our city's brutal heat. Besides, there's nothing worth doing that you can't do at night anyway.

Begin your tour of Tallahassee's Wackyland at the Spur Station, corner of Gaines and Railroad. This is the best Inconvenience Mart in the city. Buy a White Rock Cream Soda and a Texas Cinnamon Roll to put you in the proper mood. This is a great place to see your favorite Florida State administrators buying quarts of Powermaster.

Go a block down Railroad and take a left on St. Francis Street. The corner of St. Francis and Macomb is one of the creepiest spots in town.

This lot belonged to a rich eccentric who built a bell tower here in memory of his cat or something. When he died, the tower was willed to the city. The city failed to maintain it and the tower was condemned and demolished. Now all that's left are ornate stairs leading to nothing and overgrown garden paths. This is pretty weird, but the whole neighborhood is straight outta Faulkner. Continue down St. Francis and marvel at the huge trees, stairs leading to charred ruins and decrepit old houses, their former glory slowly succumbing to dry rot. While you're in the area, check out Railroad Square. Cross the tracks past the Spur on Railroad Ave. and take the first road on the right. This is a bizarre cross between an industrial park and an artists' colony. Groove on businesses with names like House of Plywood and Honest Engines. Check out the scrap metal sculpture gardens, which look malevolent and insect-like in the dark. If you're really lucky, you can crash an art opening.

The Great Smoky Mountains National Park offers hiking, camping and a little extra fun if you're lucky

Take a hike, but do it right, y'all

BY JACK CLIFFORD
STAFF WRITER

It was late July in Tallahassee. The temperature was hellish and the humidity sweltering. Big surprise, huh?

My four friends and I decided to chuck our responsibilities—okay, so we didn't have that many to begin with—and find someplace more conducive to existence. That thinking nearly killed us.

We chose the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which straddles the border of North Carolina and Tennessee. It wasn't an original choice. Some of us had camped in that area before and nearly 8 million people visit the park annually. But with 520,000 acres of spectacular expanse, five days of hiking in its rolling buffalo peaks appealed to us. We blasted out of town with visions of frolicking in ice-cold streams dancing in our heads.

We began our trip north with two vehicles, one a classic, bright-red Kharman Ghia, which was to be dropped off in Atlanta on our way, and a rented minivan, a.k.a. The YuppieMobile.

Two hours into our journey, I was standing on a two-lane Georgia highway, examining the Ghia, which was now a twisted, crumpled mass of metal and rubber, with shattered glass strewn about.

While we were making a U-turn, a boneheaded local, driving his puke-green, dented pick-up truck—the official state vehicle—rammed into the back of our defenseless little car, sending us careening across the oncoming lane. The Ghia did a 180 and came to rest on the road's shoulder. If any traffic had been headed south, they could have stuffed us in a shoebox for the burial.

Gawkers drove slowly past and one or two even asked if we were okay or needed help. South Georgians are just brimming with compassion.

Soon, the driver who smacked us was explaining his side of the story to the investigating trooper, in a drawl he no doubt learnt from his daddy—"Well, they was just stopped in the middle of the road there, with their arms wavin' out the windows."

One of us replied, "Oh, so of course the natural thing to do was plow into the back of them." We had to laugh; we were on vacation.

Thirty-six hours later, after some much-needed recuperation in Atlanta, we were one with the YupMobile and again headed for the Great Outdoors. A trip to the doctor in the big city had scored us some good painkillers and I leaned back, popped a pill and tuned in to Michelle Shocked on the tape player. What wreck?

We reached the park by mid-afternoon and found the ranger station. We scoped out possible campsites, which ranged from ones known for bear sightings to a few less-threatening along the Forney Creek Trail. Even though the five of us consider ourselves experienced outdoorsmen, we democratically chose one away from our carnivorous friends. Why push fate?

It didn't take us long to realize that we had a slight problem. We had spent the first day hiking down to the creek. The return would be a torturous climb and since it featured many switchbacks, the stretch was more like 14 or 15 miles.

We parked our van at the trailhead, Clingman's Dome—which at 6,642 feet is the highest point in Tennessee—and hiked without incident the six or seven miles to our spot. Once there, we were soothed by the white sounds of a nearby flowing stream.

That night we ate slop; it was good. No one knew how good.

By the next morning thoughts of nearly dying a horrible death came less frequently as did the ingestion of painkillers. We read our official-looking map and saw that the trail made a loop back to the Dome. We concluded that we had about an 8 or 10 mile hike back. We screwed around some at the creek but, since the day would be long, it was limited. We headed off confident that this trek would be cake. Hah.

It didn't take us long to realize that we had a slight problem. We had spent the first day hiking down to the creek. The return would be a torturous climb and since it featured numerous switchbacks, the stretch was more like 14 or 15 miles.

Three of us broke out in front, hoping to encourage the other pair to keep pace. My mind began to wander, but was snapped back by the words "Just keep walking. Don't stop."

Then I heard the unmistakable rattle sound. I thought, "Okay, he's right down there by my right leg. Don't freak out. Just keep going." Can rattlesnakes smell fear in humans like dogs? If so, this guy was salivating at the sense of my panic.

Shaken, but not bitten, we gathered around our new enemy, who hissed at us for ruining his afternoon sunbath. Then the four-foot fella slithered off into the underbrush and left us contemplating how far the nearest first-aid station was and what could happen next.

Due to aching knees, one of the laggards in our group decided it would be best if he went back on a different path, one more level, and met up with us later. We agreed and gave him water and food, then parted ways.

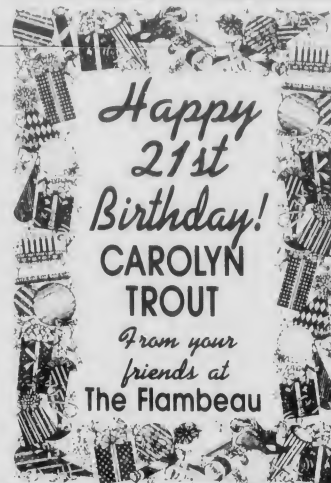

About a half-hour later, we stopped for a rest. Stupidity was becoming a trend with this group, because we found that we had given our departed friend the mostly-full container of water, leaving us with one that was nothing but backwash. A quick decadence. One turquoise cat was handcarved, but looked like some kitschy item your Aunt Pauline would pick up at the dime store, some pre-molded thing. Proud of that perfection, those Egyptians. Then the gold toe covers. Seriously. Gold. Toe covers. And gold thongs to go with them. Showy as Star Wars.

Later, we cabbed-real cheap with four people—to a small movie house in the Village (14th St?) to catch two flicks in a row, since Cinema Twin is the only good moviehouse in Tallahassee Hearts of Darkness (oh please gods let us get it here) a documentary by Eleanor Coppola knocked our socks off. Filmed as a documentary of the filming of Apocalypse Now by Francis Ford Coppola, Eleanor's husband, it's a riveting account of how everybody—Everybody—broke down on the set of that film. Eleanor has on film Martin Sheen drunk and with the cut finger, right before his real, true-life heart attack. Makes your spine tingle. It's up for awards. Oughta win.

Then we queued up again to see Life is Sweet, a British film about twin sisters, the terror and the humor. One's a happy well-adjusted lesbian, the other an anorexic-bulimic hetero who makes her boyfriend lick chocolate off her chest before sex. Ahem. She loves name calling. You sexist. You agist. You racist. You name it. Hope that one makes it to town, too. Another award-winner.

The next day we ate Vietnamese food, fine fare. It's obvious the French (when they had the weapons to be imperialists) owned them before we came in with Agent Orange. The Vietnamese, skilled at cultural adaptation, know how to set a table. White cloth napkins, killer wines and Thai beer, beef/chicken/vegetarian stir fry with rice. Lots of courses. Banana bread pudding with sauce for dessert. Yum. And cheap.

We only got to visit for 48 hours. No Ellis Island where we used to let other people come into our country. Now we're shipping Haitians back to die, and nobody cares. Mexican Indians, too. No Statue of Liberty, who got cleaned up from all the pigeon poop for the big celebration of the centennial of the statue, 80s style. Guess she'll get another cleaning when we celebrate Columbus' holocaust of Native Cultures. Ah, New York. Iroquois used to roam the land of the free there. Now we have Egyptian mummies. Oh. One more thing. Be prepared to dress like a mummy. Long unders and such. It might be 70 here and 35 there.

What a place. Wouldn't trade it for nothing.

St. George Island: Shore and sea and no MTV

BY KIM ADDONIZIO

FEATURES EDITOR

There comes a time in everyone's life when it just doesn't seem like such a hot idea to spend your Spring Break hanging out with 6,000 other college students in skimpy bathing suits drinking beer until you throw up. Maybe you've watched one too many CNN stories about said college students throwing themselves off 6th floor hotel balconies in alcoholic stupors or in misguided attempts to find the pool. Or maybe the whole idea of a week of drunken revelry has gotten a little old.

After all, those video cameras can't be everywhere. While C + C Music Factory or whoever else MTV likes in March is being filmed for those MTV Spring Break party shows, you'll probably be stuck miles away with a whole lot of other people who aren't being filmed, who don't look that great in bikinis anyway.

And how often have you taken the time to lose all those extra Christmas pounds and really gussy yourself up so you could sit around the beach all day drinking Meister Brau with Rick from Daytona Beach, who's so bombed he can only bump skulls with the beefy dude next to him while they yell fraternity names at the top of their lungs?

It may be time to take the next step, to embrace maturity and middle age and all the trappings and admit that you might just want a little peace and quiet. If you're from just about anywhere else in the United States but here (say, South Florida), peace and quiet isn't really synonymous with the thought of a beach, a condo-infested wasteland with snack bars and big surfing dudes and MTV, where you might have to keep an alert watch while you sunbathe to make sure that no one in a Jeep is going to drive over you.

But if you live in Tallahassee, you're luckier than you know. You're just about 75 miles away from St. George Island, one of the several beautiful beaches on the Gulf coast that no one has managed to spoil yet.

St. George Island is a little more than an hour's drive south of town—take 319 to 98 and follow the signs. It's due south for awhile and then turns right and goes along the coast the rest of the way. The two-lane road is lovely but can be a headache and a lot more than an hour's drive if you're behind someone slow, which is probable.

The key is to get into a very relaxed mode before you leave town, take a deep breath and decide that it doesn't really matter when you get there. Enjoy the views of the water, the second-hand shops and MacMillan Realty signs that show a family in a covered wagon and the caption, "Selling America's Last Frontier." Buy some boiled peanuts along the way and chill out.

All the preparation is worth it. St. George looks like a big sand bar with some houses and a couple of kids on bikes riding around on it—beautiful and largely unspoiled. It's one of the only beaches this South Floridian has ever seen where the trees are taller than the buildings and you don't have to pay to park your car. There's no huge condos, no Hilton hotel. It's mainly beach houses and the real estate places that rent them.

On one end of the island is the state park, which looks a lot like most beach-type state parks, with a couple of those covered cabana-type things with showers, the usual stuff. Don't bring your dog to the state park. They're not really allowed and it's a long drive back.

There are restaurants and hotels in St. George, but they're of an older, smaller, less obnoxious variety. You can buy fresh seafood on the way there or try your hand at catching it yourself. You can pretty much do whatever you want. Just be cool and you'll fit in. Pour beer on yourself and look around for MTV cameras and you might not.

Nothing's really going on at St. George. It's quiet there. You can go sit on the beach and think Zen thoughts and be reasonably sure no one will bother you. Take my word for it. Just go.

Doesn't sound like fun? Wait until you're older and you'll understand.

Gaines Street itself is a wilderness of weird. Wander through the thickets surrounding the empty, decaying warehouses. Explore the mysterious ruins of commercial buildings long since razed. Eventually you'll pass Late Night Library, The Warehouse, and the Jax Liquor Store.

The railroad tracks are a terrific source of entertainment. Not only do they afford excellent views of everyone's backyard, but there is really nothing else in the world comparable to the feeling of meeting a train in the dark.

First you hear the rumbling from afar. The honking of the whistle punctures the night. The locomotive rounds the bend and all you can see is a tremendous light. It's God himself come to scoff at you. The ground starts to shake and your internal organs and soul vibrate in time to the rumble of the train. As the locomotive pulls up next to you, the engineer lets loose with a searing whistle, blasting your eardrums, just to warn you that this thing takes three miles to stop. Your entire being is focused on the magnitude, the power, the crushing weight of the train. Your sense of awe will be redefined as you stand shivering in the breeze from passing coal hoppers and tankers filled with liquid petroleum gas.

Another advantage of the tracks is that this is the gathering place of Tallahassee's Wise Men. These transient sages, with names like Old Man Truth and Gunsmoke, will tell you fascinating tales of lives spent adventuring. They will explain how things were back in "The Compression" when one needed a lot of "snap" just to get shoes.

They can sing songs you've never heard before and a full third of what they tell you will be intelligible. And unlike the bums on Tennessee Street, these Knights of the Road won't ask you to contribute to their booze habits. They're happy just to pass along obscure lore to anyone who'll listen.

Tallahassee's parks are lovely at night. The wildlife in these suburban zones is largely nocturnal and thus easily observed after dark. I particularly recommend Myers Park, which has several outbuildings and a fairly long exercise trail perfect for nighttime exploration.

If you take Gaines Street east past Monroe, you can also see the Division of Corporations and the old city waterworks, two of this town's more interesting buildings. You'll also pass the infinitely superior Cascade Park, which unfortunately is closed due to ground contamination.

Many of this city's rooftops are accessible at night and afford unusual, scenic views to the climber. I'll let you discover which buildings are most easily accessed yourself, for the thrill of discovery is half the fun. Also: if you plan to have sex on a roof, don't forget your towel and a condom. Many of the roofs are rocky and a towel-less encounter would leave you with a severe case of road rash.

For late night refreshment, nothing beats a Jumbo Chocolate Shake from Whataburger. They're open 24 hours at three locations around town.

A hint for the really creative:

Your friends are out of town. Anyone you see this week you're unlikely to encounter again. Now is your chance to assume a new identity. Crash the parties and act like a jerk. Just give an alias. While your liberal pals are scoping babes at the beach, you can engage in equally crass behavior at Hooter's. Act like the Art Snob, Sex God, or Ballerina you've always fantasized about being. Remember: NO ONE WILL SEE YOU.

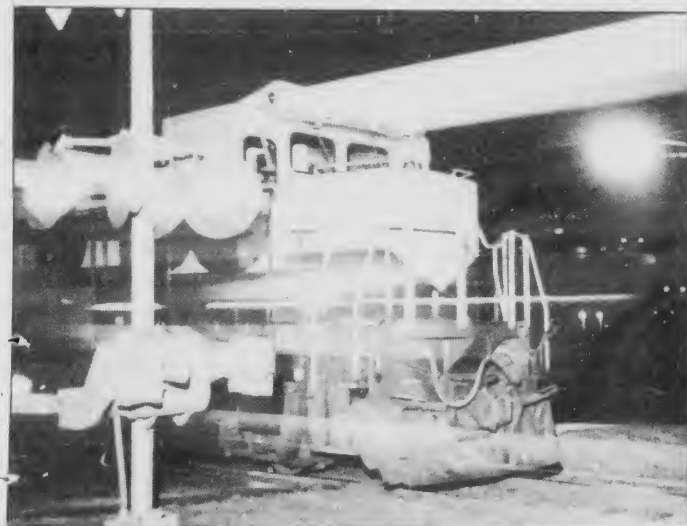

Now for the other stuff:

MARCH 20-22—There will be an antiques show and sale at the Old Airport. Proceeds will benefit the Tallahassee Junior Museum.

SPRINGTIME TALLAHASSEE kicks off with the psychotic Andrew Jackson Picnic Breakfast from 6:30-9 a.m. March 25. On the 28th the festivities hit a much higher note with the Children's Parade at Lake Ella.

UNUSUAL NATURAL SITES—Check out the lighthouse at the St. Marks Wildlife Refuge. Edward Ball State Park includes famed Wakulla Springs. Not only are the Springs good for swimming and glass-bottom boating, but the Convention Center houses the only honest-to-God ice cream parlour in the Big Bend Area. Highly recommended.

FOR THOSE UNABLE TO AVOID THE BEACH there are fine sun, sand and sluggishness opportunities available at Alligator Point and St. George Island (see related story in this section).

Tonight forget about the howling —Drivin 'n Cryin's at the Moon

BY MICK BUCHANAN

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

When I answered the phone, I thought I was hearing the ghost of Steve Marriott, leader of '70s hard rock band Humble Pie. Instead, it was Kevn Kinney, whose raspy vocals front Island Records recording artists Drivin 'n Cryin, an Atlanta-based band who will play tonight at The Moon with fellow Atlantans Follow For Now.

Drivin 'n Cryin grew out of the collaboration between Kinney and bassist Tim Nielson. Kinney had been active in Milwaukee's early '80s experimental rock scene before moving to the Peach State in 1982.

"In the late '70s, early '80s, Milwaukee had a very avant garde music scene happening—James Chance and the Contortions, things like that," Kinney said in a phone interview.

After hooking up with Nielson, who at the time was playing with dark blues frowners the Nightporters, Kinney and company began to explore a rootsy, aggressive sound and became the first underground band out of the Atlanta scene to be signed in the mid-'80s, with the Georgia Satellites, Indigo Girls, Black Crowes and Follow For Now hot on their heels.

Drivin 'n Cryin's early records, such as Whisper Tames the Lion, were given a boost due to critical acclaim and famous collaborators/fans like REM's Peter Buck and Anton Fier of the Golden Palominos. The band's 1989 release Mystery Road became a college radio fave on the strength of the single "Honeysuckle Who's cryin' now? Not these guys!

Blue."

Fly Me Courageous, their breakthrough LP, was released the day the Gulf War started. Appropriately, it had a more in-your-face sound reminiscent of the band's live shows.

"Fly Me Courageous is the first really good representation of what Drivin 'n Cryin is—a powerful band," Kinney said. Added bassist Nielson, "We sound as aggressive on this record as we do live."

The band has already written their next album, so expect to hear several new numbers during tonight's sure-to-be-scorching show.

Drivin 'n Cryin, with Follow For Now, play tonight at The Moon. Doors open at 8, show starts at 9. It's FREE for FSU students, $9 for everyone else.

Follow For Now leads the way and rocks the big house tonight

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

What you ought to do

Is follow for now

Power the people say

Make a miracle, pump the lyrical —Public Enemy, "Bring the Noise"

Better than soap on a rope the sound is so dope, these brothers have it together and that ain't no joke. With respects to Public Enemy, Bad Brains, Living Colour and Parliament, Follow For Now, who will warm up the crowd for Drivin 'n Cryin at the Moon tonight, rocks a hard jam nodding to the diversity of "black" music.

While categorization and comparison are inevitable, it's unfair to these five musicians from Atlanta to throw them into the obligatory black music categories. Their sound owes as much of a debt to the metal of Led Zeppelin and Slayer as to the aforementioned musical interests. The point is, these guys bring the noise, and hard.

The variety of the band's songs is an indication of their skill as musicians. Drummer Enrique powers the rhythm section, laying the basis for Chris Tinsley and boyhood friend David Ryan-Harris's guitar playing.

Enrique's sinewy playing gives added muscle to the band's thrash cover of Public Enemy's "She Watch Channel Zero," a tune that brought the packed house at Club Downunder to their knees during last semester's show. Follow For Now touts their live drum sound in the tune "Milkbone": "You need something instant/What you're hearing ain't hip, This is what you're missing/Real drums provide the surprise . . . Without a real band you'll get smoked kid."

Even better live than on record, their energy is infectious, their power overwhelming. Moving from the funk, Parliament stylings of "Temptation" to the ska beat of the bigot-bashing "White Hood," they play all the genres well.

What's surprising to many is Follow For Now's ability to perform hardcore/thrash tunes such as "Milkbone," a song rich in sexual innuendo. "Ms. Fortune," another of the half-dozen truly excellent songs on last year's debut album, plugs some Zeppelin-esque lead into a heavy, throbbing bass beat provided by Jamie Turner.

Follow For Now encompasses diverse musical interests and play with savage ferocity. Their Public Enemy cover is as tough as you're going to hear (puts Anthrax's "Bring the Noise" to shame). One day not long from now this band will be headlining, not opening.

Straight Out of Brooklyn— right into Moore Auditorium

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

At the age of 19, Matty Rich achieved a dream the hard way. The director of Straight Out of Brooklyn, Rich took a page out of the Robert Townsend (Harlem Shuffle) success story, financing his film with credit cards and money borrowed from friends.

Through sheer doggedness he was able to collect money from screenings to finish filming, and impressed Jonathan Demme (Something Wild, Silence of the Lambs) enough with the product to get Demme's help in connecting him with the people who funded the completion of the film. The result, which can be seen tonight at 7:30 and 9:30 in Moore Auditorium, is a testament to what a young man with vision and perseverance can create.

The film is rough around the edges, technically and structurally flawed at points, yet it never fails to deliver on the emotional goods. Brooklyn is a passionate piece of filmmaking about a subject that is obviously close to the director's heart.

The story revolves around the troubles of the Brown family. Ray Brown (George Odom) is the head of the family, a gas station attendant, tired and frustrated by his life. He takes it out brutally on forgoing wife Frankie (Ann Sanders), in the first minutes of the film, while teenage son Dennis (Lawrence Gilliard, Jr.) and daughter Carolyn (Barbara Sanon) listen in the next room.

This event is a catalyst for Dennis, who the next day vows to change the course of his life, and to do so, plans a crime with the help of some of his friends.

The power of the question of how to escape the projects is the source of great emotional interplay between the characters. Dennis's girlfriend (Reana Drummond) suggests he try to make something of himself in college, but for him that dream is too far away.

Less polemic than a Spike Lee movie, Rich's film doesn't rely on contemporary criticism of the culture couched in the dialogue of the characters. The power instead rises out of complexity of the issues raised by the characters themselves—full realizations of people Rich knew in Brooklyn, not the partial stereotypes Lee favors.

The efforts of two years and lots of heart went into this film. For this only, it would be laudable. But what Rich created is strong and moving, proving that with the technical advances in film, sound and editing there can be more powerful filmic representations of individual consciousness than "America's Funniest Home Videos."

Straight Out of Brooklyn shows at Moore auditorium tonight at 7:30 and 9:30. Admission is free for FSU students, $2 to non-students.

check of our food supplies turned up a rice cake. Geez, even Homer Simpson isn't this pinheaded.

Another of the group decided he couldn't continue either—sore knees again—and he implied that it might be nice to just die right there on the mountain. In some perverse way the thought made me feel better. Where were those painkillers anyway?

Okay, so it wasn't that drastic, but things weren't quite going as planned. We set up a tent on the trail for our pained partner and made him promise to meet us at the van in the morning.

The three of us took off toward the trailhead with what little amount of water—spit actually—we had and this frigging thing that looked like a coaster. The sun had nearly set, so we were using a flashlight to guide us along the trail. It didn't help.

We blundered along until we came to a huge open area. Checking our Ranger Rick trail map, we realized it was Andrew's Bald. No matter which way we turned, we kept coming to a deadend. There's that word again.

Williams waltzes Terps past FSU

BY JIM VERTUNO
SPORTS EDITOR

Call it getting a taste of their own medicine.

After dishing out probably more than their fair share of upset road wins this season, the 23rd-ranked Florida State Seminoles took one on the chin Wednesday night, losing to Maryland 93-85.

It was the second time in their last three Atlantic Coast Conference home games that the Seminoles lost. FSU, third in the ACC, is now 14-6 on the season, 6-4 in the conference. Maryland, sitting dead last in the nine-team league rose to 9-10, 2-7.

As 7,880 came to watch FSU make its second ACC sweep of the season, it was the Terrapins' Walt Williams who had the broom in hand, scoring a game-high 38 points. It was his seventh straight game scoring 30 or more points, leaving him one shy of the school record.

"What Walt did tonight is typical of how he's been playing for the last seven games," said Maryland coach Gary Williams. "As a team, we've been playing very well lately and we just got a super team effort which we needed in order to hope to win."

Walt Williams said a key to the win was the Terrapins' ability to take FSU out of its fast transition game that has been so effective this season.

"What we did was try to get two guys back to the basket to try to prevent their fast break," Walt Williams said. "It worked and we ran our break well."

FSU coach Pat Kennedy agreed and added that his team, after playing so well in the ACC up to this point, simply played without intensity.

"I don't think we had one player play well tonight," Kennedy said. "Not to take away from the job Maryland did, but our guys were dazed tonight and for no particular reason."

The lack of a team effort on the Seminoles' part made Kennedy wary of his teams' mental approach to the game.

"To get this far in the conference and then have the bottom just fall out like that, that gives you cause for concern," he said.

What Williams can do to a team, though, would give any coach a reason to ask what happened.

Williams scored almost at will on the Seminoles, canning 22 by halftime. For the game, Williams was 11 of 18 from the floor, including seven of nine from beyond the three-point line. Kennedy was impressed.

Walt Williams takes two of his 38 points over FSU guard Sam Cassell. Williams made the FSU defense look silly.

"Williams is the kind of guy that can worry a coach from the beginning and tonight he had one of those career nights," Kennedy said. "He had that fire in his eyes and it seemed like every time he had a shot he knocked it down."

If there was a bright spot for FSU it was forward Rodney Dobard's career-high 28 points. But for Kennedy, it wasn't enough.

"The scoring was great but we just didn't play defense," he said.

Now Kennedy has to regroup his team and get it ready to play Clemson Saturday. But, he said, despite the Seminoles' less-than-satisfactory effort Wednesday, it was bound to happen sooner or later.

"You figure you're going to have games like this and I think you're going to have them in the conference. Now we just have to forget about rankings and conference standings and get our minds on Clemson," he said.

FSU signs another first-class group

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

The Florida State football team signed 23 recruits Wednesday, the first day coaches could sign high-school athletes to letters-of-intent. This year's class includes three Parade All-Americans, two U.S.A. Today first-teamers and three U.S.A. Today second-teamers.

Coach Bobby Bowden nabbed three players from Tallahassee and, as usual, the state of Florida was well represented (19 FSU signees to be exact).

"This state is the nicest problem to recruit in there is," Bowden said. "You can't hardly do bad."

The FSU signees are: QB—Dan Kannell (6-4, 205 lbs., Westminster Academy, Ft. Lauderdale).

RBs—Mike Gibson (6-0, 212 lbs., North Florida Christian, Tallahassee), Zach Crockett (6-2, 222 lbs., Hinds Community College, Hinds County, Miss.).

Receivers—Tamarick Vanover (6-1, 185 lbs., Leon High, Tallahassee), Wayne Messam (6-4, 192 lbs., Glades Central High, Belle Glade), Michael Hendricks (6-5, 230 lbs., Baytown High, Baytown, Texas), Kamari Charlton (6-2, 220 lbs., Florida Air Academy, Melbourne), Terry Davis (6-3, 230, Kendrick High, Columbus, Ga.).

OL—Andy Crowe (6-4, 250 lbs., Florida High, Tallahassee), Larry Fleming (6-3, 250 lbs., Ft. Walton Beach High, Ft. Walton Beach), Todd Fordham (6-6, 245 lbs., Tift County High, Tift County, Ga.), Marcus Long (6-4, 285 lbs., Mainland High, Daytona Beach).

DBs—Harold Battles (6-2, 185 lbs., Jackson High, Jacksonville), Seam Hamlet (6-2, 185 lbs., Hampton Virginia High, Hampton, Va.), Eric Black (also plays QB, 6-5, 225 lbs., Fletcher High, Jacksonville).

DL—Kelly Rush (6-6, 256 lbs., Garden City Comm. College, Garden City, Kan.), Connell Spain (6-3, 275 lbs., Melbourne High, Melbourne), Orpheus Royce (6-5, 290 lbs., Miami Springs High, Miami).

LB—Henri Crockett (6-3, 236 lbs., Ely High, Pompano Beach), Alonzo Horner (6-3, 230 lbs., Northwest Mississippi Comm. College, Miami), Todd Rebol (6-1, 210 lbs., Charlotte High, Punta Gorda), Travis Sherman (6-4, 205 lbs., Bloomingdale High, Valrico).

Kickers—Sean Liss (6-4, 205 lbs., Boca Ciega High, St. Petersburg).

Bobby Bowden has plenty to smile about

HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1992

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take a flying leap out of the starting gate! A change of career or new business alliance will bring many benefits next month. Submit an outline or manuscript to a publisher in May; creative endeavors will be richly rewarded. Love blossoms in the summer when an older person decides to play Cupid. A windfall or inheritance means greater financial security next September. Help out with family problems in late fall. December is a great time for a special reunion.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: news anchor Tom Brokaw, singer Natalie Cole, former President Ronald Reagan, actor Mike Farrell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A monetary setback is possible unless you stay on your toes. Act quickly if you sense a threat to your resources. Friends who try to impose on you are not worth helping.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is sometimes necessary to say "no." Stand your ground and refuse to budge an inch. Entertaining at home may be less expensive than going out this coming weekend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A financial proposition you receive now may not bear close scrutiny. Do not commit your resources to a dubious project. Turn on the charm when dealing with someone who holds an important position.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new venture in art or business gets the green light. If somebody is promising you the moon, it is time to stop, look and listen.
Keep surplus funds in the bank.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If trying to break a bad habit, steer clear of people who still indulge in it. Self discipline is the price of success. Brighten your home with flowers or a fresh coat of paint.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Show your heartfelt appreciation for favors and those who have helped you once will do so again! Close a deal that promises to be highly profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Patching up about making a commitment you may not want to keep. True love can surely withstand the test of time. A partner's needs may outweigh your own. Listen to your better nature.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be careful about making a commitment you may not want to keep. True love can surely withstand the test of time. A partner's needs may outweigh your own. Listen to your better nature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):
Follow your usual prudent course and you will strengthen an existing financial arrangement. Hopes based on logic can be fulfilled. Limit your spending to essentials.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Matters that call for action should not be set aside for another day. Weigh your options carefully before making a choice. A friend offers wonderful advice; follow it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Goslow.
There is a right and wrong moment to press your case. Intimate surroundings and soft music put you in a romantic mood. Be sure you are reading mate's signals correctly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ask your partner before you run up bills, buy insurance coverage or dabble in investments. Having two sources of income is a blessing. Be more discreet about your love life.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a real knack for sizing up people and must learn to follow

FAMU signs linemen, comes away big

BY TY SIMPSON
STAFF WRITER

The Florida A&M Rattlers were looking to sign defensive players and they got what they were looking for in 17 defensive signees Wednesday. Wednesday was the first day college football coaches could sign high-school athletes to letters-of-intent.

"This year we had a real need for linemen and linebackers. We got some big guys," said FAMU defensive coordinator Rick Kravitz. "I think we have covered both areas real hard," Kravitz said.

"This year's class, just like last year's, is more academically sound than ones we've had in the past," Kravitz said. "We're continuing to upgrade the type of individual athletes that we're bringing in."

Even with all the beef on the defensive side of the ball, FAMU did sign an offensive player of note. FAMU signed quarterback Eric Hinson of Havana who led the state with 2,991 yards passing this season, a new state record. Hinson also threw for 42 touchdowns his senior year, another state record.

The 1992 Florida A&M signees are: Demetrius Billie, OT, 6-4, 275, Ft. Lauderdale, Fl, South Plantation High. Shawdray Covan, OG, 6-2, 270, Decatur, Ga, Tower High School. Bo Davis, OG, 6-2, 275, Lakeland, Fl, Lakeland High School. Corey Phillips, OT/DL, 6-5, 295, Williston, Fl, Williston High School. Kareem Pitts, OC, 6-3, 240, Hinesville, Ga, Bradwell Institute. Raphael Foster, DE 6-3, 280, Columbus, Ga, Columbus High School. Jerome Irwin, DE 6-7, 280, Savannah, Ga, Jenkins High School. Kenny Ivey, DE, 6-3, 250, Gainesville, Fl, Buchholz High School. Johnny Salter DE, 6-5, 265, Decatur, Ga, SW DeKalb High School. Thad Swan, NG, 6-3, 310, Decatur, Ga, Towers High School. Chris Turner, DE, 6-4, 248, Decatur, Ga, SW DeKalb High School. Cedric Liddell ILB, 6-1, 230, Pensacola, Fl, Tate High School. Antonio Cook, OLB, 6-4, 195, Columbus, Ga, Kendrick High School. Ulysses OLB, 6-4, 230, Montgomery, Al, Robert E. Lee High. Edmund Usher, OLB 6-4, 215, Atlanta, Ga, Fulton High School. Ben Williams, OLB, 6-3, 245, Decatur, Ms, East Central Junior College. Ernest Cooper, QB, 6-5, 185, Atlanta, Ga, Fulton High School. Eric Henson, QB, 6-0, 180, Havana, Fl, Havana High School. Karlos Odum, QB, 6-3, 185, Haines City, Fl, Haines High School. Hank Green, DB, 5-10, 165, Decatur, Ga, SW DeKalb High School. ## Fire suspends Tyson trial

INDIANAPOLIS—A killer fire Wednesday in a hotel housing sequestered jurors prompted a judge to postpone the Mike Tyson rape trial until Thursday.

None of the jurors was injured but two firefighters and a guest were killed in the early Wednesday morning blaze at the Indianapolis Athletic Club, six blocks from the City-County Building where the Tyson trial has been under way for more than a week.

It was unclear whether the defense would seek a mistrial as a result of the disruption caused by the fire.

Tyson, 25, is on trial for rape, and deviate criminal conduct. He could face 60 years in prison if convicted.

The fire occurred early at the private club, where the sequestered jury was staying. Two firefighters and a lodger were killed but the jurors were escorted out unharmed.

Court spokesman Joseph Champion told a news conference the jurors "appeared to be in good spirits" and slept late into the morning at other lodgings after they were evacuated.

Bailiffs and a Marion County sheriff's deputy kept the jurors together and away from other people on a sidewalk outside the club. The jurors eventually were taken by bus to the court offices a few blocks from the fire scene until new lodging could be arranged, Champion said.

He said Marion County Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford planned to meet with lawyers before resuming the trial.

Although arson was not suspected, security was stepped up at the City-County Building as a precautionary measure. Bomb squads and canine units examined the courtroom and judge's chambers Wednesday morning.

The state rested Tuesday in its prosecution of the former heavyweight champion. Among the last to testify for the state was the mother of the 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant accusing Tyson—a young woman who told her mother she still sees his face in her nightmares.

The accuser's mother gave her emotional testimony minutes after defense attorneys lost a bid to call three women who say they saw the accuser and Tyson kissing in a limousine.

If it weren't for our bold-little, Bart-Simpson-imitating, high-flyin' (maybe-too-much-hemp-pecking) "Daffy" duck here, Mother duck might have had all of her ducks in a row. But as it stands, this sign leaves passers-by at Lake Ella a bit confused about what they should look out for. Flying attack duck babies?

Board of Regents is set to decide on controversial athletic fee hike at FSU

BY GLEN TORBERT

STAFF WRITER

The state Board of Regents will decide once and for all today whether Florida State University students will see a large hike in their athletic fees next fall.

Also on the BOR's agenda will be possible cuts in student scholarships as a result of recent education budget cuts.

The hotly debated proposal for a hike in student athletic fees at FSU has already been approved by FSU President Dale Lick. In order to go into effect, the proposal now only needs the BOR's stamp of approval.

Under Lick's plan, the fee will jump from $1.15 per credit hour to $3.35 an hour, almost a 200 percent increase, next fall. And that's not all: The fee

'The students (of FSU) have a strong case to make, but it's difficult at this point to unhook this fee increase from the others.'

—Pat Riordan

will be raised once again to $4.05 per credit hour in fall 1993, in exchange for "free" admission to all home athletic events.

Meanwhile, the proposal has sparked significant uprising from students on campus. One of those protesters—Anne Holt—heads FSU's Graduate Students United.

Holt will speak on behalf of GSU, which opposes the increase, at today's meeting. She will try to convince the regents to vote the proposal down.

"It's poorly planned, poorly presented and it'll be a terrible injustice to students if it's (passed)," Holt said Thursday. "We have the support on petition of nearly 8,000 student signatures."

Democrats in Congress bash 'inadequate' Bush health care proposal

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—Congressional Democrats, in the process of drawing up their own plan to reform the nation's health care system, condemned President Bush's proposal as inadequate Thursday.

Republicans praised the president for offering a reform plan and joining the debate on health care, but few offered unqualified endorsements of his proposal.

"It's woefully inadequate," said Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell. "It's not a serious effort to reform our nation's health care system."

The president's plan is "totally deficient. It is a non-plan," said House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt.

Bush, rejecting national health insurance as a "prescription for disaster," proposed a market-based alternative he said would push down costs and enable everyone to obtain coverage.

"My plan will preserve what works and reform what doesn't," Bush said in announcing his initiative.

Democrats charged that many Americans would still be unable to obtain adequate insurance coverage, and that the president's proposals would do little to curb escalating costs.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., called the plan "deficient, inadequate, unresponsive," and denounced the administration for failing to recommend how it would cover the program's anticipated annual cost of $35 billion.

Bush's four-point health plan would create vouchers or tax credits of up to $3,750 a year for low- and middle-class families to buy medical insurance.

The proposal would also reduce "runaway costs" by making the health care system more efficient, and by taking steps to reduce or cap malpractice awards.

Under the plan, small businesses would be encouraged to pool resources through so-called health insurance networks so they could obtain group coverage at reduced rates for their workers.

"Reform is urgent," said Bush in announcing his plan to the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce. "Right now, far too many Americans (an estimated 34 million) are uninsured and those who are insured pay too much."

"We're going to do something about that," said Bush, who began addressing the problem last fall after national health insurance emerged as the key issue in a Pennsylvania Senate race.

Health care promises to be a major topic in this year's presidential contest, with Bush, the yet-to-be-named Democratic challenger and Congress jockeying for position.

Several congressional Democrats have backed Canadian-style national insurance plans that would provide coverage to everyone and have the government set rates.

Computers would interface campus-wide, but money is lacking

BY JOEL RISBERG

STAFF WRITER

Every computer at Florida State University, including those owned by students, could be connected to a campus-wide network within a year, officials at the FSU Computing Center said Wednesday.

But before that happens, they need money from the university. And even though the response from FSU administrators has been positive, they say, funding for the project looks shaky in light of recent cuts in the university's budget.

"It's the goal of the president and provost to have everyone on campus networking and talking to each other," FSU telecommunications director Duane Bennett said Thursday. "There's an attitude that it can be done. The only limitation is money."

The campus-wide computer network would allow any student or professor with access to a computer to communicate with others on campus via Electronic Mail, or E-Mail.

The network would also allow professors to broadcast assignments or announcements to their students. The students could then submit their assignments to the professors in electronic form.

"I think that's the way the classroom of the future will work," FSU Computing Center Director Robert Braswell said. "It will take some investment, but we're in the posture to push forward on this."

The FSU Computing Center, which maintains vast amounts of data and raw computing power, is currently used primarily for research and some administrative duties on campus. With the campus computer network, each building and department would be tied

Cha-ching! Apartments raise $ for FSU

FROM STAFF REPORTS

A neat little arrangement between a local student apartment complex, its residents and Florida State University has resulted in a $4,000 donation to FSU's Strozier Library.

The money, which was presented to FSU last week, came from the interest accumulated from the security deposits of University Commons' residents, according to Joan Rasberry, vice president of Capstone Properties, the Birmingham, Ala.-based management company for University Commons.

Rasberry said the 480 residents of the complex, all of whom are FSU students, had the option—when signing their leases—of putting their $200 deposit in an interest-bearing account and having the interest go to the FSU library, or putting the deposit in a non-interest bearing account.

She said 98 percent of them chose to put their money into the interest-bearing account.

"We've had a tremendous response from the (apartment residents)," Rasberry said Thursday. "It's a way for the students to put something back in the school."

Rasberry said the money, which had been accumulating in the account since April, was applied towards the library because it has been hit particularly hard by the budget cuts. She added that Capstone Properties also has a similar arrangement with the University of Mississippi and that plans are underway for the University of Georgia, too.

She said the donation is only the first one for the library.

"We'll be doing this on an ongoing semi-annual basis each year," she said.

Charles Miller, director of the library, said the funds will be used to improve Strozier's Library User Information Service.

"Our library will be able to extend students' access to research materials," Miller said in a press release. "The funds will be used to help purchase new databases of information to be made available to students using the LUIS system."

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

UNITED NATIONS—Secretary-General Boutros Ghali's special envoy to Yugoslavia said Thursday that Croatian President Franjo Tudjman has accepted the U.N. peace plan, leaving the local Serbian leader as the last obstacle to the deployment of a peacekeeping force in the collapsing federation.

At the same time, Cyrus Vance who brokered the current cease-fire in Yugoslavia, recommended against sending a U.N. force to Croatia until more progress is made toward ending the 7-month-old civil war.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua—Relations between Washington and Nicaragua's Sandinista Front, enemies during the 1980s, are improving due to a new line of thinking within the party, U.S. Ambassador Harry W. Shlaudeman said Thursday.

"It seems the change is that inside the Sandinista Front, there is a desire ... to improve the ambiance with Radio Catolica. 'Naturally, that pleases me.'"

nation

SAN FRANCISCO—Doctors did not need a search warrant to retrieve heroin-filled balloons from a drug courier's stomach and intestines or to hand them over to authorities, a federal appeal court ruled Thursday.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the procedure was medically necessary to save the "mule" from death by overdose. Doctors had concluded heroin was escaping from heroin balloons the man had swallowed.

HOUSTON—A man with a history of molesting girls has volunteered to undergo castration in lieu of being sentenced to life in prison.

State District Judge Mike McSpadden, an advocate of castrating some sex offenders, said Steve Allen Butler, 27, will be granted probation if he undergoes the procedure.

Butler is charged with aggravated sexual assault of a 13-year-old girl last April. He had read an article about McSpadden advocating surgical castration and told his attorney, Clyde Williams, he wanted to have the procedure.

ATLANTA—The number of tuberculosis cases soared to more than 25,000 in 1990, an increase of nearly 10 percent over the previous year and the biggest annual increase since 1953, the federal Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday.

Outbreaks of tuberculosis, fueled by the emergence of multi-drug resistant strains and a highly susceptible population of AIDS victims, have been increasing since 1988, after a long historic decline, the CDC said.

MILWAUKEE—A court-appointed psychiatrist testified Thursday admitted serial killer Jeffrey L. Dahmer is a sexual sadist but was legally sane when he committed 15 dismemberment murders.

Dr. George B. Palermo, a psychiatrist in the forensics unit at the Milwaukee County Mental Health Complex, said Dahmer was driven by hostility, desire and fear of rejection to commit the slayings.

ROCKFORD, Ill.—A prosecutor asked a judge Thursday to quadruple the bond for an AIDS-infected prostitute, while Gov. Jim Edgar defended his decision to grant the woman executive clemency.

Tracy Eichman, 34, was being held in the Winnebago County Jail on charges of attempted criminal transmission of the AIDS virus and prostitution. She was arrested Monday after she allegedly offered to perform sex acts on an undercover officer for $20.

MIAMI—Jurors in Manuel Noriega's trial saw a videotape Thursday of armed Panamanian soldiers raiding a cocaine processing lab that has figured prominently in the deposed dictator's drug racketeering trial.

The 30-minute video was filmed by the Panamanian Defense Forces, which Noriega headed, during a May 18, 1984, raid in the jungle province of Darien.

MIAMI—Two Coast Guard cutters unloaded 508 Haitians at Port-au-Prince Thursday as the repatriation of refugees resumed after a one-day delay called by the Haitian government to prepare for the return of the boat people.

The cutters Northland and Bear had been waiting in international waters off Haiti since Wednesday while the State Department reached an agreement with Haitian officials about the pace of repatriation.

Darts and laurels

Laurel: To Leon County Supervisor of Elections Ion Sancho—and staff—for running a smooth, efficient election on Tuesday. No major technical problems were reported, although a local news show did report a problem with handicapped accessibility at one voting station. Sancho promised the problem will be dealt with. We trust he'll follow through on it.

The only amendment on the ballot was clearly worded and the votes were counted early enough so that everyone knew who won and who lost early in the evening. The new voting system proved to be less cumbersome than the old system.

Dart: To the U.S. Supreme Court. The court's recent ruling supporting the Bush administration's automatic deportation of Haitian refugees is a great setback for this country. Many of those deported face certain death once they return home, according to human rights groups monitoring the situation.

The evidence is clear: race and politics decide who gets to stay and who gets deported. Eastern European and Cuban refugees are met with open arms, yet Haitians are deported. Cuba is communist and Haiti is not. Cubans are lighter skinned and Haitians are mostly black.

The Supreme Court's affirmation of the administration's immoral, race-based standard on immigration policy is a tragedy. The decision confirms that the members of this court are as mean-spirited as the president who appointed them.

Laurel: To the U.S. House of Representatives for voting 249-158 to approve a formal investigation of the so-called "October Surprise" story. The investigation will examine allegations that the Reagan-Bush 1980 election apparatus, headed by late CIA director and Iran-contra superstar William Casey, cut a deal with Iran to delay the release of 52 Americans held hostage in the American embassy in Tehran until after the 1980 presidential election.

Despite howls of protest from House Republicans, (not one voted for the probe), the House did the right thing. There's just too much circumstantial evidence to ignore the issue. And Republicans should remember that former Tehran hostage Moorhead Kennedy, a Republican, was instrumental in lobbying for this probe.

And wouldn't it be better to find out today what happened rather than wait 30 years for Oliver Stone to tell the story in a film?

Dart: To Civic Center officials responsible for selling seats reserved for disabled fans to able-bodied fans at last week's basketball game against Duke. Worse, when the problem came to light, instead of asking the usurpers to move, they asked the disabled fans to squeeze in or move elsewhere.

Besides apparently violating the public accommodation portion of the Americans With Disabilities Act, which went into effect on Jan. 26 of this year, this incident says much about the base mentality at work in intercollegiate athletics. It's yet another sign of the utter heartlessness at the center of modern university life.

State University Chancellor Charles Reed was raked over the coals this week by women lawmakers for not having implemented a meaningful sexual assault program they proposed over a year ago. The legislators seem to think that the program's absence was partly responsible for the unconscionable coverup of the rape of a young woman at the University of South Florida, allegedly by a star basketball player. Reed accepted the criticism and promised to do better.

All well and good. But still, we must wonder where the priorities truly are when something like the Civic Center fiasco and the outrageous coverup of the USF rape story occur.

The unfortunate truth is that the reigning win-at-any cost ethic has turned our state university system into a virtual charnel house. What outrage will we learn of next?

Petty politics

Editor:

I wish to commend all the concerned students who marched to the Capitol yesterday morning to protest education budget cuts. I would also like to express my admiration for the Florida Students Association. They did a fantastic job organizing hundreds of students from across the state into a united front. Likewise, the FSU Student Government Association did a fine job of promoting the event. At the rally, students demonstrated the importance of continued funding for education in Florida. They were all together as students, regardless of race, religion or political affiliation.

Philpot

All, that is, except FSU Student Body President Brian Philpot. At an event where he was supposed to be representing all of the students of FSU, and indeed, all state university students, Brian was present primarily as a bigwig of the Seminole party, or so the sticker partially obscuring the student slogan on his t-shirt would have us believe. A sticker may not seem like a big deal, but petty political squabbles have blunted student lobbying efforts before. One FSA-sponsored march to the Capitol last fall was scheduled, unfortunately, the day before FSU's student senate elections. Members of both Seminole and Monarchy parties arrived at the rally wearing party attire and in the height of campaign fervor. The consequent bickering between members of opposing parties could not have helped our image as concerned citizens. Since then, most of us have learned from our mistakes. Members of both parties turned out for yesterday's rally in force, identifying themselves only as students. The rally was held in the spirit of cooperation among all students, and, for the most part, that spirit was upheld.

When confronted with the inappropriateness of plugging his party at a state-wide, nonpartisan event, Brian Philpot arrogantly replied, "Why not? We organized it." An outright lie. The Seminole party had nothing to do with it. It was the work of the FSA in cooperation with the FSU SGA, a group which is non-partisan as a whole. By putting his party before his role as a student leader, Brian gave the state Legislature the wrong message. Which is more important, party politics or our education? Brian, get your priorities straight!

Sharon Moskowitz,
FSU student senator

Convolted logic

Editor:

To Gregg Bellon's letter of Feb. 5: If you think the Flambeau stood up to "pressure from those influences that dangle the green in their faces to make them print what they want to read," look again at the Feb. 3rd and 4th issues of the Flambeau. When its editors trashed local politicians (Jack McLean, John Ausman) for "selling out" to powerful corporate influences (coal, CSX) and then practically sold the Feb. 4th (and 3rd) issue(s), in which their scathing editorial appeared, to CARE's unnerving journalistic logic. (I know, the Democrat sold them ads, too.)

The Flambeau's editors' words: "By providing any assistance at all to CSX's self-serving, corrupt effort to defeat the referendum, Jon Ausman is violating the trust of voters in this election and those who have supported him over the years." Substitute the words Flambeau for Jon Ausman, readers for voters and issue for election in that sentence and see how it reads. But journalism isn't the same as politics, right? Oh.

The Flambeau's editors expressed a vehement indictment against a specific corporation purchasing influence from specific local politicians and then sold that same corporation an embarrassing amount of ad space—in the very same issue! And if you don't think that selling an ad is selling influence, why do you think CSX bought all that ad space the day of the city elections?

Perhaps some issues warrant agreement between a paper's business and editorial staff to not to take quite so much money from such a "self-serving and corrupt" effort as CSX's, in order to drive home the point they make in a specific editorial. Yes, CSX has a lot of money, and the Flambeau probably needs whatever they can get. But how much different is the Flambeau from Jon Ausman or Jack McLean in taking political money from CSX? I guess you would have to define a level of influence. Politicians will argue that CSX has a right to a voice as much as any contributor. Of course, we all know that journalism just doesn't work that way. But that's not really the point.

Who, in this greedy society, is going to take the responsibility of occasionally setting examples of ethical conduct? Anyone? I guess not the untouchable world of journalism.

P.S. I voted for the referendum and not for Jack McLean.

What about soccer

Editor:

Will FSU get a soccer team? Many have asked the question, but very few have attempted to answer it. That's right, many times you could walk down the halls of FSU and hear the whispers "Will they get a soccer team." But never the whispers "yes, they will" or "no they won't." It seems that anyone who could answer this question avoids it. Sooner or later someone will have to step forward and answer this question, and maybe then all the soccer talent Florida produces won't be lost to other states.

Bottle Bill would put capitalism to work solving problems it created

BY ROBERT LESTON
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

As I was laughing over a letter in the Tallahassee Democrat that claimed all environmentalists were Nazis, my doorbell rang. I got up and answered it.

There he was.

He stared at me through glasses so big he looked like a four-foot Elton John.

"I need a job," he said.

"So?"

The little squirt from up the street just stood there, staring. He rubbed his eye and smeared dirt all over it.

I smiled ruefully and said: "OK, what's the punch line?"

He looked around and then he looked back at me. "I needed a job."

"And am I supposed to give you this job?"

"Yes."

I decided to play along. Maybe I could get him to rake the front and back yards for, oh, let's say $3.75?

"OK, what can you do?"

"Whatever you want me t'do."

"OK, rake the front and back yards."

"I can't."

"Why not?"

"My mother said I can't do any yard work. It's dang'rous."

"OK, then. You see all those bottles and cans in the recycling bin?"

"Yeah."

"You can have 'em. And if you walk up and down the streets collecting all the cans you see, you can get a whole bunch. Get your mother to take you down to the recycling center and they'll pay you for 'em."

Little Elton then took out a dart gun from his back pocket, aimed, and fired it at my head. It hit the screen door in front of me.

"For a penny a can. Pff. I gots lots of pennies at home. I need money. We're in a recession. Didn't you know that?"

My jaw dropped. Then I said: "What if you could get 10 cents? Would you collect the cans then?"

"Of course," he spat into the grass and then wiped his mouth with his hand, smearing even more dirt.

Florida Flambeau greenpiece

"With 10 of 'em I could get a buck, but right now it would take a hundred. Give me a call when they raise it. Right now I'd rather wash windows." He pulled out a finger and shot me again. He picked up his dart shaking his head and walked down to the next house.

That's Americans for you, even the little ones—capitalists.

What's in it for me, right? How can I get ahead? We are not Native Americans living in this society. Maybe if we were, or maybe if we adopted the same belief system, we would give our mother Earth the respect she deserves. But we are Americans, and being Americans means being capitalists. So can it be possible for a capitalistic society such as ours to live in harmony with the mother Earth it so relentlessly feeds on?

What's in it for me, right? How can I get ahead? We are not Native Americans living in this society. Maybe if we were, or maybe if we adopted the same belief system, we would give our Mother Earth the respect she deserves.

This is a good one for Arsenio Hall: Hummm.

Don't think about it too long, Arsenio: Not only do Americans monopolize the majority of the Earth's resources, but we produce more than any other people on the planet. A growing problem in Florida alone is that we are running out of places to put all of that

According to BOR spokesperson Pat Riordan, Holt and other students opposed to the fee hike will be heard by the board.

"I think they'll be taken seriously," Riordan said.

But the students' main problem isn't whether they'll be heard. Their main barrier lies in the fact that FSU's athletic fee proposal is only one of many student fee proposals from all nine state universities.

The fee proposals will be presented to the board as one big package. As a result, FSU's athletic fee proposal will not be voted separately. Either all of the fee proposals pass, or don't pass, Riordan said.

"This is an item that applies to all nine universities," Riordan said. "The students (of FSU) have a strong case to make, but it's difficult at this point to unhook this fee increase from the others."

Here's a rundown on other higher education business before the BOR today.

• A report on the Florida Undergraduate Scholars' Fund, a scholarship awarded to top Florida high school graduates, says the scholarship's recipients want more money. Recipients also reported they would like to be able to go on probation before losing their scholarship should their grade point average drop below the 3.2 requirement.

But the report will not recommend to the board that either of the actions be taken.

In fact, Riordan added, the BOR will consider decreasing the scholarship's value from $2,500 a year to $2,000 a year.

• The board is also expected to approve a request by the FSU psychology department to limit enrollment to 590 majors. The department currently does not have a cap on admission, but because of recent budget cuts and fewer faculty members, administrators believe an enrollment cap is the only way to maintain quality.

together electronically with the computing center, serving as a hub for the network's communications and maintenance.

The center's supercomputers are freely available to faculty members doing intensive research, but most students on campus do not have access to the multi-million dollar computers' capabilities.

If the network is completed, students living on campus would be able to connect their own Macintosh or IBM-compatible computers to the network from their dorm rooms. Students living off-campus could connect their computers to the network using modems, which allow computers to communicate over ordinary phone lines.

Plans are already underway to connect the major academic buildings to the network, but direct usage by students is just around the corner, according to Bennett.

He says his telecommunications office is currently working on a plan to implement the entire campus network within a year. The plan will be sent to Provost Robert Glidden's office by the end of this month.

"I think the president and the provost have emphasized it," Bennett said. "It's high on their priority list."

Glidden could not be reached Thursday for comment.

unnecessary garbage. The reason for this is obvious when you take into consideration that each Florida resident produces 8.3 pounds of garbage per day, totaling over 19.4 million tons of garbage a year.

Where does all this garbage go? According to a report done by the Florida Public Interest Research Group (FPIRG) and the National Environmental Law Center (NELC), 85 percent of this solid waste is disposed of in landfills and incinerators. Our landfills are closing; incinerators produce air pollutants and toxic ash and the cost of disposing waste at both is steadily increasing—$15 to $40 per ton at landfills and $33 to $70 per ton at incinerators.

Experts agree that an efficient way to reduce the amount of materials we dispose of in landfills and incinerators is by reusing and recycling the "minimum four" materials named in the 1988 Solid Waste Management Act (SWMA). These materials include newspapers, aluminum, glass and plastic containers. Many counties in Florida have taken the first step to improving the situation by initiating curb-side recycling programs. Although it is a good first step, these programs are only recycling 15 percent of the current waste stream while the rest is being buried in landfills or burned in incinerators.

Through the use of a cash incentive program such as the Bottle Bill, the study shows that recycling could be increased to rates between 75 and 97 percent. In the nine states that have adopted the Bottle Bill (Michigan, New York, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, Oregon and Delaware), there have been consistent reports of high return rates, on the viability of the plan.

Robert Holden, assistant director for supercomputing at the FSU computing center, thinks the plan can succeed, but only if the money is available.

"We have not been able to guarantee universal student access (to computers)," Holden said. "We'd like to make sure that every faculty member and student has some sort of permanent access to a computer."

"The major stumbling block is funding," Holden added.

The proposed network would cost the university about $1.2 million per year for the next two or three years, according to Holden.

While most of FSU's major departments have their own in-house computer networks, the real computing power on campus is located several miles away at the computing center at Innovation Park. The first phase of the proposed networking plan would be to connect the autonomous departmental computers to the university's main network.

Other major universities already provide networking capabilities and E-mail for students, but many ask students to pay an extra fee of up to $50 per year for access to their computer networks. Braswell said the student fee may not be necessary at FSU, though.

"If it were institutionally funded, we wouldn't have to ask for a tuition surcharge," he said.

reductions of litter and solid waste, and broad popular support.

The Bottle Bill is a simple program designed to increase recycling, reduce litter, and reduce a community's landfill problems by creating a cash incentive of a 5- to 10-cent deposit per container which is refunded when the container is returned for recycling; it also offers a convenient return option: any retailer who sells the beverage must accept the returns. Consequently, because of its nature, the Bottle Bill would achieve high recycling rates without spending tax dollars.

So are all our problems solved? In better and more definitive terms, as long as the Bottle Bill is passed through legislation won't somewhere between 75 and 97 percent of our solid waste problem be solved? Well, yes and no—that depends on the people of Florida. Despite the Bottle Bill's vast popular support, beverage industries have been successful in killing it. Manufacturers are extremely aware that if the Bottle Bill were to pass through the state's legislature, they would be forced to solve the problem through new recycling policies. They are unwilling to do this because they fear any changes that may affect their industrial infrastructure. But if the Bottle Bill is not passed, then no changes will occur—anywhere. Each year we will continue to produce more and more waste. When American consumers and industry throw away enough aluminum every three months to rebuild our entire commercial air fleet, how do we sit idly by and think to ourselves that change is unnecessary?

For more info on the bottle bill campaign and other environmental and consumer issues, call 561-6162.

Snakes slither into town tonight

BY JOSH MITCHELL

STAFF WRITER

Flambeau Warning: This article contains explicit material and may not be suitable for certain readers, so read on, sickos.

Call the county deacon, boys and girls, and make an appointment—if you plan on catching Atlanta's impotent sea snakes, that is. These guys(?), who skank into Club 506 tonight, are rude enough to make even the most devout atheist want to repent. And, lyrically, they make 2 Live Crew look like a band of virgin nuns. (Pssst. Just don't tell State Attorney Willie Meggs).

The sea snakes, who originally formed in Tampa in 1987, pride themselves on being as shocking as they can but the group's frontman, Thirteen, says the band's wearing of women's clothing during performances is all part of giving the fans their money's worth.

"So many bands today don't think of the visuals—they forget that there are five senses," said Thirteen in a phone interview from Tampa. "Our goal is to be as entertaining as possible."

Thirteen said the band, which claims KISS and Alice Cooper as influences, doesn't really think about the fact that they're playing in drag, although he realizes the draw potential of the wigs, torn stockings and mascara.

"It's really not that shocking to us anymore but I'm sure there are some people who come see us for that reason," he said.

Thirteen remembered one peculiar groupie in particular, though, who followed the band for puritanical reasons.

"We had this one woman who'd find out where we were playing and contact the club's managers threatening boycotts and picket lines if we were allowed to play there," he said.

But what, you ask, could drive one woman to such lengths? It couldn't have anything to do with the names of any of the band members. Ah, let's see, we've got a mister Buck Futt on guitar; the distinguished Dick Liquor playing bass; the very talented Spawn More on the drum kit; and band ornament/dancer Cherry Snow, who Thirteen says "was already a drag queen even before the band."

The real thing that sets the sea snakes apart, however, has got to be their song titles and truly tasteless lyrics. The song "Felching" has got to be the most appalling piece of shock art ever recorded. The song explicitly details a particular practice that even I find offensive.

A bit more tame is the song "Daisy Chain," a genuinely funny and catchy little number about a guy who "crashed a lesbo orgy dressed in drag" and who is determined to "make good" on his daisy chain.

Other songs of interest include, "Ebony Whore," and the thrash/punk song "Chicks With Dicks," which tells the saga of a young man who is surprised to discover that a woman he's picked up at a party is packing "15 pounds of meat," literally and figuratively.

Is the band trying to be the most tasteless band in the country, or even the world?

"As far as graphic lyrics, yeah, I guess I would be pretty proud of that," Thirteen said.

He said that, despite the lyrics, there is a message, there is a reason.

"It proves how lyrics offend people when a goddamned war won't, or rape or shootings that are commonplace," he said.

One thing Thirteen was clear to point out is that he and the other band members have split personalities, so to speak.

"Myself personally and Thirteen are two different people," he said. "What Thirteen believes in and what my other personality believes in aren't always the same."

According to Thirteen, the band hasn't come across as much adversity from distraught, or otherwise disgusted, fans as one might expect but their act has been shut down a few times.

"In these little East coast and Midwest towns it can be kind of a fuss sometimes," he said.

When asked what the band's ultimate goal might be, Thirteen was a little bit redundant but pretty darned forthright: "I guess it's to leave the biggest scar on the earth as possible before we exit—shake things up and make a mark."

The impotent sea snakes shock the masses tonight at Club 506 South on the corner of Woodward and St. Augustine. No band would dare open for these fellows. Doors open at 10; there is a cover. It is an 18-plus show. Rubber suits optional.

The Mighty Blues Band (pictured above) is indeed mighty big and mighty serious about the blues. Find out how serious tonight at the Club Downunder when they and Charles Atkins and the Blues Boys do the do like it ain't been done before.

There'll be a whole Lava Love in the Downunder Saturday night. "We sound like a cross between Petula Clark and Led Zeppelin," say band members. Mick Buchanan says a fair comparison would be that Lava Love sounds like the Archies with Betty singing. Gadzooks!

Ryan Bailey's "Painter's Box" is just one of many eclectic, exciting artworks on display at FSU's Fine Arts Gallery.

Artistic diversity abounds in show

BY PHOEBE FILLIS

FLAMBEAU WRITER

"Do blow-up dolls stick to the roof of your mouth like peanut butter?"

That's the question artist Corey Minion of Ohio poses in commenting on her fertility icon, "A Mixed Blessing," which epitomizes some of the unusual approaches to a vision of life, glimpsed at the seventh Florida National artistic competition opening tonight at Florida State's Fine Arts Gallery.

Because they are eclectic, the varied displays at this year's Florida National open media competition may compel, fascinate, horrify or inspire the viewer. But all 66 artists and their 83 works assembled spell out the creative process as it thrives in our country today.

One needn't be an art expert to appreciate fine works. In Naples, Florida artist Jack Dowd's basswood/mixed media sculpture of a "good ole boy" policeman, replete with motorcycle (the artist's family members helped him deliver it to the gallery), even the three dimensional veins on the statue's clubby hands have a message.

Is Russell Everett of Roanoke Alabama's "Meeting at Night" depicting a one-on-one with the devil? Take a look at the pale, marble face and one gets a feeling like something from a dream...or is it a night mirror?

For sheer aesthetics, check out the midnight blue night sky scene of Dean Gioia's "Voyeur With Crescent Moon & Massing Planets." Gioia's from Tallahassee and says of his work, "I like making paintings of self-absorbed people like myself, playing out their dramas beneath the stars and planets as if it really mattered."

Like an assemblage of many crab-like scuttling forms attempting to mount the summit of life, the amazing display by William Sapp, constructed of many individual pieces of adobe clay, makes a sharp, pictorial social commentary. Perhaps it poses the dilemma of humankind: Where are we all going to in such a hurry? The artist himself took several hours to set up the display, according to Viki Wylder, the registrar of exhibitions.

"This year's show is larger and its panel of judges were interested in making it inclusive of all media," Wylder said. "They embraced this idea, and I can see that as the strength of this show as a sampling of the whole country."

Wylder said that new to this year's competition is the honorary "Combined Talents" category. This includes 12 previously displayed artists from past shows, who were invited back. They will not vie for any prize, but their 24 works will astound and stimulate nevertheless.

The 7th Tallahassee Florida National exhibit featuring "Combined Talents" from previous competitions opens tonight with a gala reception from 7 to 9. Judges' decisions in the juried competition will be announced early today. The exhibit runs through March 15. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The show is open to the public and there is no charge. The FSU Fine Arts Gallery and Museum is located at West Tennessee Street and Copeland Avenue.

Seminoles, Sun Devils play series

PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

It was early season last year when Florida State made its trip to Tempe, Arizona, and set the stage for Arizona State's uncommonly frustrating season... and for its own remarkably dominating season. Sun Devils Coach Jeff Brock remembers well. "They came out here and gave us two heartbreaking losses at our home," Brock said.

The pair of extra-inning losses the Seminoles handed the Sun Devils started their rapid climb to No. 1 and ASU's plummet from a pre-season No. 1 ranking—a rather major plummet at that, considering ASU ended up just 35-27 and without a post-season regional tournament bid.

This year, the two teams tangle again at Tempe, starting tonight at 7 with games also on Saturday and Sunday.

"This is most definitely an early-season test," FSU coach Mike Martin said. "It's going to be tough."

Both teams are unblemished going in. The seventh-ranked Seminoles are 2-0 after a sweep of Charleston in their series opener. The Sun Devils, ranked 19th, are 3-0 with wins over Texas Tech and California-Riverside.

FSU's pitching staff, considered the team's strong point, will get its first test. Ace Roger Bailey, 1-0 with 1.80 ERA, starts tonight. Jim Rushworth, 1-0 and 2.25, starts Saturday and Bryan Harris or Tim Davis will be on the mound Sunday.

"We'll find out some things this weekend about our pitching," Martin said.

Brock, the NCAA's eighth-winningest coach and owner of two national championships, has the job of filling the loss of his top two pitchers from last year, Sean Rees and Gary Tatterson. And Brock is without three-time All-America Mike Kelly, who

Money was motive says defense witness

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
INDIANAPOLIS—The Miss Black America contestant who has accused former heavyweight champ Mike Tyson of rape was only interested in the fighter's money, two other contestants testified Thursday.

Defense attorneys called Madeline Whittington and Cecilia Alexander after the trial resumed following a one-day recess triggered by a fire at the hotel where the jury was sequestered.

One juror was excused because of stress caused by the blaze that left three people—one hotel guest and two firefighters—dead. An alternate was seated.

Tyson, 25, is charged with rape and criminal deviate conduct for an alleged attack on the Miss Black America contestant in his hotel room early last July 19. If convicted, the fighter faces 60 years in prison.

Whittington testified the accuser was excited shortly after Tyson asked her on a date the afternoon before the alleged attack.

She said she and the accuser talked in a bathroom just after Tyson met contestants at a pageant rehearsal.

"She told me Mike Tyson asked her out. She said she was very excited," Whittington said.

"Yes, of course I'm going," she quoted the accuser as saying. "It's a lot of money. And he's dumb. See

Bowden gives Ward basketball break

BY JIM VERTUNO
SPORTS EDITOR

Good news for the FSU basketball team.

FSU football coach Bobby Bowden said Wednesday that he will push back the start of spring practice to accommodate point guard/quarterback Charlie Ward and allow him to stay with the basketball team.

Spring practice was originally scheduled to start March 10. Bowden said he will instead start the 16th allowing Ward to be with the basketball team through the ACC tournament which runs March 12-15.

Should the basketball team continue into the NCAA tournament, Bowden said he will keep postponing spring practice until Ward is available for football. Kind of indicative of how important Ward is to the success of the football team. Question is, how is quarterback Kenny Felder, most likely Ward's backup on the football field, taking all of this?

Ward

The few who came saw Williams, with his Michael Cooper-like socks pulled up to his knees, use his lanky body to go over and around a sluggish FSU team to score 38 points.

Wednesday's 93-85 win over FSU was Williams' seventh straight game scoring 30 or more points. Clearly an NBA-caliber player.

In fact, Williams passed up a chance to play pro ball after his junior season and it looks like it may have been the right choice. He certainly hasn't hurt his draft potential, as anybody who watches him play can see. On some of his shots Wednesday, it appeared as if he were looking at a 24-second shot clock (used in the NBA) as opposed to the 45-second clock used in college ball.

The other Williams at Maryland, coach Gary, is the only coach to have coached in the Big Three conferences of college hoops—the Big East (Boston College), the Big 10 (Ohio State), and the Atlantic Coast Conference. Williams coached in a fourth conference, the Colonial Athletic Conference when he was at American University.

Maybe it gets kind of old to keep talking about how tough the ACC is, but what better example than the other games in the conference Wednesday night? Clemson, not known to be dangerous on the court, dumped Georgia Tech, and Duke suffered its first loss of the year to North Carolina. Not to mention the fact that FSU (3rd in the ACC) got drubbed by the league's last place team.

Looks like the College of Charleston is the punching bag of choice in the ACC. After dropping two games at FSU last weekend, the Cougars visit Georgia Tech today through Sunday.

The Yellow Jackets could be one of the strongest competitors for the ACC baseball crown. Tech recorded a 42-26 mark last season and will be shooting for their eighth consecutive bid to the NCAA Tournament.

The Florida State softball team opens the season Sunday with a double header against Samford. The 13th-ranked Lady Seminoles went 62-12 last season and finished fifth in the NCAA Tournament.

what actress and ex-wife) Robin Givens got out of him?" She was very determined to go out with him."

Whittington said Tyson was very rude a few hours later at opening ceremonies for the Indiana Black Expo, coming on to contestants and mocking the Rev. Jesse Jackson as the preacher spoke.

"I heard (Tyson) say, 'You want to come to my room? You want to party? I know I'm not going to get none but you want to come anyway?'" Whittington recalled.

Whittington said she told Tyson to be quiet because she wanted to hear Jackson speak, to which she said Tyson replied: "Who does she think she is, little Catholic school ....."

Alexander also said the accuser talked about Tyson's wealth.

"(Another) contestant said, 'Here comes your husband.' The girl said he can't speak very well," said Alexander.

"Mike doesn't have to know how to speak," she quoted the accuser as saying. "He'll make the money. I'll do the talking."

Alexander also said she saw the accuser several times after the alleged attack and the only time the accuser's demeanor seemed different was when she complained about not finishing in the top 10 in the swimsuit competition.

Dr. Margaret Watanabe, an Indiana University gynecologist, disputed earlier expert testimony by saying she has examined women who have suffered vaginal cuts during consensual sex.

She said she reviewed the report from Dr. Thomas Richardson, who examined the accuser about 26 hours following the alleged attack.

"It's my opinion that I cannot tell if it was forced entry," she said of the accuser's claims.

Baseball owners delay Nintendo bid for team

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

SEATTLE—Major League Baseball's Ownership Committee Thursday put the brakes on a bid by a Japanese-led Seattle investor group trying to purchase the Seattle Mariners for $100 million.

The committee announced it needed "additional information" before deciding the fate of the bid and indicated a decision might not come before the expiration of Mariners owner Jeff Smulyan's March 27 deadline. After that, he will consider bids from other cities, most notably Tampa-St. Petersburg.

"There is additional information and documentation that needs to be reviewed," committee chairman Fred Kuhlmann said. "The Committee will meet again in March, but it is unlikely that the matter will be ready for submission to the major league ownership at that time."

hit 373 with 15 homers and 56 RBI.

"It's just not clear right now," Brock said. "Nothing (last) weekend was solidified."

Brock's not alone. Martin has already said it'll take his team much of the early season to find its character.

"We've just got a lot of questions to answer," Martin said.

As an answer to its lack of power, FSU did receive a glimmer of hope from Kevin McCray in the opening series. The first-baseman transfer from South Florida had two home runs and five RBI in the series.

"He hit well (last) weekend," Martin said after the game. "We just hope he can maintain it."

No doubt FSU's big-attention player is Chris Roberts, who had an impressive opening series last weekend with six hits in nine at bats. He had one home run and four RBI.

Roberts is looking forward to tonight.

"We want to go out there and do the same thing we did last year," Roberts said. "It'll be tough."

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New competitions and awards will make the months ahead truly memorable. Financial success comes through independent enterprises. A real estate deal will improve your economic situation in May. Postpone travel until July. Romance soars to new heights when you and your mate ignore family pressures. Obtaining an advanced degree will boost a loved one's earning potential. Be supportive of a young person's aspirations.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: novelist Charles Dickens, jazz musician Eubie Blake, actress Enn Gray, pitcher Dan Quisenberry

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have the energy and incentive to accomplish great things. Put your loved ones' desires ahead of your own pleasures. Follow an exercise program with enthusiasm. Better health lies ahead!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your life takes a new direction without your even realizing it. Do not be upset if a relationship comes to an end. A shrewd career move brings new challenges and rewards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Curb a tendency to argue with family over money. Learning high-tech skills will boost your earning power. Show more appreciation for your mate's efforts around the house.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Loving partners will rejoice wholeheartedly in each other's success. Do not let envy keep you from offering your sincere congratulations. Your words of encouragement inspire a young person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A change of procedure at work could add to your clout. Tend to those chores you have been postponing. Then, you can leave for the weekend without a care in the world!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Helping a child overcome feelings of jealousy brings the two of you closer. Welcome an offer of help from a dear friend or colleague. Widen your circle of friends by socializing this weekend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An influential person gives you strong encouragement now. Forget your doubts and fears about a romantic relationship. Love will find a way! A change of lifestyle leads to new peace of mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Although a courtship gets off to a terrific start, there could be third party interference later on. Keep your cool. An overly aggressive attitude will only create unhappiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Learn to be a better listener and your circle of friends will grow. Curb a tendency to talk shop at social events. A romance you thought finished could start up again!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Projects connected with home and family thrive. A phone call you made a week ago is finally returned. Work goes especially smoothly in the after-noon hours. Emphasize teamwork.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not grow impatient while waiting for certain promises to be fulfilled. These things take time. Loved one asks a special favor. Do what you call to make a parent's life easier.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pay attention if someone tries to warn you about a certain course of action. This person may have a lot more experience than you do! Get together with that special loved one tonight.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are avid readers who take a great interest in world affairs. They tend to be more global than local ill their views and will want to travel widely. These Aquarians' gift for concentration and detail makes them excellent teachers and writers. Born philosophers, they take any setbacks in stride confident of eventual success. # FSU needs to rebound in ACC with a win over Clemson Saturday

BY MARK NESSMITH

STAFF WRITER

"No Excuses" was the Florida State football team's rallying cry last season.

Now the 23-ranked FSU basketball team will need to adopt that slogan as it tries to bounce back from a Wednesday night upset loss to Atlantic Coast Conference cellar-dweller Maryland. The Seminoles (14-6, 6-4 in the ACC) need to stay focused when they face the Clemson Tigers (12-6, 2-5) in the Civic Center, Saturday at 4 p.m.

Team focus was one of the things FSU coach Pat Kennedy was concerned about Wednesday night after the loss to Maryland. Kennedy said his team seemed "dazed . . . for no particular reason" during the game.

"To get this far in the conference and then have the bottom just fall out like that, that gives you cause for concern," Kennedy said after the game.

Freshman guard Bob Sura and the rest of the Seminoles are looking to the Clemson game as an opportunity to get back into stride as they head into the final month of regular-season play.

"The Maryland game definitely left us flat because it was a game we were supposed to win," Sura said Thursday night. "And we should have won it. And coming into this game, which, I guess we're supposed to win, we just want to get the win and get back into stride. It's sort of a must-win situation because we've got to gain some momentum going into the stretch run of the season."

Like Maryland, Clemson coach Cliff Ellis' team is familiar with the bottom end of the ACC standings. But (again like Maryland) Clemson may be stronger than its record indicates. Clemson guard Chris Whitney is second in the ACC in three-point shooting, freshman center Sharone Wright has played well of late (12.6 points pergame, 7.5 rebounds per game) and the Tigers are rolling after a surprise 95-87 thrashing of Georgia Tech Wednesday.

Sophomore guard Andre Bovaine and forwards Devin Gray and Steve Harris round out the Tigers' starting lineup.

'The Maryland game definitely left us flat because it was a game we were supposed to win. And we should have won it. And coming into this game, which, I guess we're supposed to win, we just want to get the win and get back into stride.'

—FSU's Bob Sura

Kennedy will attack Wright (6-10) with his usual frontcourt of Rodney Dobard and Doug Edwards. Sam Cassell, Chuck Graham and Charlie Ward will be the guards used to defend against Whitney's three-point shooting. Ward is second in the ACC in steals, averaging 2.8 per game.

Graham and Sura have been mired in somewhat of a slump lately, shooting just 35.4 percent (21.7 percent on three-pointers) over the last four games. But the FSU frontcourt may be picking up the slack.

Dobard scored a career-high 28 points against Maryland and has scored in double figures in his last eight games. Edwards leads the team in double-doubles (10 or more points and rebounds) with nine.

"Earlier in the season the guards were carrying us," Sura said. "But lately we've been going inside more because we've been in sort of a shooting slump."

"The big guys like Rodney Dobard and Doug Edwards have really responded. They're shooting real well."

Looking for similarities between the Seminoles and Tigers? FSU has mis-fired on 41.9 percent of its free-throw attempts over the last four games. And Clemson's shot just 57.2 percent for the season.

Bob Sura and the Seminoles can't afford to lose this ACC home game.

The right to choose Activists on both sides say abortion rights are safe for the time being

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Activists on both sides of the issue say Florida's abortion rights are protected—at least for the moment—even with the probability of a reversal of the Roe v. Wade decision later this year.

"In the short run, no matter what happens federally, Florida's women's rights to abortion will be protected," Janice Compton, director of the Florida Abortion Rights Action League, said last week.

Activists say Florida is safe for the time being from a U.S. Supreme Court ruling overturning Roe because the state's high court has interpreted abortion to be included in the Florida Constitution's right-to-privacy clause. But, they are quick to add, that doesn't mean the battle to restrict abortion will cease.

Carole Griffin, president of Big Bend Right to Life, an anti-abortion organization based in Tallahassee, affirmed that belief. She said she would love to have language in the Florida statutes restricting abortion.

"We must convince the people we elected that abortion hurts women," she said.

One way anti-abortion lobbyists have tried to restrict access to abortion has been to push the Legislature for laws that would require a woman to seek spousal consent before getting an abortion, or for women under the age of 18 to get approval from their parents.

But this and other legislation, including a bill killed in House subcommittee last week, have failed to become law. And pro-choice advocates say there's not much chance abortion in Florida will be restricted soon.

"As long as the makeup of the state Supreme Court remains as is, it's unlikely that restrictive abortion laws would pass," Compton said from her office in Jacksonville. "If by any chance any restrictive bills pass the state Legislature, the Supreme Court would find them unconstitutional."

Florida's right-to-privacy clause has already withstood one challenge to abortion rights, in 1989, according to Sara Pines of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

"Florida's rule was challenged and the state's highest court found that a woman's right to abortion was protected by her fundamental right to privacy in the state's constitution," said Pines in a phone interview from her Washington, D.C. office. "State courts generally hold the precedent, and that may be tested by any proposed restrictive legislation. But they should ultimately be protected by the right to privacy."

Restrictive legislation, according to pro-choice advocates, includes such legislation as that heard in the state House of Representatives last week. One bill, entitled the "Women's Informed Choices Act," was killed in the House Health and Rehabilitative Services subcommittee.

The bill would have made possible

Those who support free football tickets in exchange for higher athletic fees at Florida State University scored a 7-2 victory at a Board of Regents meeting Friday, making the hotly debated hike official.

Among those in favor of the fee increase were FSU President Dale Lick, who sent the proposal to the BOR, and Student Body President Brian Philpot.

"I hope this is not an issue that divides the campus as it seems to," Philpot said after the vote Friday.

In the more than three months that the athletic fee increase has been up in the air, more than 8,000 students have signed a petition circulated by the student-run Committee to Defeat the Athletic Fee Increase.

Under the approved plan, students will pay $3.35 a credit hour—an increase of $2.20 a credit hour—when they pay tuition next fall and spring. In exchange, all full-time students will get in free to home football games.

"We gave a good fight," said Darren Grant, a member of the anti-athletic-fee committee. "You fight the fight and when it's over, it's over."

Regent Timothy Cerio, one of the two who voted against the fee increase, sympathized with Grant.

"I just think it's a bad message to send, to (triple) an athletic fee when it's not necessary," Cerio said.

"I don't know how I would have voted in better economic times," he added.

But Philpot said this is a good year to raise students' athletic fees since there are no plans to raise tuition for next fall.

"As long as we can keep the tuition increase low this year, the athletic increase should be afford-

That's when the Board of Regents passed a resolution unanimously calling upon the governor and Legislature to retain 3-percent salary increases promised to begin Feb. 15. Because of revenue shortfalls in the state's budget, the pay raises are looking less and less likely.

"I cannot reiterate how important that little 3 percent . . . is," said SUS Chancellor Charles Reed.

Lawyer to request stay of repatriation order

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

MIAMI—A lawyer for thousands of Haitian refugees said Sunday he will ask the Supreme Court for an emergency stay of an order allowing the government to forcibly repatriate the migrants, citing new evidence of political persecution and violence in Haiti.

The U.S. government is repatriating refugees trying to flee the impoverished island nation, denying their claims they have suffered political persecution. But lawyer Ira Kurzban said he has learned of one group of refugees who were repatriated but then found to have legitimate claims for political asylum.

His evidence, he said, indicates many more repatriated refugees may not have valid claims and should therefore be allowed into the United States.

"We're going to seek an emergency stay from the Supreme Court in terms of repatriation in light of this evidence and in light of what appears to be the government's clear deception not only to the court but to the American people," he said.

Kurzban, who works through the Haitian Refugee Center in Miami, said he has information and documents showing 41 Haitian refugees who were repatriated in November are now held at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and will be allowed to seek political asylum in the United States.

The 41 refugees were among a group of 535 Haitians returned to the island nation in November during a brief period between the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' approval of forced repatriations and U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins' stay of that order.

Administration breaks promise, uses student money on University Center

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University students will help pay for seating expansion at Doak Campbell Stadium, even though officials originally promised student money would not be used for the project.

The expansion, which is part of the University Center project, will cost $9 million and add 14,000 seats to the stadium's current 60,000-seat capacity, according to FSU president Dale Lick.

Lick said the original expansion plan called for the seats to be sold to the general public. But he said FSU's ad hoc Athletic Fee Committee, which was formed to study the feasibility of an athletic fee increase in the wake of FSU's move into the Athletic Coast Conference, determined that 8,500 of the seats should be reserved for and paid for by students.

Had the seats not been designated for students, Lick added, the extra seats would have been paid for by ticket sales to the general public.

"There is a trade-off," Lick said Sunday. "The student fee money replaces . . . the money that would have been made from seat sales (to the general public)."

The student athletic fee, which is assessed to students when they pay for their classes each semester, was increased from $1.15 per credit hour to $3.35 per credit hour by the state Board of Regents Friday. The increase goes into effect this fall.

The athletic fee will entitle the majority of students to free admission to all home football games, an arrangement found at all other universities in the ACC. FSU officials have designated 22,500 seats for FSU students at Doak Campbell stadium. The school currently has an enrollment of more than 29,000.

But not everyone is happy about student money being used to fund the stadium expansion.

Darren Grant, spokesperson for a student-run committee set up to oppose the fee increase, says the use of the athletic fee to expand the stadium was not properly advertised to students.

"Students were told the athletic section (of the University Center) would be paid from private money," Grant said. "(So) most of them understood that it wasn't going to be their money."

"Part of the athletic fee money is going to secure (the expansion) bond," Grant added. "Students should have been told this, and the university administration, to our knowledge, avoided telling students that."

Lick pointed to the 22,500 seats reserved for FSU students at home football games, up from 14,000, as significant. And he said the increase in seating will be particularly important as FSU enrollment grows to nearly 40,000 students within the next 10 years.

"The beauty of it is that they will have the seats reserved forever," Lick said. "We'll certainly need that many more of them available."

BOR ACTION

FROM STAFF REPORTS

In other news from the Florida Board of Regents meeting Friday:

- The BOR heard a report on pending scholarship cuts for students receiving financial aid from Florida.

Due to budget cuts currently being hashed out by the Legislature, some scholarships could be slashed by as much as 70 percent of their original value next school year, according to Laurey Strycker, an official in the Department of Education.

The Gold Seal Scholarship, a $2,000 merit award given to vocational students, would be a $600 award if the Legislature doesn't generate new revenue this year.

The other merit scholarship, the Florida Undergraduate Scholars Fund, which approximately 9,000 students currently receive, would drop from a $2,500 award to a $2,000 award.

Recipients of the Florida Student Assistant Grant face a roughly 20 percent reduction in their award.

Regent Betty Castor, who is also the state's commissioner of education, expressed disgust at the cuts in need-based and merit awards.

"I think that's appalling!" Castor said.

- The BOR also created an ad hoc committee to consider suspending student representatives from school if they are charged with a criminal offense or are found guilty of a serious violation of the student conduct code.

Student representatives include athletes, student government officials, and leaders of student organizations.

Several regents warned that the board should make sure the suspensions would not violate students' civil rights.

"I want to be very cautious," said Regent DuBose Ausley.

The president of the university would be the only person with the power of revoking the suspension under the board's preliminary plan.

The ad hoc committee will report back to the BOR at its March 23 meeting.

- The board granted Florida State University's request to limit enrollment in its psychology department to 590 majors and authorized the planning stage for a doctorate geography program at FSU.

"management flexibility," allowing university officials to fund the pay raises. Faculty salary increases are currently funded through legislation.

Reed acknowledged that for now the raises may have to come out of money originally intended to go elsewhere in the universities.

"If we have to take faculty salary raises out of the money we have, we will do that. Nobody has to give us any money," Reed said.

"We'll fund it out of our own hide," he added.

Florida State University President Dale Lick agreed the salary raises are "a top priority."

"It's a token but it's very important," Lick said.

He added that since next year's pay raises are based on this year's salary, if the raises don't go through, next year's raises will be smaller than expected.

FSU Provost Robert Glidden echoed the same concern, but added that the problem goes beyond money.

"I think it's serious," Glidden said. "And it's not so much the amount of money, as it is a depressing signal."

Glidden added that he fears FSU will lose some of its top faculty members to schools able to make them better offers. The university has already lost three renowned professors this year as a result of budget cuts.

"It is a serious morale problem," Glidden said. "We're in a mode where we're asking people to do more and more."

Raises

pay raises Jan. 1, but then the raises were pushed back even further during a special session of the Legislature last December.

And now, once again, the Legislature is talking like it won't fund the raises, meaning university faculty probably shouldn't count on receiving a raise any time this year.

"It's one of the most devastating blows to the university system I can think of," Reed said.

The board's resolution also calls upon the governor and Legislature to give the university system

Disshed again

Florida State University students have been burned once again by their own administration and student leader.

This time, the traitors are University President Dale Lick and Student Body President Brian Philpot. Both spoke out in favor of an astronomical increase in student athletic fees at Friday's Board of Regents meeting, where the fees were approved and set into motion for next fall.

For Philpot, betrayal doesn't come as a big surprise. In the last year he's been student body president, Philpot has done nothing but suck up to the FSU administration in disregard of students' wishes.

It happened with last fall's tuition hikes, heavily supported of course by the big man himself. And it has happened once again with the athletic fee increase, even though more than 8,000 students signed a petition opposing the increase and the usually spineless student senate passed a resolution against it.

Maybe Philpot and his fraternity brothers don't mind their parents paying the extravagant athletic fee next fall in exchange for "free" admission to football games, but there are plenty of others out there who: a) have to pay the exorbitant fee out of their own pockets and/or b) could care less about going to a Seminole football game.

What's really obnoxious is that Philpot has admitted to realizing the increase will make a lot of students angry. But so what, he says, this is the pragmatic thing to do. What he really means is that it's the better thing for him to do—gotta maintain a certain repertoire, 'ya know.

It seems to us as though things were going just fine the way they were. Those students who wanted to go to games, went, and those who didn't, didn't. Where's the problem in that?

In fact, there seem to be many more problems with the new athletic fee, problems that both Philpot and Lick, the plan's creator, acknowledge. For one, no way in hell will there be enough student seats during a big Duke/FSU basketball game, so what that means is students who have paid over $100 a year in athletic fees will be turned away at the door or forced to buy tickets.

But it doesn't end there. It now looks as though part-time students will have to pay the new athletic fee, without receiving free admission into games. Instead, Lick is saying they will get discounted prices on their tickets.

And even more insulting to students is the fact that part of the revenue generated from the athletic fee will go toward funding expansion of Doak Campbell Stadium, even though students were promised at the onset of the whole University Center project that none of their money would pay for the jock palace.

It's still too early to tell what kind of president Lick will be toward students, but the athletic fee isn't a good sign. Only one week after listening to a majority of students oppose the fee at a public hearing, Lick went along with plans to adopt an athletic fee just like the ones in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

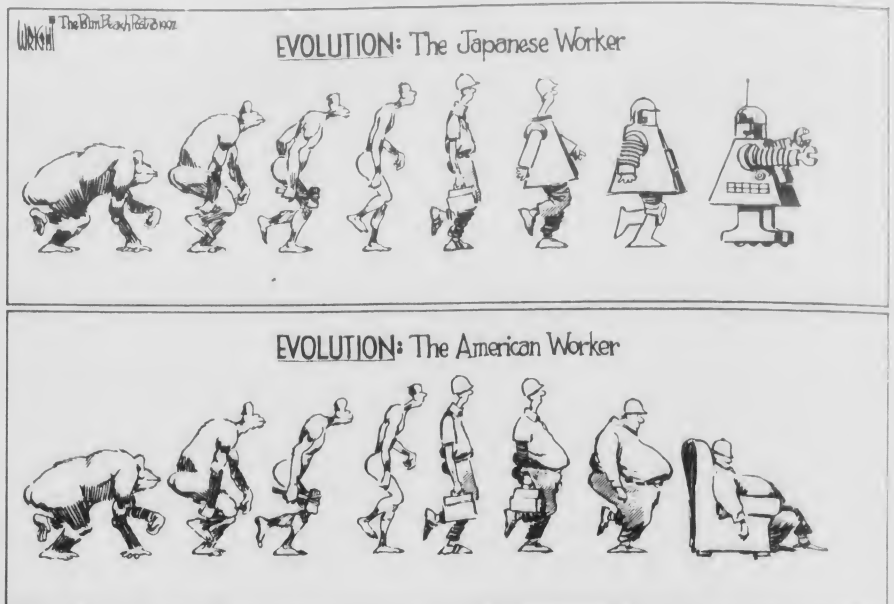

Lick's emphasis on collegiate athletics was more than obvious before he came to FSU. While president of Georgia Southern, he started a football program and watched it grow into a national powerhouse, and the University of Maine, with Lick at the helm, experienced great growth in its athletic department. In light of that, Lick's advocacy of such a monstrous athletic fee looks even scarier.

God help us if sports at FSU get any bigger.

LETTERS

In defense of Willie Meggs

Editor:

In the Jan. 22 issue of the Flambeau, there were two articles trashing State Attorney Willie Meggs' motives for his crackdown on "adult" videos.

There are two things that need to be said in favor of the crackdown.

One, the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights does not include the protection of pornography. Every time the issue has come before a federal (or even any state court), pornography lost.

Two, pornography has been directly linked to sex-related crimes.

• James Weaver, a communications professor at the University of Kentucky, conducted a study. He observed when men watch sex scenes selected from ordinary R-rated movies, especially scenes between consenting adults, they developed a loss of respect for women and believed women to be more sexually promiscuous that did not exist before the viewing. They also favored lighter penalties against a convicted rapist.

• Repeated studies by many colleges (i.e. University of Manitoba and Purdue University), supported by an article in a 1980 issue of Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, found that continued exposure to pornography increases the incidents and acceptance of male aggression against women.

• A psychologist from the Lino Lakes Program in Minnesota described the effects of pornography as "like a shot of whiskey to an alcoholic."

There is much more I could say about how pornography devalues women, the institution of marriage, the act of sex, and reduces all humanity to simple sex machines. I do not have time and space to do so.

I applaud Mr. Meggs' efforts to remove this trash from our city's video market.

Student rally was effective

Editor:

This letter comes in response to your editorial entitled "Get a clue!" in the Feb. 6, 1992 edition of the Florida Flambeau.

Your editorial implies that students were uninformed and ineffectual. The truth is that students, although not as informed on the fiscal issues, are quite aware of the realistic effects of budget cuts:

- Students know they cannot get the necessary classes.

- Students know they have to sit on the floor in some classes due to overcrowding.

- Students know they may not be able to attend summer classes.

- Students know they will be spending more time at their university unless the budget cuts stop.

On your allegations of the students not knowing their legislators: Tuesday was an opportunity for them to find out who represents them in state government. The Florida Student Association provided group leaders, who took students to the 160 legislators' offices. Students were not lost sheep as you suggested, and those students who were unsure as to which legislators to visit were given guidance in the fourth floor rotunda as needed.

Your editorial also called for more student rallies.

This is an ineffectual request if I have ever heard one. For students to make a weekly appearance would soon lose its power. The purpose of this rally was to show legislators that we, the students, are off our duffs and ready to act through our voices and our votes. Now we must concentrate on writing and talking to legislators, attending committee meetings, and voting for the best lawmakers. Anyone who knows about effectiveness knows a rally is a tool to kick-off a campaign, to inspire the troops, and to get the issues to the forefront. The "We're Off Our Duffs" rally did all three. The soldiers of quality education have symbolically begun their march toward better education funding policy and our legislators know we are now a force to be reckoned with.

The Flambeau once again proved to the student bodies of both FSU and FAMU that it is not a real newspaper, but a knee-jerk publication which uses good press opportunities to jest the students who truly care about the future of Florida. Issues are issues, but there is no place for jokes in the budget crisis of Florida. The next time the editorial board gives out "Darts and Laurels" I suggest you give a dart to yourselves and a laurel to the students of Florida who are "off their duffs."

The right message?

Students were proudly proclaiming last week that they were "Off their duffs." But some say the opposite approach—in the right places—would be more effective.

Get on your duffs, not off 'em

BY MICHAEL MCCARTHY

FLAMBEAU WRITER

"There's got to be a way, a better way."
—Nirvana, Territorial Pissings, Nevermind

This last Tuesday, hundreds of students marched to the Capitol, reacting to the governor's threat that he will keep on cutting programs until people got off their duffs and complained for a change. This is the second march students have made on the Capitol. The first one didn't work, and this one probably won't either. The students' time would have been better spent if they had marched to Clyde and Costello's.

Marching to the Capitol seems like a dramatic display of citizen action. Yet, legislators may easily leave the Capitol complex during the march and avoid confrontation, waiting until the crowds disperse to return.

Tuesday's march will have as much impact as Marshall Ledbetter's siege of the Capitol—the demands will be laughed at and forgotten. So, students need to find a middle ground between Ledbetter's federal violations and the conventional forms of protest we have been taught to use. Students need to go where legislators have no choice but to notice their presence.

What better way to do it than to fill every table, stool and standing space in the Legislature's highest chamber, Clyde and Costello's? They might speak down to you in their offices, but keep them from getting to the bar and you have the upper hand.

You won't just be stopping them from drinking, you'll be sitting in the chairs and standing on the balcony where they like to strut and make deals on important matters like public potty parity. You'd be getting in the way of their fun and ruining their good time.

Students need to play the opposite game of the lobbyist. Instead of treating the legislators with free booze, food and trips, inconvenience the lawmakers who dare to have a party in our town while the state's services fall apart.

When Thursday rolls around and legislators are trying to leave early for a three day weekend, what if the students drove their cars around the Capitol as if FSU or FAMU had just won the biggest game of the year? What if Pensacola, Duval, Jefferson and Monroe streets, and the Apalachee Parkway were so jammed with cars that the legislators were stuck in their parking garage or spent an extra hour fighting traffic to get out of town?

You're right, they're probably being paid by the state for the gas. Okay then, what if one day the legislators went to an elevator jammed with civic-minded students wanting to learn more about state government? What if those lawmakers who were able to cram into one of these elevators discovered that one student stepped off at each floor, with another stepping on to fill his or her place? Perhaps they would give up on trying to reach the free food at the 22nd floor observatory.

Or, instead of storming the Capitol Ledbetter style, do it the U.S. Army way—in Dolby Stereo. Bring every boom box and boom car from all three campuses to the Capitol complex and blast them with V-89 and 2 Live Crew. Make each and every lawmaker's eardrums poignantly aware of the students' anger when they step outside and maybe they will spend more time in their chambers working.

Of course, some legislators and columnists might say that the students are not offering any solutions. They want the students to propose which taxes need to be raised or which programs cut. If the lawmakers not only want us to tell them what we want, but to give them the plans to accomplish it as well, then perhaps they are the lazy state workers that need to be laid off.

I say no legislator should be partying in this town until they finish their work first. It's time for students to get on their duffs—at Clyde and Costello's

Cancer Society is bustin' for bucks

BY CATHY AREU
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Unsuspecting Leon County residents may find themselves singing the jailhouse blues with fellow innocent inmates on February 25, 26 and 27—for charity's sake.

The American Cancer Society is encouraging everyone to get involved in its yearly fund-raising project, Jail and Bail, by arresting a friend, foe, co-worker, boss, student, teacher, spouse, or anyone willing to spend some time in the slammer for a good cause.

Community members will be snatched from their jobs, homes, or classrooms by off-duty officers from the Leon County Sheriff's department and taken to a mock jail at either Governor's Square mall or FSU's Union Green.

"People get caught up in the fun of it and momentum gets going," Andy Cook, director for Jail and Bail, said last week.

Bail for the new jail birds will be set by acting judges based on the number of friends they have willing to pay for their freedom with tax-deductible contributions to the American Cancer Society.

For the first time at Florida State University, the fund-raising project will be brought to campus by Alpha Phi Omega, an FSU co-ed fraternity, to gain more support from students, professors, and administrators. Cook believes FSU's involvement in the jail-a-thon this year will help the organization reach its goal of $50,000.

Alpha Phi Omega's involvement in the project was inspired by the University of Florida, which has been hosting the event successfully for more than five years. Last year Gainesville's branch of the American Cancer Society raked in $110,000 from the Jail and Bail with UF's help.

"If UF can do it, we can do it better," said Mellissa Overmire, Alpha Phi Omega Jail and Bail co-chairperson.

Leon County's Jail and Bail began in 1986 and has raised more than $25,000 a year since then. And organizers at The American Cancer Society and Alpha Phi Omega are hoping for a record breaking year of Jail and Bail this time.

Cook predicts at least 30 prisoners will fill the mock jails at all times of the day for charges ranging from harassment at work to playing too slow on the golf course. She added that some people even bring their video cameras to the site to record their spouses who are behind bars decked out in black and white striped attire.

Overmire said the project's goal is not only to raise money for cancer but to educate people about it. Jail birds will be given pamphlets and posters with facts on cancer.

FSU students interested in participating in the fund-raiser can pick up Jail and Bail forms at their sorority or fraternity house, the FSU Union on Tuesday and Wednesday, or call the American Cancer Society at 877-6232. All forms and $25 must be turned in by Friday.

Rape

A 27-year-old Tallahassee woman was attacked, dragged into a wooded area and raped early Friday morning by a man she had just met at a lounge, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said Sunday.

At 2:55 a.m. Friday, police received a call from a citizen who reported hearing screams coming from the area of Stuckey and Iamonia streets. When officers arrived they found a woman bleeding from the mouth with a facial cut. Police searched the area but were not able to locate the suspect.

The woman was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center for treatment.

Police are looking for a 19-year-old black male, 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a medium build and dark complexion. The suspect was clean shaven, and wore blue jeans and a long black jacket made of quilted material. He was also wearing a pager and carrying a portable phone.

Shooting suspect arrested

A 16-year-old boy was taken into custody Friday evening for shooting a Tallahassee woman earlier that day, Kiracofe said.

The victim, 18, of Tallahassee, was shot at 12:28 a.m. Friday as she sat in a friend's car. The friend had stopped in the 2500 block of Saxon Street to let out a passenger when someone started shooting at the car. One bullet passed through the side of the car, went through the victim's right arm and lodged in her right lung. No motive for the shooting could be established at the time.

Kenneth Green of 313 W. Harrison St. was arrested at his home at 6:30 p.m. Friday for the shooting.

Report: crime's rising

BY STAFF REPORTS

Every major crime category except sex offenses was on the rise last year in Tallahassee, with property crimes showing some of the sharpest increases, according to a study released Friday by the Tallahassee Police Department.

The study dealt with crime occurring inside the city limits and reported to TPD and the Leon County Sheriff's Office in 1991.

There were 13 murders in Tallahassee last year, compared to eight in 1990, for an increase of 62.5 percent. Robberies increased by 37.7 percent, burglaries by 32.6 percent, larcenies by 9.9 percent, aggravated assaults by 3.1 percent and auto thefts by 50.5 percent. Forcible sex offenses dropped by 9.2 percent.

More specific figures on the number of crimes reported in each category were not available Sunday.

TPD spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said Sunday he hopes the reason for the decrease in the number of forcible sex offenses is because of prevention seminars and programs put on by TPD.

"We may have given them some help in knowing what to look for and by giving them ideas on how to keep from becoming a victim," he said.

As for the dramatic rise in auto thefts, Kiracofe said he wasn't shocked by that.

"A large majority are committed by juveniles who are just in it for a thrill," he said, explaining that many juveniles can break into a car and drive off in a matter of seconds.

"They've become real good at it," he said. "We've seen a gradual rise for several months."

After being questioned he was taken to the Leon County Juvenile Detention Center and charged with aggravated battery with a deadly weapon and shooting into an occupied vehicle. He was still being held Sunday evening. Because Green is a juvenile, no bond information on him is available.

The victim remains hospitalized at TMRMC with a partially-paralyzed right hand and wrist, according to Kiracofe.

Shooting at burger joint

After being told by employees of a Burger King early Sunday morning that the restaurant was closed, two men fired shots into the restaurant before driving away, Kiracofe said.

Employees told police they had already closed for business about 1 a.m. Sunday when a car arrived at the drive-through window. After the cashier and manager told the passengers the restaurant was closed, the men became verbally abusive. Employees then heard two gunshots and saw the car speed away.

The car was described as a blue Mazda RX-7 with dark-tinted windows, damage to the right rear quarter panel, and a missing headlight.

a lessening of access to abortion through redefining terms such as "abortion," "fetus," and "informed consent." It also would have required that certain medical and biological information concerning the nature of the abortion procedure, potential adverse effects and complications, and embryonic and fetal development, be provided to women seeking an abortion.

Had it passed, the bill—proposed by Orange Park Republican Chance Irvine—would have required a physician to show a patient what a fetus the same age she is carrying would look like.

Lynn Rosenthal, president of the Florida Abortion Council, said such information is already provided by abortion clinics and the same information is not required for women seeking to deliver a child.

"Bills like this are just a backdoor approach to try to end the right to an abortion. It's intended to cause women to have limited or no choice," said Caroline Pardue, of Tallahassee Planned Parenthood.

"Women in Florida are already making informed choices about whether to terminate their pregnancies or not. This bill would mandate that abortion care be more explicit than any other physicians' explanations to patients about their health."

But anti-abortion activist Griffin denied the bill was intended to restrict women's right to abortion and said it was proposed so that women would know the truth about what an abortion actually is.

"I wouldn't characterize this bill as restrictive of a woman's right to an abortion," Griffin said. "But if some of the women got the information intended from this bill, they probably wouldn't want an abortion."

On the other side of the spectrum, a bill aimed at broadening a woman's access to abortion introduced by Jeanne Malchon, a Democrat from St. Petersburg, unanimously passed the Senate HRS subcommittee Wednesday. The bill is a resolution asking Congress to direct the federal Food and Drug Administration to begin testing to determine whether to approve the controversial RU 486 pill—a drug approved and in use in France that allows a first trimester abortion.

Proponents of abortion rights see passage of the bill as one more guarantee of a woman's right to choose, and some say Florida and California may be the first test markets for the pill when it's approved.

"This state is more likely than most others to approve of use of the RU 486 due to Florida's broad legislation currently on the books regarding the use of experimental drugs," according to Charlene Carres, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union of Florida. "The bill passed the Senate unanimously and had passed the House by a 12-to-5 vote, which is a victory for the pro-choice."

Activists on both sides of the issue are quick to point out that the tug-of-war battles between pro- and anti-choice bills are the most likely avenue of keeping or overturning abortion rights in Florida.

"I think it's unfortunate that (the RU 486 bill) passed. It is obviously a bill geared toward experimenting on Florida's women," Griffin said. "We must try to enact any legislation possible to restrict a woman from getting an abortion, and that also means we must put the people in office who will."

Causing a major shift in the makeup of the state's Legislature is but a narrow avenue toward overturning Florida's current stance on the issue, according to Compton. Unless the state Supreme Court changes its position on the right to privacy, the partisan look of the Legislature won't affect the constitutionally guaranteed right to an abortion.

"If Roe is overturned, we would be safe in Florida at least momentarily because they'd have to change the state constitution to either strip the privacy clause, amend it so it doesn't pertain to abortion, or add a new amendment that would ban abortions," she said. "It would take several years and a three-fifths vote, but that isn't likely since there's a huge number of Republicans who'll cross party lines on this issue."

"Mosaic" exhibit dispels many a myth

BY CLAIRE COHEN

STAFF WRITER

Many people believe that Jewish settlement in Florida began with post World War II snow birds in Miami Beach. The "Mosaic: Jewish Life in Florida" exhibit at the Museum of Florida History will help set the record straight.

According to project coordinator Marcha Kerstein Zerevitz, the exhibit proves that "you don't have to be Jewish to love a good exhibit on the Jewish History of Florida."

The notion that Florida Jewry was born when Jewish soldiers moved their families to South Florida after World War II is a common one. But Jewish settlement actually began in St. Augustine and Pensacola.

The exhibit places a great deal of emphasis on the Jewish communities in North Florida, which were established at a time when South Florida was inhabited by little more than alligators and mosquitoes. It emphasizes the fact that many aspects of the Jewish experience are common to all immigrants.

The Jewish experience in Florida is really a microcosm of any ethnic group's experience," said Henry Green, project director. "You come here as an immigrant. You usually don't know the language. You have problems acculturating yourself. You try to make a living. You try to maintain your cultural identity and yet you try to meld in. What we're saying is that the Jewish experience in Florida is a model in terms of any ethnic experience."

The exhibit, which runs through March 8, makes its stop in Tallahassee as part of a nine-city tour. After visiting the Florida cities, it will travel to Israel and Spain as part of the National Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Jubilee Exhibit.

Nearly 500 volunteers spent four years collecting over 5,000 photographs and artifacts for consideration in the exhibit. Over 400 oral histories were taken to provide background information. The 2,000 square-foot exhibit contains 400 photographs and 100 artifacts representing the diversity of Jewish life in Florida.

"Mosaic" is organized around four themes. "Immigration" shows where Jews in Florida came from and where they have settled, featuring photographs and narratives depicting their emigration from Asia, Europe, Latin America, and the Caribbean.

"Family/Synagogues/Institutions" depicts the cycles of Jewish observance. Photographs show Jewish rituals such as weddings, Bar Mitzvahs, and the celebration of the sabbath.

"Contributions to Florida Life" examines assimilation and the involvement of Jews in the greater community. Photographs and artifacts highlight the involvement of Jews in politics, philanthropy, business, academia, sports, and the arts.

"Relations With Other Ethnic Groups" documents the efforts of Jews to maintain their identity while working with other groups of Floridians. The photographs and items on display show the involvement that Jews have had in the fight against racism and religious persecution.

While many items reflect serious issues, the exhibit is not without its examples of Florida kitsch. A whole panel is devoted to photographs of Jewish children riding stuffed alligators. On display with far more serious items are a "Kiss me, I'm Jewish" button and a mah jong set.

Perhaps the prime example of kitsch is the seashell costume that Fanny Moss wore to a Purim ball in 1918. Hundreds of coquina shells are stitched to the knee-length dress, cloche hat, gloves, mask and stockings.

A special module depicts the Jewish experience in Tallahassee, where Jews have made particularly significant contributions in the areas of business and politics. Photographs show that many stores in downtown Tallahassee were owned by Jewish families through the 1970s, and that many Jewish Tallahassee residents have served in local, state, and federal government.

Also in the exhibit is a photograph of Ruby Diamond, granddaughter of Tallahassee pioneer Robert Williams. Diamond was a graduate of the Florida State College for Women, which later became Florida State University. The auditorium in the Westcott Building at FSU is named for her.

Stanley Garfein, the rabbi of Temple Israel in Tallahassee, calls the exhibit a "great opportunity to see ourselves as the great comic and tragic actors that we truly are. It's like looking in a mirror."

"Mosaic: Jewish Life in Florida" will be on display in the Main Gallery of the Museum of Florida History through March 8. The museum is located in the R.A. Gray Building at 500 South Bronough Street. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday and noon to 4:30 p.m. on Sunday. Admission to the museum is free. # Buoyant performances can't rescue thin plot of this Titanic

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

A psycho-sexual absurdist comedy of non-sequiturs, changing identities, and confusing comic repartee, Titanic fares better than the ship, but is often as oblique as Joyce's Ulysses, without so much as a plot to hang its hat on.

Composed of innumerable short scenes, the play seems to whip along but with the overwhelming feeling that you're going nowhere fast. Along the way are many laughs, and if you're a fan of Christopher Durang you will find much of his trademark skewed humor. The problem is the pitch of the play, which remains droll for so long that it becomes tiresome.

Titanic, directed by Peggy West, is performed in the middle of Yanni's, and does well considering the limited space afforded it. The play is a sort of comic soap opera about Victoria (Heather Brown) and Richard (Rob Nixon), the always arguing parents from hell, and their child(ren) Teddy (Stephen Hando) and (sometimes) Lydia (Elizabeth Chesnut). They prance about, confusing sexual identities and going off with each other and the ship's captain (Jim McMurtry), who is more concerned with joining them than steering the ship.

The plot is something like this: Victoria and Richard fight over Richard's comments about her family, after which she tells him that his son is actually the son of a beachcomber. He replies that their daughter Annabel was actually her best friend's — the whole pregnancy was done with mirrors (Victoria: "I did all that labor for nothing?").

And so they run off, he after a young sailor (and later his son in the same sailor's uniform), and she after the captain, and Harriet (Lydia) who may be her sister (or any of a number of people). Meanwhile, Teddy, aged 10-18 depending on who you believe, is losing it to Lydia/Harriet/Annabel (depending on who you believe), and possibly contracting rabies from the hedgehog she keeps up her dress. The sailor (Cory Byrne) tries to warn the captain about icebergs, while the captain rushes about with a dildo strapped to his head looking for Victoria. Get the picture?

Florida Flambeau review

The pacing is breakneck, perhaps too quick for anyone trying to understand what is going on, though admittedly that may be the point.

Rob Nixon turns in a notable performance as the aristocratic man about town (in every sense of the word). Heather Brown covers the semi-hysterical society lady from a pig farm background with charm, and Elizabeth Chesnut positively glows as Lydia/Annabel/Harriet, the social chameleon who makes her body home to small wildlife.

Though amusing in spots and spurts, the play drags under its own inconsequential weight. Like an amusing anecdote told by an idiot, it is full of hijinks and humor, signifying nothing.

Titanic shows at Yanni's tonight and Tuesday at 7:30. Tickets are $4, and get there early because seating may be limited.

Wells excels but FSU gets roughed up

BY MARK NESSMITH

STAFF WRITER

The confidence that Byron Wells and the Florida State coaching staff gained in Saturday's win over Clemson may be vital when Pat Kennedy's battered Seminoles (15-6, 7-4) face Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina State tonight.

With Chuck Graham (ankle), Rodney Dobard (ankle) and Andre Reid (ankle) injured, Kennedy's reserve players contributed 34 points and 15 rebounds to the 23 ranked Seminoles' seventh ACC victory, a 102-90 win over Clemson (12-7, 2-6) Saturday.

Reserve forward Byron Wells, visibly exhausted by game's end, scored a career-high 13 points, eight rebounds, and four blocked shots.

Kennedy said Wells' performance was nothing he hadn't shown in practice.

"We've always come out of pre-season ... and said 'hey, this kid has some talent,'" Kennedy said of Wells. "It's not like he's a slow, 6-8 guy. He can shoot the ball and he's a good jumper. He's our second-highest jumper, behind Chuck Graham. So he just got good opportunities tonight and he was very aggressive."

Douglas Edwards, who was the game's high-scorer with 27, agreed and added the team was waiting for Wells to break loose.

"He played very hard," Edwards said. "I was finally happy to see him come out and play hard like that in a game because he does it every day in practice."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis, a 1968 FSU graduate, said he was as surprised as anyone with Wells' play.

"I'll have to talk to our coaches about that eighth guy that went in because I didn't even know he existed," Ellis said. "I didn't know if I was seein' him or (Duke's Christian) Laettner out there. He caught everybody by surprise."

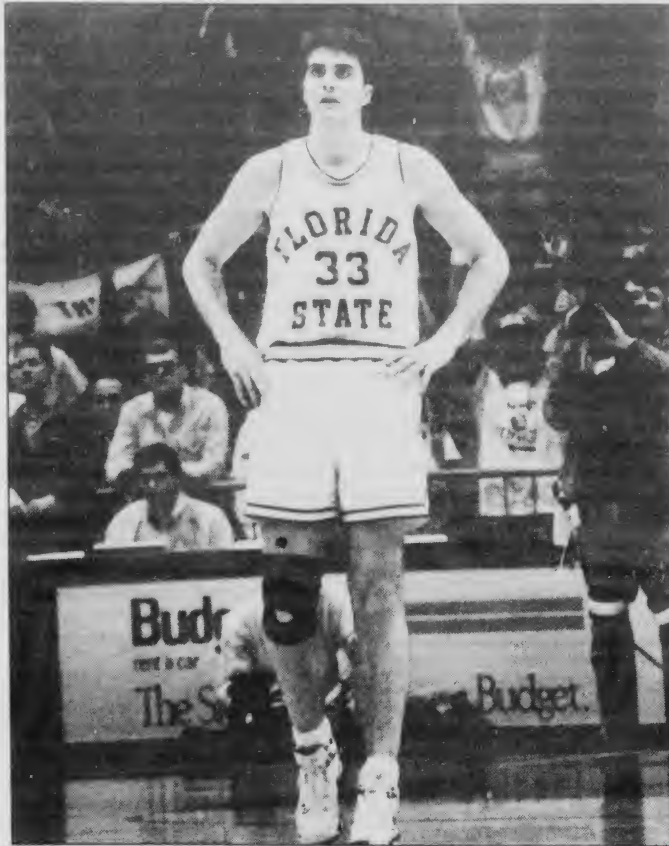

Wells said he is confident that he has earned enough respect to be called into action more often.

"I now know that I can play at this level," Wells said. "There's been a lot of questions about how I was good in practice and how I've never been able to put it on the court. I feel, if called upon at N.C. State, I'll be able to contribute to the team positively."

Bob Sura was second in FSU scoring with 21 points despite playing just 25 minutes. Sam Cassell (18) and Chuck Graham were the other Seminoles scoring in double-figures.

FSU may have broken out of its free throw shooting slump. Edwards was perfect hitting all 14 of his attempts. Edwards has now connected on his last 18 free throws. Overall, the Seminoles shot 77 percent from Byron Wells scored a career-high 13 points Saturday. Depending on the status of his injured teammates, Wells could see a lot of action tonight against N.C. State

Olympic Notebook

U.S. hockey team avoids miracle upset

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The U.S. Olympic hockey team avoided an embarrassing upset Sunday, scoring four goals in a 6-3 comeback victory over Italy at the Albertville Games.

Clark Donatelli, Steve Heinze and Tim Sweeney scored in the first 8:37 of the final period for the fourth-seeded Americans. The United States blew an early two-goal lead and trailed 3-2 entering the final 20 minutes.

In other hockey news Finland routed Germany 5-1 and top seed Sweden rolled to an uninspired 7-2 win over Poland.

Austria dominated the first full day of competition at the Winter Olympics Sunday, capturing two gold medals in French Alps skiing that wiped out America.

The United States, in fact, was shut out in the race for the first 12 medals awarded at the Games.

With the first four medal events of a total of 57 complete, Austria piled up five medals, two of them gold. During the Games in Calgary in 1988, the small European country won only three gold medals and 10 overall.

Austrian skier Patrick Ortner emerged from the shadows of more experienced colleagues to win the glamorous downhill race, and countryman Ernst Vettori soared past teammate Martin Hollwarth to win the 90-meter ski jump.

No other nation could win more than two medals Sunday.

American James Holland, who has emerged as by far the best U.S. ski jumper, could manage only a 13th place finish while teammate A.J. Kitt took ninth place.

Lubov Egorova of the Unified Team representing the Commonwealth of Independent States won the first gold medal of the Games, cruising to a surprisingly easy victory in the 15-kilometer cross-country ski race.

Egorova, a 25-year-old from St. Petersburg who almost gave up the sport three years ago, led from start to finish in the bright sunshine to win in 42 minutes, 20.8 seconds.

The National Prune Association plans to distribute 450,000 prunes to members of the public and journalists during the course of the Games. The organization said the prunes are pitless to prevent littering. They are to be handed out by farmers wearing Gascon berets.

Tyson defense rests

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

INDIANAPOLIS—The defense rested Sunday in the rape trial of former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, showing jurors a videotape of the boxer's accuser as the last bit of evidence in the effort to discredit her story.

Prosecutors then presented six rebuttal witnesses, and again attempted to cast doubt on testimony by Tyson, contrasting statements he made during an August grand jury appearance and what he said during trial.

Closing arguments and jury instructions in the Marion County Circuit Court proceedings were scheduled for Monday.

Tyson, 25, is charged with rape and deviate criminal conduct and could face 60 years in prison if convicted. His accuser says Tyson forced himself on her early July 19; Tyson maintains the contestant in the Miss Black America pageant consented to sex.

Defense lawyer Vincent Fuller announced he had completed his case after the jury of nine men and three women finished viewing a videotape showing Tyson's accuser throughout the week of the Miss Black America pageant last July.

The tape, played on a television out of media view, was an attempt to show jurors the 18-year-old woman's demeanor changed little after Tyson allegedly attacked her in his suite at the Canterbury Hotel.

The accuser and her mother testified earlier in the trial that the woman was traumatized by the attack and her mother said the beauty queen still has nightmares.

FSU pitches Sanford out of the park

BY SCOTT DANAHY
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The Florida State softball team opened the 1992 season Sunday by crushing the Sanford Bulldogs in back-to-back shutouts by scores of 10-0 and 7-0 at Lady Semmole Field.

Sanford fell to 2-2 on the season.

In the first game junior Toni Gutierrez pitched five innings before the ten-run mercy rule was enacted. In those five innings she gave up only one hit and struck out 11 as well as earning two hits in two at bats.

Gutierrez said she was nervous in her first start of the season but quickly calmed down.

"I had a bad case of the shakes, but I got over it after the first couple of runs," Gutierrez said.

In the second game sophomore Rebecca Aase continued 13th-ranked FSU's dominance on the mound by earning a 7-0 win. Aase chalked up seven strikeouts while holding the Bulldogs to just two hits.

"I felt relaxed out there after having a kind of shaky week of practice," Aase said. "I'm excited about it (the new season), and I feel that coming into the season with several new players we have a lot of depth to our team. I think that we worked well together in the fall and have done pretty good."

FSU senior shortstop Penny Siqueiros had five hits in six at bats and drove in three RBI's and scored twice.

"I think that everyone was very excited today, and as long as we can keep that excitement level up there, I think that we'll have another successful season," Siqueiros said, adding that that Sunday's sweep was a team effort.

"Everybody tries to carry the team. It's not just one or two people."

"(The team) was very aggressive at the plate, and I thought that we ran the bases well," said FSU coach Joanne Graf. "Both pitchers threw great ball games, and I was real pleased with starting off with two wins."

FSU next plays crosstown rival Florida A&M next Sunday in a doubleheader at FAMU.

KANDANCE THOMAS

Toni Gutierrez pitched FSU to a season-opening win.

SPORTS BRIEF

The FSU baseball team won the first game of a doubleheader with Arizona State 4-2 Sunday in Tempe. Games Friday and Saturday were rained out. Sunday's second game score was not available by press time.

The Intramurals Office is now seeking officials for the upcoming softball season. No prior experience is needed; only the desire to do your best. It is mandatory that you attend the training clinics. For more information contact the IM office at 644-2430.

Intramural softball sign-ups begin today and will continue through Wednesday. Teams may sign up in room 136 Tully gym. Spots are limited and sign-up is on a first-come-first-serve basis.

HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1992

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your productivity and prestige are on the rise.

An executive position opens up next month. Once you are in the driver's seat, your associates will support you in a big way. Forge new business and personal alliances in June. Timely investments are crucial for your long-term financial security. Next November finds you sticking close to home, involved with family activities. A romance on the rebound could turn out to be the real thing. Count your blessings!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Roberta Flack, actor
Robert Wagner, author Frances Moore
Lappe, golfer Greg Nonnan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accept well-intentioned advice and suggestions without showing imitation. Chances are you will learn something new. A loved one's high opinion of your efforts boosts your morale.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put all of your energy and resources to work for the benefit of your dear ones. Your career shows steady progress. Open your heart to the underprivileged and lonely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try to gauged from which side the storm will blow and have your shelter picked out in good time. The opposition may look more serious than it really is. Pursue romance tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There are any number of people ready to take charge at work. Stake out your territory.
A very busy season lies ahead. Spice up your romantic life before the spark goes out forever.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have a lot of restless energy now. Use your artistic flair to make even everyday tasks special.

Talking with friends could give you a bright idea for the future. Do some research.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may have trouble getting through to key people today. Try the direct approach. Repay favors promptly. A personal relationship needs more nurturing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will get quick approval from those in authority if you have done your homework. Steer clear of direct confrontations. Your ability to make split-second decisions helps you turn a nice profit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):
Somebody is still after something of yours.
Lie low for a while and watch what happens. Be generous with your praise and loving support, but frugal with your money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):
Sticking close to your mate or dependable companions lessens your chances of going astray. A close associate sets an excellent example for you to follow. Play the role of good Samaritan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pleasant thoughts should be invited to linger longer. They could lead to profitable new business arrangements. Hold on to old friends. Stay home tonight and read a good book or write poetry.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Endless bickering will only deepen someone's confusion. State your case and back your argument with facts that cannot be disputed. Build savings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20):
Teamwork helps you accomplish great things now. Tread carefully when dealing with sensitive associates. Trust your intuition where a creative project is concerned. Do not be swayed by critics.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are good-natured and kind, popular with people of all ages. Their special knack for anticipating others' needs helps these Aquarians stay ahead of the pack in business. Good team players, they help boost profits with their cooperative attitude. False pride is not one of their faults. They are willing to ask for assistance when they really need it. True romantics, these Aquarians will not marry unless they find a soul mate.

Johnson thrills in MVP return performance

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

ORLANDO—Magic Johnson, playing pro basketball for the first time since contracting HIV, was named Most Valuable Player of the NBA All-Star Game Sunday after scoring 25 points to lead the West to a 153-113 victory over the East.

Johnson retired from the Los Angeles Lakers at the start of the season after he found he had the virus that leads to AIDS. He says he wants to play in the Barcelona Olympics next summer, and has not ruled out returning to the Lakers for the playoffs.

NBA Commissioner David Stern allowed Johnson to play in the All-Star Game after fans voted him a starter for the West team.

Johnson was the last player introduced and received a huge ovation and was greeted by all the other All-Stars from both teams.

Johnson shot 9 of 12 from the field and added a game-high assists and five rebounds in an uplifting display. He also hit three three-pointers in the final 2:41, including a game-ending 24-foot fadeaway in the face of his friend Isiah Thomas.

The West tied the most lopsided margin of victory in an All-Star Game, set by the East in 1966.

Clyde Drexler of Portland made a strong run for MVP with 22 points, nine rebounds and six assists for the West. San Antonio's David Robinson had 19 points and Tim Hardaway of Golden State added 14 as the West shot a blistering 65 percent from the field.

Chicago's Michael Jordan led the East with 18 points. Thomas of the Pistons scored 15 and Scottie Pippen of the Bulls tallied 14.

Johnson and Drexler ignited the West in the first period with 10 points apiece to seize a 44-31 advantage. At halftime, the cushion inflated to 79-55, thanks to 33 of 52 shooting from the floor.

Drexler scored 12 points in the third quarter as the West led 115-83.

the foul line.

But Ellis said Florida State's rebounding won the game.

"I thought Florida State's dominance of the board in the first half was a big factor," Ellis said. "They shot the ball extremely well and when they missed they got the second and third opportunities."

Freshman center Sharone Wright led the young Clemson team with 15 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots. Wright also hit 9-of-10 foul shots.

The entire Clemson team was uncharacteristically accurate from the foul line, shooting a season-high 79.3 percent.

Andre Bovain (15), Steve Harris (12), Chris Whitney (10), Eric Burks (10) and Corey Wallace (10) were the other Tigers scoring in double-figures.

Dobard, Graham and Reid will undergo physical evaluations today to determine their status for tonight's 7:30 game against N.C. State (9-12, 3-5).

The Wolfpack is led by Tom Gugliotta, the ACC's second-leading scorer (22.1 ppg). FSU won the last meeting with the 'Pack 98-76 Jan. 25, holding Gugliotta to seven points.

"I'm sure (Gugliotta's) going to be very fired-up to respond to us," Kennedy said. "Our greatest concern, right now, is Chuck (Graham) and Rodney (Dobard)."

X marks the spot for respect of late civil rights leader

BY RAJU CHEBIUM
STAFF WRITER

Call it a symbol of black pride. Regard it as a fashion statement and a political statement rolled into one.

Malcolm X hats, which have become enormously popular primarily among African-American students, are precisely that.

Many students at Florida State and Florida A&M universities say they wear the Malcolm X hats—which are usually black with a large silver “X” on the front—because they remind them of their African-American heritage. Others say they wear the hat because they admire the slain civil-rights leader. And still others say they wear it because it’s fashionable.

“I’m trying to let everybody know that I’m aware of Black history,” Audria Gilchrist, an FSU English major, said Monday. “I’m paying (Malcolm X) tribute by wearing a Malcolm X hat.”

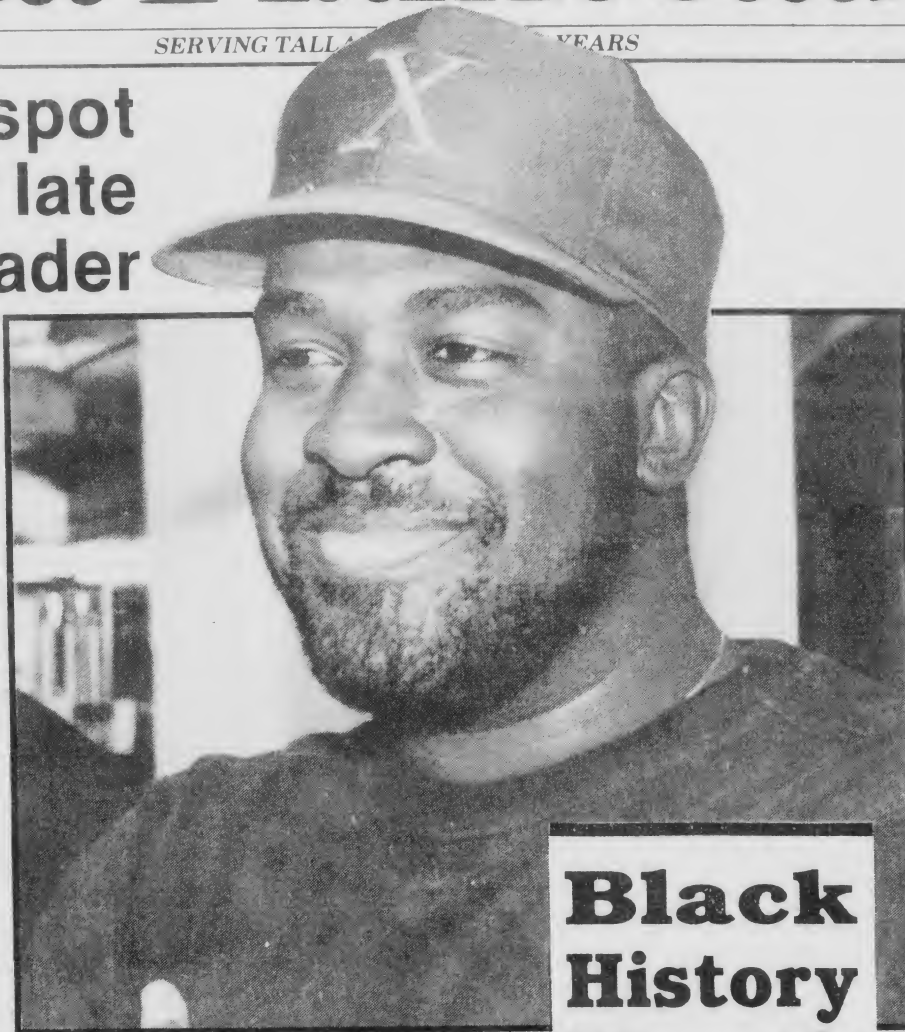

Malcolm X, assassinated in 1965, often said African Americans should fight for economic and political equality “by any means necessary,” even by resorting to violence if needed. He also served for a number of years as the primary spokesperson for the Nation of Islam, the black American Muslim movement.

“To me, it makes a statement,” said Kim Anderson, a freshman business major at FAMU. “It represents the struggle that Malcolm X tried to bring his people through. It proves that his legacy is still strong.”

Craig McGill, a FAMU engineering student, agreed.

“Though some of his actions were questionable . . . his principles that he lived for were positive for the Black race,” McGill said. “It’s almost as though I owe it to him to carry on the Black legacy.”

Malcolm X warned that unless white America changed its ways, African Americans would be forced to take up arms in self defense. But many students who wear the hats say that despite continuing racism and discrimination, violence is not in order.

“By wearing the hat, I’m not saying that I support all of his views,” said Angelia Williams, deputy comptroller of FAMU’s student government. “I’m just not a militant person.”

McGill agreed.

“You should attempt to deal with a problem by any means necessary. But that doesn’t mean that violence is necessary,” he said. “If violence can be avoided, by all means, do so.”

Not every student wears the hat to make a political statement. Many say they wear the hat just because it is fashionable.

“Really, I’m wearing it for the fashion,” said

FSU’s Philpot only has a little class

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University Student Body President Brian Philpot says even he can fall victim to university bureaucracy.

Philpot, a sophomore finance major who has taken a total of 13 hours since he was elected to the highest student government position last spring, was not enrolled in any classes this semester as of Monday. But he says that’ll change when he clears up some university fines today and enrolls in a three-hour accounting course he says he’s been attending.

Philpot added he’s been grappling with administrators for more than a month trying to get into the class. He said he hasn’t been able to register for the course until now because he has been waiting for a deferment and reevaluation for some library and parking fines he accumulated last semester.

“I requested to have a waiver last week and it was not processed,” Philpot said Monday. “Because I had the fees I was not able to pay my tuition.”

Despite the delay, he said everything should be taken care of.

“As long as I go to the cashier’s office (this morning) I have no problem,” he said.

Even if Philpot is not permitted to enroll in the class—his only course excluding four hours of incomplete coursework he needs to make up from last semester—he would still qualify to be student body president, according to student government statutes.

But two-term student senator Robert Link said Philpot’s standing as a part-time student make a case for him actually being affected by any fee increases,” said Link, a Monarchy Party senator from the College of Arts and Sciences. “They’d have to go up an awful lot before he starts to notice it.”

Profs say money isn’t the issue with raises

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

It’s not the size that matters, it’s the mere principle of having one, local university faculty members said Monday in regard to a promised pay raise this month.

But because the Legislature has refused to raise new revenue this year, it looks more and more unlikely professors will get a 3 percent pay raise Feb. 15—a pay raise which has already been postponed twice this year.

As a result, professors at Florida State and Florida A&M universities, who are working even harder to make up for budget shortfalls from last year, feel their hard work has gone unrewarded and unnoticed.

“The Legislature doesn’t think we do much over here,” lamented James Cowart, who chairs the geology department at FSU.

As faculty salaries at Florida’s universities lag further and further behind the national average, some professors will begin to consider moving on to greener pastures some departmental chairs said.

“People are thinking about leaving,” said Charles Weatherford, chair of FAMU’s physics department. “It’s a question of when they will find (jobs elsewhere).”

Karam Soliman, chair of FAMU’s Division of Basic Pharmaceutical Sciences, echoed the same concern.

“Some of my faculty are talking about leaving,” he said. “They are very serious. Money talks. Some of them can make a 50 percent raise in one day if they move.”

The picture isn’t quite as gloomy in every department, but everyone feels the pinch, according to other departmental chairs.

“We’re not expecting a mass exodus of faculty members,” FAMU’s biology chair C.B. Subrahmanyam said of his department.

Some school of theatre plays may be closed to public under new rules

BY JAY SCHROER

STAFF WRITER

Workshop Productions at the Florida State University School of Theatre may be closed to the public under new rules that would also prohibit any publicity for the shows.

And although at least some theatre students are upset by the changes, no one would speak on the record Sunday and Monday, citing their fear of department "politics."

In a Feb. 5 memo, Associate Dean Dan Carter said Workshop Productions will be open only to school of theatre faculty, staff and students and invited guests as a result of recent action taken by the theatre's Production Committee. The memo notes that guest lists must be submitted for approval before performances take place.

The memo also addresses promotion: "There will be no listings, no advertisements, and no posters—no publicity of any kind for these productions other than in-house notices."

In conversations with about 15 theatre students, including several directors of upcoming Workshop Productions, no one was willing to go on record.

"Politics in theatre is awful," said one student, who like several other students was afraid he would be unable to get into any productions if he spoke out on the matter.

Most felt the new rules were in response to last semester's controversy over a Workshop Production of Sade by Sade by Sade, which was cancelled by Theatre School Dean Gil Lazier after a single performance.

Lazier said then he stopped the show because the quality of the production was too low. Others contended, however, the real objection was to the sexual content of the play, written by the notorious Marquis DeSade.

Lazier said Sunday the new rules are for the benefit of students. Because Workshop Productions are not public, he said, the rules protect the shows from pressure, "so students can take risks."

Lazier added there's a certain level of performance and standard with any public production, and he pointed out that the School of Theatre operates three series for the public to attend—Mainstage, Studio Productions, and Lab Productions.

According to Lazier, Workshop Productions are different.

"These are works in progress by students," said Lazier. "You lose the whole purpose if you publicize it more than that."

But Lazier was unable to clear up some questions about the new policy. Carter is in New York this week working with a Shakespeare production and could not be reached for comment.

On the issue of approval for the guest list, Lazier said, "I don't think there would be anyone not approved."

But he later said, "... if a person invites in a Flambeau reporter for a review, it's a problem. We don't want them reviewed."

Further adding to the confusion about public access is a Jan. 31 memo, also from Carter, that lists the spring '92 Workshop Production schedule.

The memo, which is posted on the School of Theatre's bulletin board in the Fine Arts Building, gives performance dates and says public performances will be at 8 p.m. The memo adds that an in-house performance exclusively for school of theatre members will be held during the afternoon.

Also, publicity for the workshops has already been provided by the theatre department itself. The latest issue of Call Board, a newsletter sent to theatre patrons and subscribers, includes a listing of this semester's Workshop Productions.

And, professors say, the repercussions are felt by the students, too.

"If a professor is discouraged in his work, the students are very perceptive, and that will cause them to not spend that last ounce of effort," said Ralph Turner, chair of FAMU's chemistry department.

The same is true at FSU.

"I guess my bias is that good student bodies are the result of good faculties," Sandon of FSU's religion department said, adding that professors in turn react to how good their students are.

The result is an atmosphere that many top faculty members will try to avoid, according to Joseph Owens, chair of FSU's physics department.

"The general salary situation is making it more difficult to hire and retain faculty," Owens said.

Even professors sticking through the tough times are disgruntled, but negative morale doesn't necessarily translate into poor performance, according to FAMU's Turner.

"They'll be unhappy. They'll talk about it. (But) they will not shirk their responsibilities," Turner said.

"It's not necessarily that someone's going to say 'I'm leaving,'" said Leo Sandon, chair of FSU's religion department. "But there's going to be a morale problem."

Because of inflation and rising health insurance costs, faculty members are bringing in fewer real dollars than last year. Many professors are working longer days, resulting in a smaller hourly wage as well, according to George Weaver, chair of FSU's psychology department.

"You don't increase people's workload and decrease their pay and expect them to be highly motivated," Weaver said.

He added that faculty members who have been promoted this year have missed out on raises that usually accompany moving from assistant to associate professor or associate to full professor because of the budget cuts.

Healthy hypocrite

Last week the country was treated to a stern lecture by President Bush on the issue of national health care. Now of all issues, it would seem this one is something our frequently ill commander-in-chief could impart wisdom on.

Wrong. Instead of receiving wisdom, we received a glimpse into the incredible lightness of being George Bush—Health Man.

Instead of explaining why a man who spends so many hours improving his health through jogging, exercise and diet finds himself routinely surrounded by federally funded emergency medical teams, George Bush did what he does best: substitute condescending bromides for insight and analysis.

Yes, George Bush, Health Man, told Americans they don't need a national health plan. Instead, he snarled, we should be keeping ourselves healthy in the first place. Don't smoke. Don't drink. Be like me, George Bush, Health Man.

Really now. This is a little like being lectured on the sanctity of human life by Jeffrey Dahmer.

This from a fitness nut who's been hospitalized for an irregular heart beat, and who's upchuck-heard-round-the-world left the world gasping at the spectacle of Health Man flat on his back, again. You'd think after all that, Health Man would've gained some perspective on the issue.

But irony, it seems, isn't Health Man's thing.

Don't be shocked. This is, after all, a man whose sheltered, upper-class upbringing has left him so out of touch with ordinary Americans that he actually was amazed to discover recently that grocery stores—where commoners do their food shopping—use scanners to ring up purchases.

Health Man's a tad out of touch, we'd say.

That he takes for granted his and his social class' inalienable right to health care—and the average American's right to die a pauper when catastrophic illness strikes—is all but a given. It's not, however, given the American social structure, surprising.

Indeed, Health Man George Bush's recent spate of medical emergencies is the very best argument against his condescending advice to the American people to forget national health care and think about preventative health care. The evidence can be read almost any day in the newspaper.

For example, there's the fact that just last week, presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater announced that our would-be Jack LaLanne of American politics would quit taking (cold turkey?) the controversial sleeping pill Halcion. Fitzwater admitted the reason was because of widespread speculation that the pill was responsible for many of the president's disturbing, incomprehensible utterings of late. As well as the subject of some recent Doonesbury segments.

Saying this country doesn't need national health care makes as much sense as a couple of the president's shocking, possibly Halcion induced non-sequiters lampooned by Trudeau. In other words, Mr. President:

"Don't cry for us Argentina," and remember the "Nitty Gritty Great Bird." To translate:

The U.S. needs a Canadian-style national health care system, not lectures about preventative health care from a hypocritical politician who hasn't paid a dime for medical care himself.

Shallow conviction

Editor:

It is ironic that the Flambeau accepted several ads from the anti-referendum group when their editorial and lead front-page article showed clearly that they knew that these ads were in fact false advertisements.

I suggest that, in the future, if the Flambeau accepts ads it knows or believes to be false that they run a clear correction either as an editorial comment below the ad, or another counter-ad of the same size on the same page or adjacent page. This would preserve the neutral status of the Flambeau and avoid the image of being bought by people willing to lie or push unverified claims.

A long-term benefit from this critical acceptance of ads would be that people would pay closer attention to the ads in the Flambeau and advertisers would value the ads accordingly.

Kermit Rose

Editor:

Well, today was the day to vote on the city commission seats and the coal referendum amendment. I hope no one was fooled by the advertisements placed by CARE. These ads were funded by a $114,000 donation made by CSX, a railroad which hauls coal. Tom Hoppin, a CSX vice president, actually said that "We haven't stated that we're for coal generation. We're for keeping options open." Sure they are.

Anyway, the election is over now, so I won't spend time discussing the blatant lies in their ads. I just wanted to point out that I was happy to see the Flambeau condemn the ad campaign in their editorial (Tuesday, Feb. 4). Unfortunately, the Flambeau's conviction only runs so deep. I couldn't help but notice that there were no less than four-and-a-half pages of those "nefarious" ads in the paper over two days. It's too bad the Flambeau couldn't stand up and refuse to run the ads. I guess it would be too much to ask them to really take a stand and let their chunk of that "blood money" slip through their fingers.

Tracie Kroll

Clarification

Editor:

I was extremely unsatisfied with the response I received from one of your writers, Raju Chebium, regarding a misquote he had made in the article entitled "3000 Students Protest Education Cuts at Capitol," printed on Wednesday, Feb. 5.

Considering I am a social sciences senator in the FSU Student Senate, as well as a current intern in the Legislative Affairs Executive Office of the Governor, I believe my statements regarding student concerns are important and should be reported accurately.

I was misquoted as saying "We are sick of the government." However, my actual statement was "We are on the side of the governor."

The connotation of what I actually said and what was claimed I said is completely opposite. I simply want to set the record straight as to how I feel about the students' and the governor's views on education and the necessity for lobbying for tax reform in order to receive the additional funding for our educational system.

I called the Florida Flambeau office today and spoke with Raju Chebium. He admitted the difference in what was printed and in what was said could have been an honest mistake, but that there was no way a retraction would be run. He claims I said what he wrote but REFUSES to let me look at his notes.

I can understand an honest mistake by a reporter, but I cannot understand why he (and the Flambeau) would refuse to print a simple clarification.

Latino perspective

Editor:

Joel Risberg forgot to include the opinion of one of the most important minority groups in his Jan. 31 article, "FSU using ads to promote better race relations." While focusing on the importance of understanding and respecting racial and cultural differences to ensure good relationships between people, the article (what an irony!) ignores Latinos completely. The reporter's failure to get the opinion of a representative of Latino students like it was done with African Americans is just another example of the lack of interest and concern about Latino issues in this campus. This lack of concern reflects a very short-sighted approach since Latinos are now the fastest growing minority group in the U.S. and by the year 2020 will be the largest. Moreover, among the rest of the population there is a lot of ignorance and prejudice about who we are and where we come from. So, Flambeau, next time you write an article about minorities, get the Latino perspective! Our voice deserves to be heard!

Attacks on multiculturalism are attacks on minorities

BY MANNING MARABLE
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Last month I appeared on the ABC television news program "Nightline" in a debate with former Secretary of Education William Bennett.

The issue under discussion was whether schools should adopt new textbooks and teaching techniques which include a full range of America's ethnic, racial and gender diversity. I knew that Bennett, a conservative ideologue with reactionary credentials relating to people of color, would attempt to dismiss ethnic pluralism and increased emphasis on nonwhite contributions to the larger society as irrelevant to quality education.

So from the outset I explained that "multiculturalism" really means two fundamental things: First, the recognition that American history and this nation's accomplishments are not reflected solely in the activities of only one race (whites), one language group (English-speakers), one ethnicity (Anglo-Saxons) or only one religion (Christianity). African-Americans, Latinos, Asian Americans, Native Americans and others have also made central history or textbooks. The history books in the past have always reflected the interests and perspectives of people in power in America.

That's why, until recently, that include civil rights critic Linda Chavez, writer Dinesh D'Souza, and University of Chicago Professor Allan Bloom.

What these ideologues also have in common is that they have all been richly subsidized by the conservative Olin Foundation, which is headed by William E. Simon, former Treasury Secretary under Presidents Nixon and Ford. According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, in 1991 the Olin Foundation awarded a $175,000 fellowship to Bennett, $25,000 to Chavez, $98,400 to D'Souza, and $800,000 to Bloom's program at the University of Chicago. Unlike other foundations, Olin has clear partisan party affiliations and an extremely reactionary agenda without even a shred of scholarly balance or objectivity.

Why are conservative intellectuals and foundations so frightened by multiculturalism? Behind their public rhetoric are several political realities.

The one threat which unified conservatives was Communism. Now that the Soviet Union has gone out of business, American reactionaries don't have a common "enemy." By attacking multicultural education and affirmative action, they are deliberately manipulating education and affirmative action, they are deliberately manipulating racial and gender symbols to mobilize their supporters.

Conservatives also recognize that racial minorities will soon total one-third of the U.S. population. Pushing Blacks, Latinos and other people of color out of the textbooks is only a precursor to pushing back their political rights within society.

Editor's note: Manning Marable is a professor of political science and history at the University of Colorado, Boulder. "Along the Color Line" appears in more than 200 publications internationally, and is broadcast by more than 40 radio stations throughout North America.

Commentary along the colorline

Many of the greatest scientific, technological and cultural advances in world history have come from Asia and Africa. To overcome the prejudices reinforced by their parents, many white students need to read the works of scholars of color.

contributions to our society.

And secondly, that beneath these differences are some underlying principles and values which bring us together, such as the ideals of human equality, democratic government and individual liberty. "Multiculturalism" is an antidote to the poisons of racism and sexism, which can distort young minds in our classrooms.

Presented in this manner, even the archconservative Bennett couldn't disagree. Where Bennett and I expressed sharp disagreement was on the issue of textbooks.

Bennett argued history books should report the "truth" and any deviation from the central facts in history was nothing less than propaganda. Bennett also insisted the "truths" of "Western civilization" should be the basis for our educational system.

Bennett was wrong on at least two counts. As a professor of history, I know that there is no singular "truth" in anyone's Native Americans, Latinos and African Americans were excluded from all textbooks, and our achievements were ignored or stolen. When oppressed people successfully struggle for their democratic rights, the textbooks inevitably are changed.

Moreover, despite the achievements of Western civilization, many of the greatest scientific, technological and cultural advances in world history have come from Asia and Africa. To overcome the prejudices reinforced by their parents, many white students need to read the works of scholars of color.

William Bennett is only one of many intellectuals who are currently campaigning against the specter of "multiculturalism." Other conservative educators hostile to multiculturalism

Man arrested for rape

The Tallahassee Police Department arrested a 44 year-old Monticello man Monday for the June rape of a retarded girl in Tallahassee, TPD spokesperson Annette Garrett said Monday.

The rape, which occurred sometime between June 8 and 15 of 1991, was reported to the police when it was discovered that the girl was in the second trimester of pregnancy. The 14-year-old victim is profoundly retarded, physically handicapped and unable to communicate.

The suspect, who was helping to take care of the girl last June, agreed to a blood test for DNA analysis. The tests showed that the suspect, Joseph Thompson of 855 S. Pine St. in Monticello, could have committed the rape.

Thompson was charged with sexual battery on a victim who is physically incapacitated and sexual activity on a child over 12 by a person in custodial authority. He was taken to the Leon County Jail without bond.

Armed robbery

A group of men jumped out of a car Sunday night and robbed a man of his wallet as he walked down North Monroe street, TPD's Garrett said Monday.

The victim told officers that three men jumped out of a white Lincoln Towncar in the 700 block of North Monroe Street and approached him. Two of the men held the victim's arms while the third pointed a handgun at his face and threatened to kill him.

The suspects demanded money, then took the victim's wallet. As the trio drove away, they tossed the empty wallet out the window.

The armed suspect is a 25- to 30-year-old black man, between 6 feet and 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing about 260 pounds. He was last seen wearing a white zip-up jacket, black pants, and a blue or black cap. The other two suspects are also black, between 20 and 25 years old. One was wearing a blue jacket and jeans. The other had on a green jacket and brown cut-off pants.

Student threatened

A Florida State University student ran up to a police car patrolling campus early Saturday morning, saying he had just been threatened by a man with a knife, FSU police spokesperson Jack Handley said Monday.

The victim said he was threatened in the parking lot of the Fine Arts Building on Call Street. The victim was able to identify his assailant and the suspect was quickly found by FSU police in the parking lot. The man was taken into custody at about 1:01 a.m. Sunday and charged with aggravated battery.

Tadiran has until Friday to disprove latest U.N. report

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

With a Friday deadline approaching, the city of Tallahassee is still waiting for a response from Tadiran—the controversial electronics firms—to a United Nations report alleging the company has economic and military ties with South Africa.

Talla-Com, Tadiran's local subsidiary, received a $4 million subsidy from the city to locate a manufacturing plant here to build military radios along with General Dynamics for the Department of Defense. Tadiran has signed an affidavit saying they are in compliance with the city's anti-apartheid ordinance.

If the company indeed has military or other business connections to South Africa, such ties would be in violation of the city's ordinance.

In a letter dated Jan. 17, 1992, the city's purchasing department set a Feb. 14 deadline for Tadiran to respond to the latest charges, contained in a report by the U.N.'s Economic and Social Council Commission on Human Rights released July 18, 1991.

The U.N. report lists companies with ties to South Africa, and both Tadiran and Koor, Tadiran's parent corporation, appear on the list.

The city's letter informs Tadiran that,

X stitched on them, but they do come in other colors and designs.

Howard, for example, said she owns one hat that is black and gold and carries a silhouette of the slain civil-rights leader. She owns another that is orange in color with a green X on it. In addition, hats in black, yellow and red—the colors used traditionally to represent Africa—can also be seen on both campuses.

Area businesses say the current craze for Malcolm X hats is just fine with them.

JW, a clothing goods store at Governor's office.

"I have to put in 50- to 60-hour work weeks," Philpot said. "I just can't put in the full loads and do that. I'd rather put in an extra semester or an extra year rather than sacrifice the academic side of it."

Jon Dalton, FSU vice president of student affairs, said Philpot's situation didn't strike him as being too out of the ordinary. He said he has been involved with FSU SG for the last three years as well as with SGs at other universities, and that historically, student leaders tend to take fewer hours while in office because of demands on their time.

Dalton said he doesn't think Philpot's part-time standing would affect his position on fee

"Should you not respond to our request by the specified time, the Purchasing Division will assume that the United Nations' report is accurate. The City will then be forced to take such action as deemed necessary under the terms of (the anti-apartheid ordinance)."

Talla-Com spokesperson Mike Longhouser said Monday he was not aware of the city's letter to Tadiran, but added he was sure Tadiran would respond by the deadline.

"Tadiran takes the anti-apartheid ordinance very seriously," he said.

Under the city's anti-apartheid ordinance, no contracts may be granted to businesses which have direct ties to South Africa, and no subsidies may be given to businesses with direct or indirect ties there. Parent and subsidiary companies of a business must also be free of ties to South Africa.

City Commissioner Dorothy Inman-Crews, who has consistently voted to uphold the ordinance on relevant issues, said Monday she has heard of the U.N. report, but was unaware that the purchasing department had set a deadline for Tadiran's response.

Inman-Crews said she would check with the purchasing department next week to see how or if Tadiran had answered the U.N. charges.

Williams. "Although it does show . . . how we support Malcolm X."

"I like the way they look," said Akima Howard, secretary of state for FAMU's student government.

Most Malcolm X hats are black with a silver

Square mall, has sold 80 hats—each at $15—in just under two months, according to Tommy Fine, the store's manager.

And Foot Locker in the same mall is currently sold out of Malcolm X hats in adult sizes.

"It's not the hottest thing in the store," said assistant manager Jimmy Yu. "(But it is) one of the better selling ones of all the hats."

The trendiness of the hat is bound to increase when filmmaker Spike Lee comes out with his movie on Malcolm X, some students increases.

"I really don't see the cost issue affected" Dalton said. "He will obviously not be serving in that role next year (and) the (athletic) fee (increase) won't take place until next fall."

Philpot said he needs to pay $200 in late registration fees today and has until the end of the semester to pay his parking and library fines. He added he won't know how much the fines will be until after his protests are evaluated.

Philpot blamed the FSU bureaucracy, in part, for his registration difficulties and emphasized many other students have similar problems.

"I was caught in the red tape," he said. "I say.

"I bought (the hat) to pay respect to Malcolm X," said Earl Banks, a FAMU journalism major. "(But) with the Malcolm X movie coming out, I knew that everybody will be wearing them, too."

But buying the hat just because it is trendy is almost an insult to Malcolm X, some students say.

"It's like you're not really in touch with what's going on . . . You're trivializing what (Malcolm X) has done," Anderson said.

was thrown from department to department to take care of this. This is something other students go through."

Philpot said universities will always have bureaucracies, but he added his problems may not have been so bad if it weren't for recent state budget cuts, which have forced the university to slash administrative positions by not replacing outgoing personnel.

"The bureaucracy just slows down, especially when positions are lost," Philpot said. "It slowed me down in this case."

He added he has learned from the experience.

"I know I'm going to lobby harder for support staff positions," he said.

supported are last fall's new nighttime parking fee and raises in students' activities and services fees. He also supported tuition increases last year.

"He's been pretty much in favor of those increases for quite some time and I would tend to say he probably doesn't empathize with the average student," Link said.

But Philpot said he simply can't take on any more classes considering the demands of the ## Dinosaur who? Where? When? What?!

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

The crushingly familiar Tallahassee music landscape, home of at least a dozen good bands, but boondock truck stop to major label acts bypassing it for cultural meccas Orlando and Jacksonville, awoke early yesterday morning to some startling news.

"Dinosaur! Dinosaur!" was the beer-inflected shriek of my next door neighbor.

His eyes were glazed. He kept repeating "Mascis! Mascis!" like some ritualistic mantra, and behind me a wall of fuzz-out distortion ridden guitar, painful melodies aping joy, and a tortured voice poured from the speakers like maple syrup. It was sticky. I couldn't move. Before me, my neighbor performed a kinesthetic lambada similar to moshing but more chaotic, before violently, accidentally, hitting his head on the wall and relaxing, unconscious, on the floor.

What was behind this preternatural display? The answer lay in his hands. Unfolding his fingers revealed a Flambeau/SCE ad announcing Dinosaur, jr. with My Bloody Valentine and Babes in Toyland Tuesday night at the Club Downunder. Tuesday? At the Club Downunder? What had happened to the original date of the 18th at the Moon?

Could it be, Dinosaur, jr., here, in Tallahassee, twice in one week? It was better than too good to be true.

This was serious. Drastic measures were in order—a call straight to the top, to Dinosaur, jr.'s agent, a gruff Brooklynite who identified himself as Murray Von Murray.

"You want to speak to who?" he asked.

J. Mascis (left) and Murph (right)

"The person in charge of the Dinosaur, jr. Tour."

"We're in charge of the booking," said the man from the Twin Tower Agency in New York, "And Warner Brothers is in charge of the publicity."

When asked if Dinosaur, jr. was indeed performing twice in one week in Tallahassee, the agent expressed geographic perplexity.

"Tallahassee?" he asked.

Explaining that Tallahassee is the capital of Florida, home of Florida State University, didn't help. Not even the sacred name of the Seminoles raised a glimmer of recognition.

"Listen, we just book the shows," Von Murray said. "Whatever J. (Mascis) wants, J. gets. But I doubt he's going to Tallahassee twice in a week. I'll bet he hasn't even heard of the place."

He was obviously stalling. Warner Brothers was probably behind it. A secret show. Maybe a surprise MTV concert. Who could tell what they were really up to?

Certainly not Warner Brothers Los Angeles publicity office. Their "man" was at lunch and they suggested I call their New York office. Deb Bernandini in New York never returned my call. Scott Carswell of the Moon was out of town. An anonymous Moon employee who answered the phone in Carswell's office was just as slippery.

"Dinosaur, Jr.? Never heard of him," he said, and referred me to Student Campus Entertainment. Their phone, of course, was busy.

It wasn't until 4 p.m. that day, that the blunder was uncovered. Student Campus Entertainment's advertising department generously offered to share the blame with the Flambeau ad sales department, who in turn fingered "those people in ad production." Flambeau Ad Production Manager Ed Cambeiro denied responsibility for the mistake, and routed the buck back upstairs to ad sales. The whole truth may never be known.

This much is sure—Dinosaur, jr. will indeed visit these fair environs. Next week. As planned. At the Moon.

Or will they? Stay tuned. Same Bat Time. Same Bat Channel.

Roots' author Alex Haley dies at 70

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

SEATTLE—Alex Haley, whose 1976 book Roots gave all Americans a better understanding of black history and produced the most successful miniseries in television history, died Monday of a heart attack. He was 70.

Haley, who was in Seattle for a number of appearances related to Black History Month, suffered a heart attack at 3:04 a.m. EST at Swedish Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Jan Wilder said.

Haley had been brought to the hospital by ambulance an hour earlier from a downtown Seattle apartment where he had been staying, Wilder said.

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, said Haley "will live on through generations still unborn."

"Mr. Haley gave African-Americans a renewed sense of themselves, an understanding of their historical journey, a refreshed sense of pride in their heritage," Hooks said. "He also gave the white American the portrait of a people who had endured unspeakable suffering as slaves, but whose inner spirit could not be chained."

Actor Moses Gunn, reached at his home in Guilford, Conn., said, "Alex Haley was one of the most enchanting and spellbinding people I ever met in my life—he cared and was concerned about all people."

Asked what Haley meant to black America, Gunn said, "I reject that question. Alex Haley is a hero to all Americans because there's no way Roots would have become so accomplished as a book and a TV miniseries if only blacks had read or watched it.

"His legacy is that he was a hero to the American people in general. What he did with Roots was set an example in race relations and family awareness of what America should be."

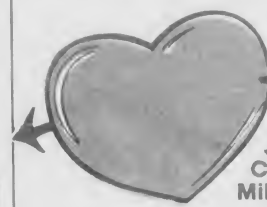

Haley had been moderately successful as a magazine writer before he wrote Roots and as the author of The Autobiography of Malcolm X, which sold close to 7 million copies.

Haley conducted the first of the in-depth interviews that Playboy magazine featured each month. He interviewed Miles Davis, the angry, brooding master of the modern jazz trumpet, and it was published in the September 1972 issue of Playboy.

Roots, the story of a black family that began in Africa and continued into the United States, won a special Pulitzer Prize in 1977. The televised version of the book was divided into eight episodes and dominated the TV ratings.

Alexander Palmer Murray Haley was born Aug. 11, 1921, in Ithaca, N.Y. He attended Elizabeth City Teachers College in North Carolina for two years in the late 1930s before dropping out, but in 1970 he was awarded a doctor of literature degree by Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa.

Both of his marriages ended in divorce. He had three children, one son and two daughters.

Tales from the darkside tonight at Grand Finale

BY DARRYL DOCKSTADER

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

What might fairy tales and dreamscapes have in common with hard-edged political realism? Truth. Weak of hear and mind, beware! In tonight's installment of the Finale's Readings series, Kelly Logan and Doug Hattaway are not going to hold anything back in laying bare the dark realities in the world.

Logan has long enjoyed the grim aspects of fairy tales. They aren't the cute little stories many people take them for, she says.

"Disney ruined that (Cinderella)," Logan explained. "They left out all the good stuff, the (sisters) chopping off the toes and heels."

But are fairy tales real to life?

"What is real?" she asked. "Reality is a concept, and they are real in the sense that they have the value of truth."

Logan's poetry isn't only informed by fairy tales, however. Her Dothan, Ala., roots helped at an early age to engender her internal atmosphere.

"It's a pretty grisly place," she said, "rednecks and shotguns."

She writes in a style she calls "fractured prose" and describes her poetry as "confessing the sins of others, very dark." Indeed, it is just that. She'll be reading about murdering old ladies and being nasty to small children (no pedophilia here, just good, old-fashioned cruelty).

She cautions her audience not to get too "snosed" too soon tonight or they might not follow all of the eerie and twisted details. Logan has looked to her crystals and forseen a very scary evening.

If Logan searches for truth in the fantastic, then Doug Hattaway finds it in just the opposite. A native of Tallahassee, Hattaway has spanned the Western Hemisphere in his journeys. His travels are anything but bicep and bikini beach jaunts. Hattaway seems to regularly find himself in the middle of soured

'Disney ruined that (Cinderella)' elections, coups d'etat, and revolutions (and this includes his stint in Washington, D.C. working as a Senator's aide).

Hattaway will be reading a piece he has written especially for this evening. He saw tonight's reading as an opportunity to experiment with a piece designed to be read aloud, "more palatable to the ear." In fact, he claimed this story was tailored with the Grand Finale's audience specifically in mind ("those who like dollar longnecks and a change of pace").

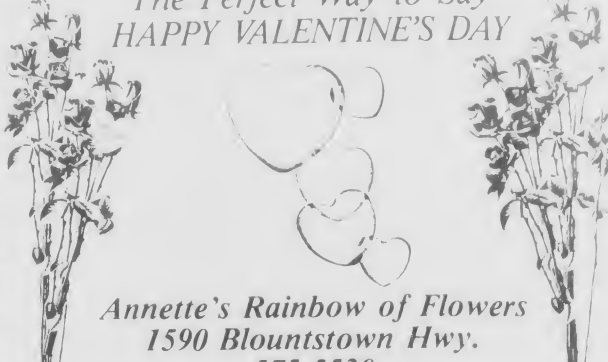

Hattaway recently took a memoirs class from novelist and Florida State English professor Janet Burroway, and cited it as influential in the genesis of his short story. Other influences on his writing include Ernest Hemingway and Graham Greene.

His stories tend to focus on "the concerns of people who are oppressed or underprivileged," Hattaway said. "Basically, most of my recent life experiences of the past couple of years have been encounters with people who live in very different worlds, and trying to understand where they're coming from. So most of the writing is about the interaction of different cultures, usually someone privileged with someone not."

Tonight, he'll share the experiences of a protagonist (who suspiciously resembles the author) who escapes political pell-mell in Paraguay in a Rio-bound riverboat full of local natives—an adventure even MacGyver would blush at.

Tonight at 8, the Grand Finale will be teeming with dark, strange adventure armed with truth. Oh, yes, and cheap beer, as well as no cover charge.

Love Crimes found guilty of boredom in the first degree

BY C. ADOLPH MOORES

STAFF WRITER

Call it thriller mania. Call it a thirst for victimization. The film industry, and apparently its audience, is obsessed with a good (or not so good) cat and mouse game. One need not look further than the movie section of the newspaper or their television guide to see that this type of film has dominated viewing screens everywhere for the past two years. They come in many guises. There is the typical crime-mob thrillers with titles like The Object Of Obsession. Then you have the questionably evil relationship flicks, The Desirable Beauty Of Deadly, Deceptive Fatality or the most recent slew of films featuring the seemingly normal loving male who is actually a raving psychopath like Making Love To A Guy Who Knows You've Tripped And Really Damaged Your Ankle sort of stuff. Whatever form it comes in it's hot, prepackaged and generally quite boring.

The most recent of these nail biters is Love Crimes, a glitzy look into photography fraud, sexual power trips and poor acting. The formula is blatantly exploited with Patrick Bergin playing the "well-meaning" but obviously dangerous woo-er of unsuspecting females. The lovely Sean Young (an off screen psychopath in her own right) is the hard-nosed Atlanta District Attorney who must track him down. Sound familiar? Sound interesting? Well, it is not.

All the standards are here. Bergin's character is portrayed as charmingly demonic. He lures women into photography sessions (posing as a renowned photographer from Vogue) and then plays upon their insecurities ("He told me I was beautiful") to force sex upon them. This is balanced by his argument that the women inevitably enjoyed the meeting, which is supposedly proven in Young's inability to get any of the victims to testify against him. With his dual personality firmly planted, the cliches can then be used on Young character. A childhood tragedy (shown through a fragmented series of flashbacks) continually plagues her, making the case against Bergin a personal crusade. Her higher-ups and partners believe she is a bit too emotionally involved ("You're way outta line on this one") and we soon learn (yawn) that she is strangely attracted to her nemesis.

You can imagine the rest. A back and forth battle of wit and will occurs where numerous scenes are installed for the sake of a plot twist but strangely, none ever occur. There are a slew of dead end scenes where supposedly ominous dialogue and character development serve no purpose (secondary characters mysteriously disappear, insights into Bergin's mind are never followed up on) leaving the viewer in a totally unintended mystery of their own.

Despite the machine gun-riddled script, the main problem is in the direction or, more specifically, the choice of director. Feminist filmmaker Lizzie Borden, who made the brilliantly understated Working Girls, seems strangely out of place in a genre that relies more on the victimization and exploitation of women than building strong female characters. With Working Girls, Borden's documentary style served to bring her characters an undeniable reality which added to their multi-dimensional personalities. In Love Crimes, there is only a hint of this same style (during Young's interviews with the assaulted women) and soon the idea is lost in a wave of unsuccessfully sleek and polished images. It appears as if a somewhat underground filmmaker was let loose in a state of the art film equipment store and allowed free reign to produce a product within a week.

The performances are standard. Bergin uses the same cold, charming snake routine he provided in Sleeping With The Enemy and he wears his sinister nature like a cheap suit. Young is bad. The woman could never act and will never learn, masking the shallowness of her character and her blatant lack of talent behind bursts of laughable emotion and a busload of nudity.

In the end we learn nothing from this film except how to miscast and how not to make a taut thriller. Hopefully Borden will step down a notch for her next effort and realize that big-time filmmaking is not her bag. And that is not an insult by any means. There are some things best left for the hacks who strive for mediocrity.

Love Crimes plays daily at the Miracle 5 theatres on Thomasville Road. Call 224-2617 for show times and further information.

Disney rules at box office

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

HOLLYWOOD—Disney's debut of the Amazon ecology-adventure film Medicine Man took in a healthy $8.5 million at 1,304 theaters to lead the nations' box office during the Friday-through-Sunday weekend.

Medicine Man, starring Sean Connery as a scientist searching for a cancer cure, easily topped another Disney project, The Hand That Rocks The Cradle, which grabbed a still-strong $6.5 million at 1,759 screens.

The success of Medicine Man, despite mixed reviews, underscores the appeal of Connery, whose last film, The Hunt for Red October, was a major hit two years ago for Paramount with more than $120 million in domestic gross. Both films were directed by John McTiernan.

Suburban thriller Cradle, starring Rebecca de Mornay as the nightmare nanny, had led the box office in its first four weeks. It has now grossed more than $51 million in 31 days and has become the year's first big hit.

The two Disney films will face strong competition this weekend with Paramount's opening of the rock-comedy Wayne's World, starring Saturday Night Live veterans Dana Carvey and Mike Myers, at more than 1,700 screens.

Disney now has four films in the top 10, with Father of the Bride in sixth and Beauty and the Beast in eighth. The studio clearly leads all others so far this year after slumping for much of 1991.

Final Analysis, a thriller from Warner Bros. starring Richard Gere as a psychiatrist who gets too involved with Kim Basinger, finished a close third behind Cradle with $6.4 million at 1,508 screens. Like Medicine Man, the reviews for Final Analysis have been mixed.

Universal's much-praised southern drama, Fried Green Tomatoes, continued to cook up respectable grosses in fourth place with $6.2 million at 1,229 theaters. Tomatoes, which finished second in its first two weeks in wide release, has now taken in $25.3 million.

20th Century Fox's spy drama, Shining Through, starring Melanie Griffith declined sharply in its second weekend, falling from third to fifth and losing more than 40 percent with $3.7 million at 1,433 screens.

Holiday season holdover films took the next six spots, led by two Steve Martin films—Father Of The Bride at $2.8 million at 1,645 screens and Fox's Grand Canyon with $2.5 million at 1,223 screens.

Beauty And The Beast nosed out Warner's JFK by just $208 to take the eight spot at $2.3 million. TriStar's Hook rounded out the top ten with $2.1 million at 1,598 screens, followed by Columbia's Prince of Tides with $2 million at 1,495 screens.

FSU skins struggling Wolfpack

BY JOE JOHNSON

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Florida State rolled into North Carolina State's Reynolds Coliseum Monday and earned an 87-79 victory over the reeling Wolfpack. The Seminoles' win lifts their record to 16-6 overall and 8-4 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

N.C. State fell to 9-13 and 3-6 with its seventh straight loss.

Florida State was led by junior forward Doug Edwards and freshman guard Bob Sura who each scored 25. Sura posted a new career high with an outstanding shooting performance from the floor hitting eight of 14 shots. Junior guard Sam Cassell rounded out FSU's players in double figures with 24.

For most of the night FSU kept N.C. State's Tom Gugliotta shackled with changing defenses. Seminoles head coach Pat Kennedy used the ploy to keep Gugliotta from getting on track shooting the ball.

"I thought we did a pretty good job changing defenses," Kennedy said. "We had guys an inch or two from Gugliotta's nose all night."

Focusing on Gugliotta, however, opened the door for other Wolfpack players to step forward and spark runs that challenged FSU's lead. Gugliotta scored 26 while freshman guard Curtis Marshall posted a career-high 18 points, hitting five three-pointers. Freshman guard Mark Davis scored 11 before fouling out with

"We handled (N.C. State's) runs very well tonight," Kennedy said. "And we were able to take advantage of their triangle-and-two against Sam and Bobby to get some open shots for Doug."

Florida State took a 13-point lead into halftime. Midway through the second half, however, the lead was cut to one as N.C. State crawled its way back into the game. The Seminoles took advantage of some untimely Wolfpack turnovers and pushed the lead back to nine with an 8-0 run. Down the stretch FSU got several easy baskets against the Wolfpack's pressure defense to preserve the win.

Cassell scored nine of his 16 first-half on three 3-pointers during a 17-0 run that helped the Seminoles build a 41-22 lead with 6:02 left. Florida State hit six of 14 3-pointers and N.C. State canned eight of 18 in the first half, but the Wolfpack was held to three of nine from inside the 3-point arch.

Tyson guilty on three counts; sentencing is set for March 6

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

INDIANAPOLIS—Former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson was convicted Monday night on one count of rape and two counts of deviate sexual behavior in the rape of a beauty pageant contestant last July.

The Marion County jury deliberated nine hours, 25 minutes before reaching its verdict.

Judge Patricia Gifford set sentencing for March 6. Tyson must appear for a pre-sentencing hearing Tuesday. Each count carries a maximum sentence of 20 years.

Tyson, who has won 41 of 42 professional bouts, sat pensively with his hands folded and showed no emotion when the verdicts were read.

The jury was convinced the hulking fighter lured a naive, petite 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant to his downtown Indianapolis room early last July 19 and attacked her, performing oral sex and intercourse against her will.

Tyson's defense maintained the accomplished young woman is wise beyond her years and sought a relationship with the boxer. He was rude to her after their consensual encounter, the defense said, and she sought revenge by pressing charges.

Before the trial began, defense attorneys for the 25-year-old black boxer argued too few blacks were on the county's voting rolls from which jurors were sought. Also, the judge barred three surprise defense witnesses during the trial.

Jury integrity also became an issue Feb. 5 when a deadly fire struck the hotel housing jurors and residents of a nearby apartment building shouted their support for Tyson as the jurors were huddled on the street.

The legal disputes and the fire could build the foundation for an appeal.

Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford sent the case to the jury of nine men and three women just before 1 p.m.

In closing arguments, prosecutor Greg Garrison frequently mocked the defense's portrayal of the accuser as a gold digger out for revenge, pointing out that she is a devout Christian and volunteer in her New England community.

In an animated 45-minute argument, Garrison pretended to instruct the accuser in plotting against Tyson for supposedly jilting her after consensual sex.

"The next time you frame someone for money, you've got to (do) a better job," Garrison said while speaking in a condescending tone and pointing toward the accuser, who was seated with her mother at the front row of the courtroom gallery.

"Don't you see?" he said, giving his attention back to the jury. "If you're going to make something up, you've got to make up a lot better story."

The accuser says Tyson lured her to his suite at the hotel about 2 a.m. on the pretense of talking and finding his bodyguard, then attacked her.

Lead defense attorney Vincent Fuller often stood behind a lectern during his final 85-minute final argument, saying the accuser knew what she was getting into with Tyson.

"I submit to you that she was treated rudely but was humiliated by her own conduct," Fuller said. "She says, 'I had no business being in a room at 2 a.m. with a man I barely know,' then proceeded telling stories of varying details. (The accuser) voluntarily got into the limo, went to his hotel room, went to his bedroom and sat on his bed. To watch TV? I don't think so."

Fuller emphatically explained that if the 220-pound Tyson forced himself on the petite 110-pound complainant, she would have suffered visible injuries.

"That kind of massive weight on a frail young woman would hurt. There was not a bruise found on her body. Not one single bruise," Fuller said while pounding his open hand on the lectern.

In the prosecution's summation, deputy prosecutor Barbara Trathen said Tyson and soul singer Johnny Gill told "the lie" of the trial when they testified Tyson used explicit, vulgar language in inviting the accuser on a date at a pageant rehearsal July 18

Olympic Notebook

Blair brings home American gold

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Bonnie Blair, surrounded by kin and carrying the hopes of a nation starved for success in the Winter Olympics, Monday retained her title as the fastest female skater in history.

The 27-year-old from Champaign, Ill., won her second straight Olympic gold medal in 500-meter speed skating to give the United States its first medal of any kind at these games.

Blair, skating before some 50 relatives and friends, dedicated her victory to her late father, who saw her win the gold in Calgary four years ago, but did not live to see his daughter's latest triumph.

"My dad always said I was going to win a gold medal," said Blair, whose father Chuck Blair died of pneumonia on Christmas Day 1989. "I always thought he was crazy. I was glad that he was with me in 1988 and that he was there to see that. This medal definitely goes to him."

Blair became only the second woman to successfully defend an Olympic speedskating title. Lydia Skoblikova of the Soviet Union won in 1960 and 1964 at both 1,500 and 3,000 meters.

With a silver and bronze in the men's luge, Austria ran its medal total to seven—three more than any other country and only three short of Austria's entire total of four years ago. Germany had four medals, including a gold won Monday by George Hackl in the luge.

Hackl had strong performances over two days that brought him a relatively easy triumph in the luge. He had the best time in three of the four runs that made up the event and won with a combined time of 3:02.363.

Skiing for sunny Senegal is never easy, and the Olympics are no exception.

Racers from the west African nation finished in two of the last three places in Monday's men's downhill, beating only Yugoslavia's Zoran Perusina.

But Alphonse Gomis got the honor of starting fourth as part of the "snow seed," or lower ranked racers who are drawn by lot to ski first to clear snow from the course for top competitors.

Gomis was timed in 2 minutes, 00.56 seconds, just ahead of teammate Lamine Gueye.

NHL fans watching the Olympics can't help but notice one major difference: No brawls. Or fights, for that matter.

Why?
Any Olympic player who fights is automatically ejected, as opposed to being assessed a five-minute major penalty in the NHL.

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Spontaneous decisions will bring excellent results.

Romance takes on new luster in the spring. Financial loose ends can be tied tip and forgotten by June. Early fall brings fresh business triumphs. Community and charitable efforts pay big dividends for you as well as those you seek to help. Your powers of persuasion will be especially strong next December. Go ahead and ask "the impossible!"

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Burt Reynolds and Leslie Nielsen, actress Eva Gabor, chef Paul Bocuse.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although you like to take charge, you would be wise to encourage other people to express their ideas. An employer gives you the green light for a pet project. Romance sizzles!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Kind words will strengthen family ties today. They could also start the ball rolling on a new project. Expect fanfare tonight when you find yourself in the spotlight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Steer clear of a casual flirtation now. You could be playing with fire! Fulfill your regular responsibilities with enthusiasm; that is where true happiness lies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasize friendly interaction both socially and on the job. You may be able to land an important client or contract if you know the right people. Gather with good friends tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Listening with an open heart will lead to new togetherness. Celebrate the special rapport you and a loved one enjoy. Turn on the charm when attending social affairs. Put others at ease.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance and entertainment dominate your agenda now. Feast on life; drink it up! A quiet night at home restores your energy following a busy day. Big good niddance to subliminal worries.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Hidden forces may be creating deception or confusion at work. Listening to the grapevine helps you unravel a riddle. You find out more than you expected. Keep your promises to loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be careful not to jump the gun where a domestic matter is concerned. You may not have all the information you need to make a convincing argument. Confer with friends or coworkers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are eager to forge ahead with your career plans. A corporate headhunter could help you land a coveted job. Remember your manners! Be careful not to badger or insult potential allies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Join forces with another person to make a creative project profitable. Your timing is right, and your chances for success are excellent! Romance reaches new heights this week.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Helping a family member or coworker should be your top priority today. A new friendship is launched as a direct result of your good deeds. The love temperature keeps soaring.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Private and personal schemes flourish today. Doors previously closed to you open right up! Put your best foot forward at a conference or gala social event.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are intelligent, reliable and wise beyond their years. They like to work things out for themselves and may resent being told the obvious. Treat these youngsters' opinions with respect and they will reward you with their trust. Smart and ambitious, these Aquarians know how to husband their energies and resources. They make excellent mediators, thanks to their superb negotiating skills. A career in management-labor relations is just one option they can explore.

Durant confident FAMU baseball is ready for tough schedule

BY TY SIMPSON
STAFF WRITER

Joseph Durant enters his second season as the Florida A&M baseball coach with a new level of confidence that he didn't have at this time last year.

After serving four seasons assisting former coach John Lucas, Durant took over as head coach at the end of the 1990 season and admittingly he was a little nervous.

He took over a young team that finished 18-18-1 in '90. Durant's impact was felt immediately. He turned his team around in '91 as the Rattlers were 29-17 and won their fourth Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title in the last five years.

Durant is approaching this season with high expectations for his players. He pushed for a harder schedule this year in order to give his team as well as his players more recognition and a shot at getting an at large bid for NCAA post-season play.

"It's tougher than it was last year. We're playing more quality teams," Durant said. "The better the teams, the better brand of baseball. I hope these guys can play."

The Rattlers strength is in their tremendous team speed. The defending Division I stolen base champions (137 steals in 148 attempts), the Rattlers will once again rely on speed to produce runs. Last year the offense produced 7.6 runs per game, while carrying an impressive .328 team batting average.

"We're just blessed with speed," said Durant. "Defensively we have so much speed in the outfield, sometimes it can become a problem."

FAMU's gifted outfield trio has all the right stuff, combining tremendous speed from Morris Daniels and Michael Ray, with the tremendous power of Willie Brown.

Daniels and Ray combined for 37 stolen bases in 39 attempts last year, an astounding success rate of 94 percent.

Junior right fielder Brown had seven home runs last year in just 27 games. Brown didn't play against left-handers last season, but Durant expects him to be a fixture in the outfield this year.

Contrary to the strength at the plate, getting good performances from the pitching mound might provide somewhat of a problem for Durant with his best returning hurler Malcolm Hamilton coming off a mediocre 7-5 season.

Durant is hoping the experience of his pitching staff will come through for him this year. Senior Hamilton already won one victory this season.

David Freeman became the closer last year, coming on strong with two saves in 19 appearances with a 3.80 era.

Promising newcomers include freshman outfielder Corey Battey (5-10, 175, Ocala, FL), who is the son of former Minnesota Twins' catcher Earl Battey, and outfielder James White, a star athlete from local Florida High School (6-3, 170).

FAMU opened the season with two against Florida Atlantic last weekend and split the series. In game one Saturday, Hamilton (1-0) pitched six innings of four-hit ball and Freeman got his first save as the Rattlers won 6-1.

On Sunday the pitchers had control problems as FAMU suffered a 7-9 loss. Freshman Rickey Montz (0-1) suffered the loss.

Today at 3 p.m. FAMU will host Jacksonville University. Durant said Monday he had not decided on a starter, but was leaning towards freshmen Antonio Rivers, who would be making his first collegiate appearance.

SPORTS BRIEFS

The Florida State volleyball team announced the signing of two high school seniors during the national signing period. Sonia Preocanin (6-2 outside hitter from Ontario, Canada) and Valerie Broussard (5-11 middle and outside hitter from St. Martinville, LA.) are the first players to commit to FSU for the upcoming season. The signings conclude recruiting season for the Seminoles until next year.

The Tallahassee Sports Authority is

Joy riding juveniles are behind increase in automobile thefts

BY CHE ODOM

STAFF WRITER

It only took a minute.

Kevin Smith and his friends saw the 1991 Dodge Dynasty sitting by itself in the Betton Oaks neighborhood, and knew it was theirs for the taking.

They pushed the car halfway down the drive, hot-wired it, slammed on the gas and backed it across the street into a neighbor's yard before speeding off like bats out of hell. And that was only the beginning.

"We went around town, taking turns at driving, and then we ran it into a lake," said Smith, a 16-year-old Leon High School student who asked for obvious reasons that his real name be withheld. "We left it there with the front wheels in the water and we haul booked it through the woods."

Smith said nothing gives him a rush like driving down a street in somebody else's car, and apparently he's not alone. If crime statistics are any indication, joy riding is a fad that's on its way back.

A Tallahassee Police Department study released last week revealed that auto thefts in Tallahassee increased from 847 in 1990 to 1,275 in 1991—a percentage increase of 50.5 percent.

TPD spokesperson Phil Kiracofe said Monday he wasn't surprised.

"We've noticed an increase over the last few months," he said, adding that although he didn't have any specific numbers, most of the thefts were committed by juveniles.

Car dealerships and car rental lots are favorite spots for the teenage thieves, said Kiracofe. Most of the vehicles are found abandoned after incurring some damage.

"Some of (the juveniles) have gotten to be real experts at it," he said. "They've learned to defeat the ignition system altogether. It only takes them a matter of seconds to break the window and have the car on the street."

Crimsy Richardson, a Florida A&M University sophomore, wasn't shocked by the increase either. Her car was stolen less than a year ago.

"I looked out and there they went," she said. "I saw them leaving. They were kids."

When police found Richardson's car, it was in a ditch in Tom Brown Park and had sustained about $800 worth of damage.

"They were never caught," she added.

Like TPD officials, Leon County Sheriff's Office spokesperson Dick Simpson said the sheriff's office has also noticed a big increase in auto thefts, and that juveniles play a major role. He said many teenagers actually laugh when they get caught, knowing they probably won't have to serve any time.

"There really is no deterrent," Simpson said. "It's not the judges, it's not HRS. There just isn't a place to house juveniles. Judges are having to decide whether to take a child who's stolen a car or a child who's shot somebody or raped.

"They have to house the most violent juveniles first."

FSU tells vendors to hike prices on Coke

BY JOEL RISBERG

STAFF WRITER

Progress comes at a price, even when it involves food and drinks on Florida State University's campus.

Because of a recent drive to install Access Card slots in all campus vending machines, Cokes on campus are more expensive, up from 50 cents a can to 60 cents.

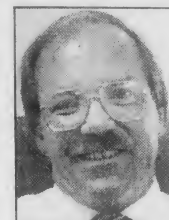

And other repercussions are still coming to light, especially for customers of the five hot dog vendors on campus who are forced to charge the higher coke prices.

"We asked Coca-Cola to put in the card readers at their own cost," business services director Al Gilligan said Tuesday, referring to slots for the new Access card, a university issued debit card.

As a result, FSU approved Coca-Cola's rate increase to help offset the company's installment costs, Gilligan said.

FSU has a campus-wide contract with Coca-Cola for the vending machines, and a similar agreement is in place with the Marriott Corporation to provide nearly every food-related service on campus. The

Bush speeds up phaseout of ozone-depleting elements

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—Responding to mounting political and scientific pressure, the Bush administration moved Tuesday to accelerate its planned phaseout of ozone-depleting elements.

The announcement, on the eve of President Bush's declaration that he will seek a second term, comes in response to new findings indicating that emissions of these substances "are depleting the stratospheric ozone layer more quickly than previously had been believed."

The administration said its unilateral action would speed up by five years the phaseout of chemicals that destroy the protective ozone layer.

Government and private scientists say the chemicals, including chlorofluorocarbons, known as CFCs, have been registering in greater concentration over Antarctica than previously measured and also now threatened the layer over the Northern Hemisphere.

Tuesday's action does not require congressional approval, though most members of Congress support it. The acceleration means that U.S. companies will be required to cease production of CFCs and most other ozone-depleting substances by December 1995 instead of the year 2000, the deadline set by international guidelines.

In his notification to Congress, Bush said he would ask U.S. producers to cut 1992 output levels to one-half of 1986 production levels.

Bush also called on other nations that have not signed the international accords for lower emissions to match the U.S. goals.

The United States produces more than 70 percent of all ozone-depleting agents.

Bush also called on other nations that have not signed the international accords for lower emissions to match the U.S. goals.

The administration announcement, which has been expected since last week, came as the American Institute of Architects Tuesday urged that CFCs be banned from new construction projects.

CFCs are widely used as solvents and for years have been the coolant used in refrigerators and air conditioners. They cause chemical reactions in the upper atmosphere that destroy Earth's protective ozone layer.

Judge: woman should get AIDS information

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

ST. PETERSBURG—A judge on Tuesday ordered that a woman exposed to hepatitis while performing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on an accident victim be told whether the victim tested positive for the AIDS virus.

Circuit Judge Gerard O'Brien ruled during an emergency hearing that Connie Mederos-Jacobs, 38, be told the results of a blood test to determine whether the comatose man on whom she performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation Jan. 30 carries the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

Mederos-Jacobs said she was angry about the confusion over whether good Samaritans have a right to be told about the disease status of the victims they help.

She also said she was angry about a state law that required her to go to court to learn the man's HIV status because no one was authorized to release the information while the man remained in a coma.

"The law does not provide for good Samaritans at all," she said.

Smith suggests scrapping some sports to lighten budget burden

BY THOMAS AUSTIN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Some sports programs at the state's nine universities should be eliminated to maintain high academic standards if the Legislature does not generate new revenue for education this year, says Secretary of State Jim Smith.

"I think only if we want to change the raw definition of what the university really is can we achieve academic excellence with diminishing resources," Smith said Tuesday as part of the Florida State University Faculty Luncheon Series.

Smith warned the packed house at the Presbyterian University Center that he was a harbinger of doom and gloom. He said the realities of Florida's government make him sad and sick, and he had little regard for current legislators' policies.

"Government exists now more to serve itself than it really exists to recognize and serve the needs of the people," said Smith, a Republican who many say has aspirations for higher office.

"As far as the budget is concerned, we aren't going to be moving in the direction of excellence as it relates to the broad definition of a university," he said.

"We don't have enough people serving that will put the interest of what is good for our state ahead of some kind of political agenda," he added.

Smith said legislators are hearing loud and clear from their constituents this year that they don't want services reduced, but the constituents also aren't willing to pay new taxes.

As a result, Smith said, legislators will play by party lines and most likely pass a bare-bones budget that would cut nearly $44 million from the state university system's budget.

"The Republicans just want the Democrats to pass the taxes. They want to have the political luxury then of criticizing them at election time," Smith said.

Likewise, Democrats are playing political games, according to Smith.

He added that hundreds of lobbyists represent and protect special interests, leaving the average individual the least represented in the process.

"Most members of the Legislature don't do their homework. They depend entirely too much on staff," Smith said. "They don't read the bills. They don't know what they are voting on half the time."

When that's not the problem, Smith said, legislators are trying to solve every little problem to the extent that it becomes silly. As an example, he mentioned a proposed bill to outlaw dogs from riding in the back of pickups.

STEVE CANNON/FLAMBEAU

Smith aired his views on university budget problems Tuesday.

"I've known a Great Dane that weighs about 180 pounds. Where is he going to ride if I have to take him somewhere?" Smith said, followed by laughter from the mostly somber crowd.

The solution, Smith said, is for more politicians to do what they think is right rather than what they perceive as politically advantageous.

For instance, "We need to expand our tax base," Smith said.

Tax revenues now yield $9 billion a year, but another $9 billion is given away as tax exemptions, Smith pointed out.

"I would go for across-the-board repeal of all tax exemptions," Smith said.

His prediction for the future: a long, hot summer

Amendment would put education's development impact into cities' laps

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

Tallahassee Mayor Debbie Lightsey lashed out at a proposed amendment to the Senate appropriations budget Tuesday, which she says would take some of the teeth out of the state's comprehensive growth law.

The amendment would limit the amount of money the state is obliged to pay local government for the impact of construction done for the State University System, the Community College System and public schools.

In the past, building projects have had significant effects on traffic, water drainage and the environment. The amendment would cap impact fees and costs of development to the state at 3.1 percent.

"This (amendment) is specific to educational facilities. However, it is my view that this will eventually extend to exempt state government from the growth management law," Lightsey said at a City Hall news conference Tuesday afternoon.

The amendment, sponsored by senators Pat Thomas and Mary Grizzle, and Senate President Gwen Margolis, has a powerful backing, Lightsey pointed out.

None of the three senators could be reached for comment.

Board of Regents Vice Chancellor for Public Affairs Bill Shade said the amendment would be a good one for the state of Florida.

"It would standardize the payment of concurrency fees across the state," he said.

Shade added the amendment does indeed work toward the state's interests, but the figure comes from 20 projects done at Florida State University.

Florida A&M University's General Counsel Bishop Holifield said he was more concerned with getting money to build the buildings in the first place. But he also said FAMU was sensitive to the city's environmental concerns.

"I know Florida A&M wants to do everything it can to be a good citizen and preserve the environment," Holifield said.

"There's nothing wrong with us being exempted as long as we're doing what's best for the environment," he added.

Attorneys at FSU could not be reached for comment. Lightsey said her anger comes from past experience and an ominous future.

"I'm outraged, particularly in light of the fact that city government has a history of trying to cooperate with state government," she said.

The real crime

In his State of the Union address, President Bush childishly boasted that with the collapse of the Soviet Union, the United States was the world's only superpower.

We're No. 1 was the rah-rah, banal message.

According to a new study, we now learn that we surpass the world in yet another dubious category: the incarceration of American citizens.

The shocking results of this study, conducted by The Sentencing Project, a prison reform group, portrays a society that substitutes repression for solutions. A society that ignores humane ways of dealing with crime for more politically expedient remedies.

The group's findings are devastating and run counter to our image as a humane democracy. Judge for yourself.

Fact: Currently in the United States, 1.1 million people are incarcerated in federal, state or local jails. The cost: $20.3 billion a year.

Fact: The United States jails 455 of its citizens for every 100,000. And—get this—next to us is the pariah state of South Africa at 311 per 100,000.

Fact: The United States imprisonment rate of black males is five times that of South Africa. The U.S. has locked up 3,370 per 100,000; South Africa, 681 per 100,000.

The tragedy is that many of these people behind bars simply don't belong there. They are there primarily as a result of Draconian measures adopted during the Reagan-Bush years, when mandatory sentencing and harsher sentences for certain crimes were adopted as a panacea for the crime problem.

Of course, the situation was different if that criminal was one of the many members of the Reagan-Bush administration indicted and convicted for white-collar crime.

Despite the fact that our prisons are filled to the brim, America remains a crime-ridden society. And despite what the law-and-order freaks would have you believe, the problem isn't confined to poor blacks with crack pipes.

Because of our society's success ethic, and its get-ahead-at-any-cost mentality, crime is rife at all levels of the social strata: from the suites to the streets. From S&L thieves to your friendly local crack dealer, the message is the same: Get rich by any means necessary.

It's time we admit that just as the economic policies of recent years have proven to be a disaster, so have the crime policies of the Reagan-Bush administrations. Radical change in the criminal justice status quo is the only solution worth considering.

Thus, if our country should be so fortunate as to have more sane and rational leaders in power in the future, we strongly recommend they take a serious look at the study's level-headed recommendations. They include repeal of mandatory sentencing laws, community service for non-violent crimes and an increase in supervised probation.

Our policy of putting away people until they rot—most of them poor and/or from minority groups—when more humane solutions are available is morally repugnant.

Surely the world's only superpower can do better. To do so would be something truly worth boasting about.

PO'd in Palatka

Editor:

This is in response to the article by D.K. Roberts, "Legislative Irrationalism," in the Jan. 30 Flambeau.

Roberts writes about "My Own Private Palatka," and residents of Palatka were very offended. The reporter should learn two basic rules: First, do your research and second, do not criticize what you do not know!

For your information, Roy Campbell was a state representative who died in office in 1990. He was extremely active in his community for over 40 years, and the people of the "Palatka, fabulous Palatka" wanted to remember him in some way. Therefore, renaming the Civic Center after him seemed like an appropriate gesture.

Just because that reporter, or for that matter anyone outside of Palatka, does not know who Campbell was is no reason to criticize this action. Who knows who Doak Campbell was? Most people outside of Tallahassee probably don't, and for that matter, probably most of the students at FSU don't know, either. If you will notice, many of the buildings throughout the FSU campus are named after people no one remembers, but is that a reason to criticize? Would the reporter just like buildings to be named "Building A" and "Building B"?

Playing politics

Editor:

The Monarchy Party is playing politics again. Ms. Muskowitz's letter on Feb. 7 was not just a distortion of the truth, but another example of her party's love of mudslinging. Ms. Muskowitz, the Feb. 4 march on the Capitol was planned by the Florida Students Association. The Student Government Association provided the advertising.

But it was a group of student organizations that provided the manpower: Alpha Phi Omega, the Grass Root Organizing Class from the College of Social Sciences, and THE SEMINOLE PARTY.

It was Seminole Party members who were up at 7 a.m. hanging up fliers. It was the Seminole Party members who passed out fliers on campus and outside the library. It was the Seminole Party who went dorm-storming and Greek-House-announcing. It was Seminole Party members who were on the phone calling people and painting signs and banners.

Ms. Muskowitz, the majority of those weren't senators or Cabinet members who happened to be affiliated with the Seminole Party. They were members of the Seminole Party, one of the top student leadership organizations on campus. They did not hold positions in student government.

But since you brought up SGA, what did the Monarchy Party members who were in senate do for the rally? You claim every election that the Seminole Party doesn't do anything, and the Monarchy Party is the real voice of the students. So, where were you? What did you do? How many hours of work did you put into letting students know about the rally? How many student groups did you or your party speak to?

Plath's problem

Editor:

Having just read Shane and Compton's comic strip "Is This Tomorrow?" (The Story of Sylvia Plath in two parts), I am concerned that those who are innocently unknowledgeable will believe this fiendishly humorous interpretation of the tragic facts of Ms. Plath's life. That college newspapers may playfully poke fun at anything and everything is marvelous. Ah, youth!

Still, I think darkly satirizing mental illness as if it were part of a macabre, occult, sado-masochistic movement is the same as writing to shock readers into embarrassed laughter at any tortured and gross exaggeration of human physiological dilemma. I laughed, but I felt guilty.

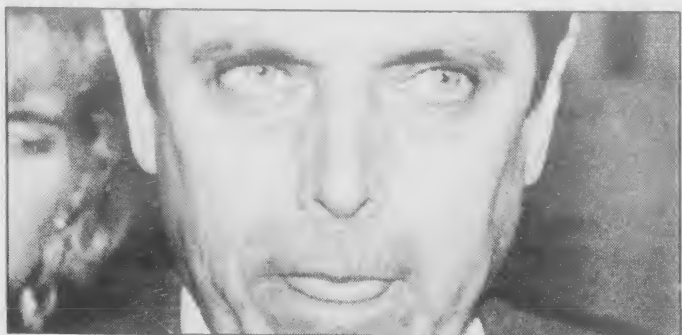

Depression is a bona fide disease, not a funny, somber personality quirk. And it can be inherited. Sylvia Plath certainly did not wish to be depressive and she was born 20 to 40 years before the great breakthrough in drugs to treat this disease.

Honestly, she could not help the way she thought. Her unhappy poems and her famous novel, The Bell Jar, may seem broodingly suicidal and full of rage. Actually, through literary expression, she was pleading for help to survive a disease that destroyed her logical perception of the world and herself.

Today she would have good chances of recovering and avoiding suicide. She was a tremendously intelligent young poet, wife and mother whose dreams for self-realization were skewered by a pathology of the brain we still know little about. If her life and the course of her illness interest you, you might like to read Sylvia Plath, A Biography by Linda Wagner-Martin, Simon and Schuster, 1987.

Martinez isn't worth a spit, FSU researchers say, except maybe as a drug-war fall guy for George Bush.

Drug czars are political ploys, researchers say

BY MATT GRIMISON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The government post of drug czar is nothing but a public relations ploy that tries to divert the blame of widespread drug use away from chief executives, according to Florida State University researchers.

Public administration Professor James Bowman and James DeBeaugrine, a legislative analyst with the Florida House Appropriations Committee and former FSU graduate student, recently came to this conclusion after studying the performance of Doug Hughes, Florida Drug Czar under former Gov. Bob Martinez.

"Czars are a visible way to create the illusion that something is being done," DeBeaugrine said last week.

According to DeBeaugrine, the office of drug czar is actually not an office at all. It is a post created by the governor or president, he said, and therefore has no power mandated by the Legislature.

"It basically exists because of a press release," DeBeaugrine said. Hughes left office when Martinez did last year, and Gov. Lawton Chiles does not have a drug czar. After losing last year's re-election bid to Chiles, Martinez was appointed by President George Bush as the federal drug czar.

Although it was the Florida Drug Czar post that DeBeaugrine researched, the situation is not isolated to the state, he added.

"Martinez was just parroting Bush," DeBeaugrine said. "I feel we have the same situation in Washington as we had here."

An official with Martinez' office in Washington countered DeBeaugrine's statement, saying the office is mandated by Congress.

"We do have authority. We have a 12-point, $7 billion budget that we spend on drug treatment, prevention and interdiction," Elaine Crispin, director of public affairs for Martinez' office, said Tuesday. "It is not a public relations office. It is a useful office that fights the war on drugs."

DeBeaugrine stressed that he researched the post of drug czar and not the individual holding it. He used four criteria to judge performance: leadership ability, service provision, financial coordination and political viability.

DeBeaugrine said he found Hughes most lacking in leadership ability. "There was not much coordination," DeBeaugrine said.

Also related to leadership ability, according to DeBeaugrine, was how well the drug czar used the media to help increase public awareness. DeBeaugrine said Hughes failed to have any affect on the media at all.

"As part of my research, I checked every article in The Tallahassee Democrat for a two-month period," said DeBeaugrine. "In 25 articles pertaining to drugs, Hughes was mentioned once. In comparison, there is a lobbyist who was mentioned five times."

Attempts to reach Hughes Monday and Tuesday were unsuccessful.

According to DeBeaugrine, Hughes outlined a positive program that included a "front-line" approach to the drug problem soon after he was appointed to the post. His plan included treatment programs for reducing problems associated with addicts, such as drug-related crime.

"It was like a breath of fresh air," DeBeaugrine said. "However, as time went on, Hughes was nowhere to be seen."

DeBeaugrine concluded Hughes had "jumped on the (Martinez) bandwagon" after realizing his approach went against Martinez' "more prison beds" philosophy. Since Hughes owed his position and power to Martinez, DeBeaugrine said, it would be impossible for Hughes to implement the treatment programs.

While falling short of calling the post a Republican party invention, DeBeaugrine said it correlates with Republican politics, which place more emphasis on sending abusers to jail than treatment programs.

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

VIENNA—The environmental organization Greenpeace called Tuesday on the International Atomic Energy Agency to demand the shutdown of the 10 remaining Soviet VVER water-cooled nuclear reactors.

"The agency has not shown that it has the backbone to regulate nuclear power in the past. Their own evidence on the VVER reactors is staring them in the face and they have only one option: Shutdown now," Greenpeace spokesman John Willis said.

The environmental group said it calculated there was more than a one-in-four chance of a major nuclear meltdown in Eastern Europe or the newly formed Commonwealth of Independent States if the VVER reactor models keep operating for up to five years.

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates—Iran is courting investment from the U.S. oil industry, and American oil companies are beginning to look at the OPEC nation with great interest as economic barriers fall, Iranian and U.S. businessmen said Tuesday.

Iran also plans to increase ties with the oil-producing Muslim republics of the former Soviet Union as part of an effort to develop its oil sector to boost the domestic economy, an Iranian petroleum consultant told the Arab Oil and Gas Show in Dubai.

ATHENS, Greece—Apparently answering criticism that Islamic fervor in Iran has cooled, Iranian leaders said Tuesday the spirit that toppled the shah 13 years ago is still alive, Tehran Radio reported.

Addressing a throng in the Iranian capital to mark the 13th anniversary of the overthrow of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani said, "Our enemies have been condemned and shamed, and the Islamic revolution has taken its place in the world. The principles of the Imam (the late spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhallah Khomeini) are still alive, and the objectives we have been following ... have today been achieved."

nation

WASHINGTON—The administration, continuing to portray Saddam Hussein as an international menace, told Congress Tuesday that the Iraqi leader poses an "unusual and extraordinary threat" to U.S. interests.

The White House did not identify the potential target of those threats in its report to lawmakers, but an administration source said Iraq still possesses some component to produce nuclear weapons and retains an arsenal of ground-to-ground missiles.

DES MOINES, Iowa—Sen. Tom Harkin walked away with the top spot in his home state's Democratic caucus, the first test of the presidential campaign season, albeit diminished in significance by the favorite son's presence.

Harkin garnered 40 of the 49 committed delegates to the Democratic convention, capturing nearly 77 percent of the caucus delegates and eclipsing the 60 percent goal he had set for himself.

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court Tuesday gave the administration three days to respond to charges it covered up evidence that repatriated Haitians faced persecution when it obtained an emergency order last month that let it begin to forcibly return the boat people to their homeland.

CONCORD, N.H.—Conservative commentator Patrick Buchanan invited New Hampshire lawmakers Tuesday to join his "rebellion" against President Bush and turn their backs on four years of high taxes, spending and budget deficits.

Buchanan's call for fair international trade, promise to veto federal spending and pledge cuts in taxes elicited applause by the largely conservative Republican audience of state representatives and senators.

state

ST. PETERSBURG—A lawyer exposed to hepatitis while performing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on an accident victim is seeking a court order to determine whether the victim also has AIDS.

Connie Mederos-Jacobs, 38, an assistant state attorney for Manatee County, went to the aid of a 19-year-old man she saw dart through traffic and get hit by a truck Jan. 30.

She wrapped him with her jacket and began performing cardiopulmonary resuscitation. She reportedly split her lip on the man's teeth in the course of performing mouth-to-mouth breathing.

MIAMI—Manuel Noriega's attorney called a fifth U.S. drug agent to testify for the defense Tuesday in an attempt to prove that the deposed Panamanian dictator was an ally in the U.S. war against drugs.

Thomas Telles, who was the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration attache in Panama during the mid 1980s, identified a dozen reports documenting that Noriega's soldiers passed on tips about suspects arriving in Panama with large quantities of cash.

Car crash

A pregnant Quincy woman was seriously injured Tuesday after the car she was riding in crashed into a telephone pole, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said.

Harry Ann Ellis, 26, was riding in a 1989 Nissan driven by Camela V. Hale, 21, also of Quincy. Hale lost control of her car and veered off the roadway after changing lanes in the 5200 block of West Tennessee Street around 6:50 a.m.

The vehicle struck a phone pole, throwing Ellis from the car, then became airborne, hit a tree, and landed on top of Ellis, who is six months pregnant. Both women were taken to the Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center by ambulance.

Ellis is currently in critical condition and the condition of her unborn baby is not yet known. Hale was treated and later released. Neither woman was wearing a seat belt.

Bathroom attack

A woman was attacked in the bathroom of a local supermarket Monday afternoon and robbed of her money, Garrett said.

The victim told investigating officers that after cashing her paycheck at Harvey's Supermarket, 5010 W. Tennessee St., she went into the bathroom at the rear of the store. While in a stall at about 3:13 p.m., the victim noticed someone entering the adjoining stall.

The suspect then reached over the top of the stall, put something around the victim's throat and began choking her. The woman's money was stolen from her purse. The victim then fell to the ground and injured her right leg.

She was taken by ambulance to TMRMC for treatment and was in stable condition Tuesday evening. The victim could not identify her attacker.

Some Repubs: Bush should support choice

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

CONCORD, N.H.—President Bush risks losing support of mainstream Republicans if he continues to oppose abortion rights, said a coalition of Republican lawmakers Tuesday.

On the eve of the president's visit to the state, 185 Republican House and Senate lawmakers publicly announced their support for Bush's reelection. There are 400 members of the state Legislature.

But 130 of the lawmakers also support abortion rights, said Republican Rep. Elizabeth Hager of Concord in a letter to Bush.

"We are proud to be Republicans and we are proud that New Hampshire is a strongly pro-choice state. We think that the party should take the position ... that because reproductive decisions are intensely personal, government should not be involved," Hager said.

price and service arrangements affect all sales of food or drinks on campus, and even the five hot dog vendors on campus must bow to the agreements.

Last November, when some of these vendors continued to charge 50 cents for cans of Coke after the machines had gone to 60 cents, Marriott and FSU officials informed the vendors that they would have to raise their prices.

"This office (business services) asked Marriott to make certain that prices were consistent," Gilligan said.

"It was an administrative decision based on a request from Coca-Cola," added business services associate director Anse Cates.

The hot dog vendors run their stands independently, but a percentage of their profits goes to Marriott and, indirectly, to FSU. Marriott contracts with the entrepreneurs to set up shop on campus.

Because their contracts can be revoked for any reason, the vendors refused to talk on record for fear of endangering their relationships with Marriott and the university. But some of them questioned whether they are being regulated fairly.

Nevertheless, both Marriott and business services officials say they have the right to enforce these policies.

"I do not regulate their prices, but we ask them to be at our price or above," Marriott food services director Joe Pianese said Wednesday. "As long as they come in compliance with FSU, I'm fine."

STEVE CANNON/FLAMBEAU

Campus hot dog vendors have had to raise their prices, too.

"These folks are guests on this campus," Gilligan added. "That's a privilege for them to operate here."

Cates said the university's rationale for forcing the rate change on vendors is mainly motivated by profit, since the contract with Coca-Cola brings over $300,000 per year to FSU, while the five hot dog stands only paid the university $720 last year.

"It was because of a contract that is financially rewarding," Cates said.

Joyriding

Punishment for a car theft depends on a number of different factors, said Joyce Reeves, assistant public defender. The delinquent's age, criminal history, the type of car stolen and other elements are considered when punishment is handed down.

"A juvenile can receive anything from probation up to a commitment stay for five years or until the age of 18, whichever comes first," Reeves said.

According to Reeves, a commitment stay can be hard labor, such as chopping wood in the forest, or serving a sentence at the Dozier juvenile facility in Marianna. In addition, she said, youths over 16 years old can be adjudicated as an adult.

Smith said he knows he's not going to be given much of a punishment. He said the system doesn't take teenage criminals seriously.

"We're too smart," said Smith, who added his dad showed him how to hot-wire a car. "I like to do it when it's raining. No one can hear you when you drive away from there or if you have to break out a window. The harder the storm, the better."

A slew of cinematic stinkaroos

BY C. ADOLPH MOORES

STAFF WRITER

Bill & Ted's Bogus Journey (1991)—I have never understood, nor will I ever understand, the rampant love with which this film and its original have been embraced. The comedy has simply been reduced to a meek, starving animal when something this mindless, tedious and annoying can become one of our most popular "funny" films.

Don't get me wrong, I love silly. The Zucker and Abrahams' films always provide me with a hoot, but they also have an underlying intelligence to them. Hearing two braindead, metalhead California teens with vocabularies as dense as fine mesh provides me with no laughs. Didn't Zappa put an end to this crap with Valley Girl?

This garbage appeals to those same morons who are still using the "NOT!" joke in conversation. Jesus, get a real sense of humor and leave me the hell alone.

Dutch (1991)—Yet another chunk of dung from the desk of John Hughes. Formulas number 27 and 36, I believe. A take-no-crap, down-to-earth working stiff is teamed up with an over-educated, mean-spirited snobbish kid (formula 27—Odd Couple premise). They must travel together across many miles, and are thrown into adverse conditions where they then must bond together to survive (formula 36—Poseidon Adventure premise, recently seen in the forms of Planes, Trains and Automobiles and Midnight Run). Someone bring me the testicles of this clown so he can't pollute the world with his "overly bright" children (see formula 7Z-2).

Jungle Fever (1991)—Fair to good Spike Lee joint about interracial love in the Big Apple. Wesley Snipes plays an up-and-coming architect who risks his pleasant home life for an affair with his newly employed secretary (Annabella Sciorra). Lee deals with the couple's social hardships as well as the problems of black women, color prejudice within the black race, drugs, religion and, of course, racism.

All these facets become the problem, however, and the film becomes lost as it tries to tackle too many things at once. It also becomes far too preachy. Subtlety, not a sledgehammer, was needed here. Claims by Lee that he was robbed at Cannes are laughable. I don't remember Wim Wenders shamefully splashing his face on Nike commercials

CPD is showplace for local African-American artworks

BY CLAIRE COHEN
STAFF WRITER

Diversity is a theme that continuously emerges at the "African-American Art Exhibit" at the Center for Professional Development.

Thirteen artists with ties to Tallahassee are featured at the exhibit, which includes media, themes and styles that are as diverse as the African-American community itself.

Ken Falana has two of his works on exhibit and has taught many of the other exhibitors. His untitled assemblages draw on his appreciation of local flora. Both pieces use repeating shapes cut from cotton rag paper and vivid colors that are obtained through the process of silkscreening.

"I began by developing the colors, which were inspired by buttercups and water lilies," Falana said. "I cut the paper up and reassembled it to see what could be done with a single shape."

Falana teaches at Florida A&M University and Tallahassee Community College, and sees a symbiotic relationship between his studio work and his teaching. "I enjoy teaching and my studio work revolves around it," he said. "I draw inspiration from my students and also find that my work moves as they do."

Eluster Richardson's three pieces represent the diversity of his work. "Southern Elegance" and "Wildflower" are traditional watercolors. As is the case with many of his works, these two paintings employ local themes and subjects. The house that serves as the subject for "Southern Elegance" is located in Greenville, Florida, and "Wildflowers" was inspired by a local meadow.

"Dancer" has a far more abstract feel than the other two works and represents, according to Richardson, the direction that his work is taking. "Right now, I'm getting into abstracts," he said. "I also do a lot of realistic work in pencil, but abstracts are what I like the best."

Richardson acknowledges the diversity of his work, saying, "You have to be versatile to make your works speak." His subjects are not limited to African-Americans. A white girl is the subject of "Wildflowers" and the race of the woman in "Dancer" is not readily apparent.

Arthur L. Dawson's four prismacolor works represent such traditional southern themes as the outdoors, the family and a country store. Another of his pieces on display is a drawing of former University of Alabama football coach Paul "Bear" Bryant.

Robert Martin's three works are achieved through the color photocopy process. The results, as seen in "Still Life," "Type V" and "Parallels and Contrast" are rich, vivid colors and dramatic lines.

Ben Love's "Concrete Oasis" is an urban variation on a rural theme. Rather than drawing water from a backyard well or pump, the man portrayed in this watercolor is filling his pail and tea kettle from an urban fire hydrant.

Omar Thompson's five works cover a wide range of media and styles. "Dance for Me" and "Family" are photo collages. "Mo-Miles" and "The Dude" are wood collages that also incorporate photographs.

The exhibit presents an excellent opportunity to see the diversity and quality of works produced by artists with local ties and, in many cases, local inspiration.

"The African-American Art Exhibit" is on display at the Center for Professional Development through February 28. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For further information, call 644-7536.

or making a film as bad as School Daze.

Whore (1991)—Documentary about your mother that . . . naw, it's Ken Russell's much talked-about look into the everyday life of a prostitute and the sort of seedy goings-on that this particular lady of the evening encounters. Theresa Russell plays the hooker that we follow around the city as she recalls (through docudrama-type interviews) her past tricks and life leading up to her occupational decision.

I heard nothing but praise for this film upon its release and was sadly disappointed to see Russell (Theresa) entirely ruin this otherwise fine film by her pathetic inability to act. Kathleen Turner, Meryl Streep, Christ, even Debra Winger could have pulled off this role better.

Russell's (Ken) direction has never been more sedate; unfortunately his control over his actors is typically nonexistent here. Great idea harmed by one of the worst leading performances in recent history.

Life Stinks (1991)—I'm going to resist the obvious Gene Shalit word play with this title and simply say that Mel Brooks has lost what little talent he ever possessed. Coming off of the pain-inducing Spaceballs, this film is Brooks' way of contemporizing his material to spoof the completely hilarious(?) plight of the homeless.

While you realize his intentions are good, Brooks just can't make the sensitive subject work as a comedy. Doing schtick in front of a freezing, drooling bum is not my idea of a hearty chuckle. Let's face it, the man has not made a good film since High Anxiety and even that's stretching it.

FAMU coach Riley set to be famous

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Florida A&M head football coach and former star quarterback Ken Riley, will be enshrined in the Florida Sports Hall of Fame this spring, according to FSHOF executive director Joe Desalvo.

Riley, who is beginning his seventh year as head coach at his alma mater, was a star athlete at Bartow's Union Academy, where he played football, basketball and ran track. He captained all three teams his senior year, while also being named Senior Class president.

At FAMU, Riley lettered four seasons under the legendary A.S. "Jake" Gaither, another Florida Sports Hall of Famer. Playing at FAMU from 1965 through 1968, Riley as a quarterback, helped his squads to a 30-10 record, with back-to-back 8-2 finishes in his final two seasons.

A three-time winner of the FAMU Scholastic Trophy, Riley was named the Most Valuable Player and won Player of the Year honors as a senior in 1968. As president of his senior class Riley was nominated for the prestigious Rhodes Scholarship.

Riley finished his career with 65 interceptions, the fourth-highest career total in league history.

Drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals in the sixth round of the 1969 NFL draft, Riley went on to a 15-year career in the league as a cornerback. He finished his career with 65 interceptions, the fourth-highest career total in league history.

After retiring in 1983, Riley served as an assistant at Green Bay before taking the job at FAMU in 1986.

Since taking over the Rattler program, Riley has won two Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference championships (1988 and 1990) and was named the league's Coach of the Year for the same seasons and has run up a 37-27-2 record. Riley has had 49 players named all-conference in the past five seasons.

Riley will be the sixth former athlete or coach from FAMU inducted into the Hall. The other Rattler Hall of Famers are Bob Hayes, Gaither, Andre Dawson, Hal McRae, and Althea Gibson.

Riley will be formally announced as a selectee Thursday during a conference in the senate chamber of the Old State Capitol at 2:30 p.m.

Induction ceremonies will be held in Lake City at the permanent home of the Florida Sports Hall of Fame in April.

Athletes beware of consequences

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

INDIANAPOLIS—Prosecutors who helped convict Mike Tyson on rape charges said Monday night they hoped the case will send a message to all professional athletes and date rape victims.

"I can't speak to boxing," special prosecutor Greg Garrison said after Tyson's conviction. "I will say on a much broader scale, professional athletics has been allowed to become such a mega-god that it no longer is responsive to the morality that is the basic fabric to communities that are represented by folks like the ones on the jury."

"A superstar . . . can brag about it in his books and talk about it in the public eye. This time that kind of behavior has not been allowed."

Asked if Tyson convicted himself, Garrison said, "criminals always convict themselves."

Garrison said Tyson's celebrity was an obstacle for the prosecution, but he stressed how important the former heavyweight champion's accuser was to the case.

Garrison said the jury was sold on "that beautiful 18-year-old kid with a pure heart. She came in somber and quiet and pretty confident. It sounds a lot like so much hot air, but this is a very, very special young woman."

Jeffrey Modisett, the Marion County Prosecutor who hired Garrison as the lead prosecutor in the case,

Olympic Notebook

U.S. hockey team beats back Germans

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Goaltender Ray LeBlanc, a late addition to the Olympic squad, put on a brilliant and thrilling show Tuesday in guiding the United States to a 2-0 victory over Germany.

LeBlanc, a 27-year-old career minor-leaguer, made saves from every angle, turning aside 46 shots to record the first shutout by any goalie in the tournament.

Marty McInnis snapped a scoreless tie early in the second period, and Ted Donato gave the Americans a little breathing room midway through the final frame. Both goals came on the power play.

The United States ran its record to 2-0, the first time it has done that since the 1960 Games, when it took the gold medal at Squaw Valley. Germany, which defeated the United States in the 1988 Games to keep it out of the medal round, dropped to 0-2.

The game featured not only great goaltending on both sides but three periods of big checks and end-to-end scoring opportunities.

Germany outshot the Americans 20-10 in the opening period, but the goalies took turns making fine saves. At one point late in the period, LeBlanc got tied up behind the net, and the puck slid out and came to rest right in the U.S. crease before it was swatted away by American Moe Mantha.

Germany outshot the U.S. team 46-27 for the game.

...

French ski team officials filed a protest with the International Olympic Committee and the International Ski Federation Tuesday, complaining that advertising patches on the suits of the Italian gold and silver medalists in the men's alpine were too large.

The protest, filed after Italians Josef Polig and Gianfranco Martin took the gold and silver medals, complained that the clothing name "Silvy" on Italian uniform sleeves violated rules.

If the protest is upheld, the two Italians would lose their medals and the next skiers in order of finish would become the medalists.

Masahiko Harada of Japan, going first off the big 120-meter hill, registered the longest jump Tuesday in practice for the second event of Olympic ski jumping.

Harada soared 126 meters and no one bettered the mark. His second effort was only 115.

The second longest jump was by Czechoslovakia's Jiri Parma, who leapt 125 meters in the second Willie Brown smacked a homer and a run-scoring triple for FAMU but the Rattlers could do no better than a 5-5 tie with Jacksonville. FAMU plays a doubleheader today hosting Alabama State.

Brown, FAMU tie Jacksonville 5-5

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The Florida A&M Rattlers and the Jacksonville University Dolphins played to a 5-5 tie in baseball Tuesday at Rattler Field as the two clubs went to extra innings before the contest was called due to darkness.

FAMU (1-1-1) overcame a 3-0 Jacksonville lead, largely on the hitting of junior outfielder Willie Brown, who belted a two-run homer in the fourth inning to cut the JU lead to 3-2, then snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth with a run-scoring triple.

Umpire Al Davis called the game with one out in the bottom of the eleventh inning, citing darkness.

FAMU, which has suffered through five errors at third base in their first three games, will likely go back to junior David Watkins, who started the first two games against Florida Atlantic.

FAMU will resume their homestead today with a 12:30 p.m. doubleheader against Alabama State, then host Virginia State in a three-game weekend series beginning Friday at 2 p.m. with single games also on Saturday and Sunday.

said he hoped Tyson's conviction will prompt other victims to press charges.

"We hope it would encourage women to come forward," Modisett said. "Our greatest hope is that they see the process works now."

Modisett said he thought Tyson's victim, a Miss Black America contestant from Rhode Island, would hold a news conference to discuss the case. However, deputy prosecutor Barbara Trathen said she did not expect the woman to file a civil lawsuit against Tyson.

Garrison also came to the defense of Moira Lasch, who prosecuted the date rape case in which William Kennedy Smith was found not guilty last December in West Palm Beach, Fla. He said Lasch was criticized unfairly and did not get a conviction because the case lacked strong evidence.

Modisett said one of the keys to the case was that nobody corroborated Tyson's story, while the accuser's story was backed by the woman who drove the boxer's limousine during his stay in Indianapolis from July 17-19.

"The one person who could have corroborated Mr. Tyson, theoretically, was his bodyguard (Dale Edwards) and he never testified," Modisett said.

Garrison sounded as if he regretted the defense's decision not to put Edwards on the stand.

"We were looking forward to talking to him," Garrison said.

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New promises and projects make this a very busy time for you. Get a major work issue settled before this month ends. Joining a support group next June could lead to higher self-esteem. September brings a second chance for romantic happiness. Listen to your heart. An unusual business arrangement could prove highly successful in November. Seeking wise counsel next December will lead to new domestic harmony. Protect your family's interests.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President Abraham Lincoln, actress Joanna Kerns, TV host Arsenio Hall, author Judy Blume.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Corporate types may be difficult to pin down today. Work on your own as much as possible. Home life offers a peaceful respite from your busy work schedule tonight. Turn in early.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A quick quip could cause trouble. Be careful not to say anything that could be used against you later on. Returning telephone calls promptly prevents hurt feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your ingenuity helps you handle any job snags that arise today. Take your time when considering a new financial commitment. Impulsive decisions will backfire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pay keen attention to all information your senses gather today. You will learn a lot! An exacting task will require all of your concentration. Be quiet about your career plans for now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A financial talk or shopping trip will benefit you. You are a magnet for money now and will make wise choices. A night of discovery lies ahead. Intellectual endeavors enjoy favorable influences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Curb your tongue and cool your temper. Lashing out at someone who has disappointed you will create an even deeper rift. Try your hand at creative writing or plunge into the arts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let tedious tasks put you in an irritable mood. You will get much further than you think. Listen to the voice of experience when it comes to money matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good timing is the key to success. Join forces with someone who is eager to pursue a moneymaking project. Do not play tricks on your loved ones. Keep any promises you make.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work hard to maintain your work schedule, despite frequent distractions. Steady progress is essential for success. Spend some time alone later today, but do not become anti-social.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be asked to mediate a feud today. Maintain your objectivity. Recycling a project will let you make new business profits without incurring additional expense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel at odds with someone who insists he has a cross to bear. Do not let a philosophical argument turn personal. Romance resembles a roller coaster now. Hold on tight to your mate!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stop twiddling your thumbs. Your creative genius can turn a dream into reality. Get better organized at work. Family members are looking to you for leadership.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are hard-working and tenacious, able to overcome almost any obstacle. Count on these Aquarians to use their knowledge and resources wisely. They are not averse to seeking the limelight if doing so will suit their purposes. These Aquarians enthusiasm for intellectual pursuits will set them apart. They make excellent scholars and researchers. In romance, they will seek a mate whose mental gifts match or exceed their own keen intelligence.

For the first time in Olympic hockey, eight teams will advance to the medal round. But once the quarterfinals begin next week, one loss knocks a country out of the race for the gold.

The heaviest snowfall of the Games put a fresh coating of white on the mountain venues and made the already difficult course that much more difficult. And the results were devastating.

The first Olympic women's biathlon was an almost full sprint through the falling snow in which the women twice stopped to fire at five targets. At the end, most of the competitors had no energy left to stand on their skis.

Several of them simply crumpled to the snow, many having no strength to move until officials carefully lifted them and helped them away from the line before another competitor could come along and collapse on top of a previous finisher.

After landing two good jumps in the nordic combined Tuesday, France's Frabice Guy is in good position to become the host country's first gold medalist of the 16th Winter Olympics.

The event concludes Wednesday with the 15-kilometer cross-country race, with Guy, the pre-race favorite, seeded to start third.

A dispirited United States team will approach the cross-country portion of the event at a serious disadvantage, and there is no hope for a medal. It is all the more disappointing because the young team had performed so well in the practice jumps. Jim Holland was the best of the Americans, finishing 15th in the ski jumping.

FSU criminology school has made changes for the better, report says

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University Provost Bob Glidden said Wednesday the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice has shown a great deal of improvement—but still has a ways to go—since a scathing review less than two years ago that had little good to say about the school.

In June 1990, the University Equal Opportunity Committee found the School of Criminology to be “fraught with problems, including but not confined to racism and sexism.”

Glidden, who read the report to the FSU Faculty Senate at their meeting Wednesday afternoon, said the school has made a turnaround during the period of restructuring since the report was released. And he emphasized the effort professors in the department were making.

“I think the faculty . . . has made good progress toward addressing some of the problems within the school,” Glidden said.

Problems ranged from racial slurs to faculty dating students. Glidden read from the report.

In November 1990, the school was reorganized and placed under the care of Social Science Dean Charles Cnudde. It was split into two programs, one in criminology and one in criminal justice. There are currently no African-American professors in the criminology school.

But things have improved, Glidden said.

“Now, some 14 months later, although some problems and concerns are not yet satisfactorily resolved, as of January 1992 it is believed that the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice has sufficiently fulfilled the mandates of Provost Turnbill’s memorandum of November 1990,” he said.

Not everyone is convinced of the school’s progress, though.

Gary L. Holmes of the FSU Black Alumni Association said he doesn’t

FSU psychology prof’s book is making moves on the charts

BY THOMAS AUSTIN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Na'im Akbar, a Florida State University research assistant in clinical psychology, is bringing home the bucks with Visions of Black Men, a collection of original essays that projects positive images of black men.

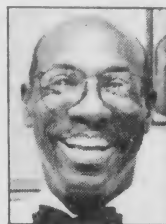

Sales from the thin 87-page paperback, out now for seven months, have caught the publisher, wholesalers and bookstore owners by surprise—a welcome surprise.

So far, 25,000 copies have been sold, according to Winston Derek publishers, and it has appeared on Ingram wholesalers’ bestseller list in the general, non-fiction category. Ingram is the largest book wholesaler in America.

“It’s selling like crazy,” Winston Derek publishing spokesperson Laura Cole said Wednesday. “It’s one, if not, our best seller.”

The book is already in its third printing because the publisher never thought it would be such a hit.

Akbar

Akbar has been described by Essence Magazine as one of the world’s pre-eminent African-American psychologists and a pioneer in the development of an African-centered approach to modern psychology.

He is listed in Who’s Who in Black America and has appeared on The Phil Donahue Show and The Oprah Winfrey Show, among others. The dynamic speaker has lectured at more than 300 colleges, community settings and conferences throughout the United States, Europe, Africa, and Asia.

Akbar splits his time between his job at FSU and his own consulting company that deals with motivational training and issues related to black education, personality function and mental health.

“(Visions of Black Men) begins to suggest some things that black men need to do for self improvement,” Akbar said Wednesday. “It doesn’t talk about the drug addiction and all the other devastating realities. It begins to talk about black men taking responsibility for personal self-discipline and development, as well as developing images based on successful black men.”

In addition to Visions of Black Men, Akbar has written three books in the last 10 years: Chains and Images of Psychological Slavery,

Akbar's book

FSU senior hopes to improve campus recycling

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

Florida State University senior Carl Lietz says the university is way behind other schools in campus recycling—something he has set out to change.

With the help of friends, Lietz took it upon himself to build a new recycling box for paper and cans. The box, which cost $80 to build, was placed Friday between the student union and Bellamy building.

“Hopefully, this will stir up interest in increasing recycling on campus,” Lietz said Wednesday. “Now that one is up, I want to look for funding for more.”

The FSU administration welcomes Lietz’s help in recycling operations, but says there’s no money to fund his new recycling project.

Lietz said he got the idea for a recycle box when he went to summer school at the University of California/Berkeley last year and came to the conclusion that much

WHO: AIDS virus has infected 1 million kids

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

GENEVA—The AIDS virus has infected about 1 million children and at least 9 million to 11 million adults around the globe, the World Health Organization said Wednesday.

This brings to "at least 10-12 million people in all" the number of people infected with HIV, or human immunodeficiency virus, since the pandemic began some 10 years ago, the U.N. health agency said.

WHO said that of the up to 11 million adults and 1 million children, reached the last stage of HIV infection—which is acquired immune deficiency syndrome or AIDS itself.

"The latest WHO chart of the global spread of the HIV-AIDS pandemic indicates that over a million people worldwide have been newly infected with the HIV virus since April, 1991, when the previous report was issued," the organization said.

About nine-tenths of the new cases were in adults and a tenth in children born to HIV-infected mothers, the report stated. Of the newly infected adults, slightly more than half live in sub-Saharan Africa and a fourth in Asia and the Pacific, mainly south and southeast Asia. About a sixth of the cases were in Latin America.

"The vast majority of pediatric infections are in sub-Saharan Africa, where over 3 million women have become infected since the start of the pandemic," WHO said. "Developing countries thus account for over 90 percent of all new infections."

"Increasingly, the brunt of the pandemic is being borne by the developing world," it went on.

Migrant aid program at FSU hopes for federal grant to speed projects

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

A Florida State University student volunteer program begun last autumn to help the migrant farmworker population in neighboring Gadsden County is starting to take root, and the process will bloom if FSU receives a $39,000 federal grant it applied for last week, officials say.

"We're in for the long haul," Jon Dalton, FSU vice president of student affairs, said at a meeting Tuesday with migrant relief workers in Quincy. "We're trying to do something here that won't be done quickly or easily because there's a great deal of human needs."

The FSU program—which is named Amistades, the Spanish word for friendships—was created to provide a critically needed labor force to help out in aiding the approximately 5,000 migrant farmworkers in Quincy and surrounding areas.

As a result of the FSU volunteer program, students have already held a clothes and canned food drive and have participated in a volunteer day where volunteers helped fix up several buildings, including a social services outpost.

Dalton said the program, which is run out of his office, is currently operating on a temporary $1,000 grant from the Florida Office of Volunteers and may get substantially more in the near future if FSU's application for the $39,000 federal grant is approved.

The grant, which would draw on funds from the recently established National Community Service Act, would provide stipends to students who coordinate specific social service projects for the migrants and would also cover transportation and other expenses associated with Amistades, Dalton said.

"If we could get the money to pay (the student coordinators) we could get a lot more support," Dalton said. "We're trying to get students to work with fellow students in certain areas where there is an interest."

Dalton said FSU has already begun collecting required matching funds for the grant and added he hopes FSU receives the grant by this fall.

In the meantime, efforts will be made toward expanding the current pool of 80 students who can provide bilingual help and other services, according to John Burt, director of FSU's Campus-Community Partnerships.

"Things are going to escalate and expand here in the near future," Burt said.

He added some students will help patients check in at a volunteer nighttime health clinic in Quincy. Other volunteers at the clinic will serve as a referral service for the migrants and other rural poor who come in, according to Burt.

He said there will be a more aggressive recruitment of students from organizations such as the United Latin Society, the College of Social Work and the School of Nursing. But he said substantial inroads have already been made as a result of Volunteer Day, which was held last month.

"The biggest thing that happened (out of Volunteer Day) is that students saw what we got over here," Burt said. "They want to stay involved with what's going on out here."

Burt said future volunteers will tutor migrant children and adults, but added the grant would greatly accelerate the process.

"If that grant comes through we're going to put a lot of that money and effort into the schools," he said. "We think we can . . . try to facilitate the efforts as far as getting migrant and seasonal (year-round) children graduating from school."

He added that an emphasis will also be placed on literacy programs for the migrant parents.

"There are a number of migrants who are not literate in Spanish who want to be literate in Spanish," he said, adding that literate parents would serve as a good role model for their children. "We're looking at that, with what we're doing in the schools."

Sherry Smith, program coordinator of English for Speakers of Other Languages/Bilingual Education for Gadsden District Schools, said the school system can use whatever volunteers FSU has to offer.

"It's everything from interpreting, translating, clerical work and actually being aides in the classroom," Smith said. "Just name it and we've got a spot for them to fill."

She said she hopes the volunteers to begin work this semester while most of the migrants are gone.

"I'm very hopeful they'll be able to do things this school term so they can get their feet wet before the influx this September," when the fall tomato harvest begins, she said.

Dalton said he would eventually like to see volunteer students put on recreation days for migrant children and bilingual volunteers to serve as translators for migrants in the courtroom, the food stamp office and other places which do not have any Spanish speaking employees.

"I think we're going to see this project developed," Dalton said. "There's a lot of people and a lot of resources."

Editor:

You can imagine my shock at the behavior of students wearing Kappa Alpha caps at the Drivin' 'n' Cryin'/Follow For Now concert at the Moon on Feb. 6. The fact that the brothers were booing the all-black members of Follow For Now throughout the set was no big shock. There's no accounting for taste, even though you could see the crowd below enjoying the show. The only real disturbing thing was one brother shouting at the end of the set, "Go back to Africa," with another brother shouting, "And bring on the white boys."

Knowing the racial and cultural awareness that the Kappa Alphas are so often lauded for having, I'm sure they will immediately investigate this matter and discipline the offending racists. We here in the Deep South, after struggling for years to erase the stigma of slavery and racial oppression, can't afford any more reinforcement of stereotypes of white people as racists. Especially a group as upstanding as the Kappa Alphas. By the way, guys: Good luck on Old South next year.

At least we tried

Editor:

There is an expression that goes something like "you tend to become like the worst in those you oppose." After reading Ms. Ryals commentary on the Feb. 4 student march on the Capitol, I decided the expression needed to be altered to "you tend to become like the worst in those you write about."

Ms. Ryals implied that the 3,000+ students who marched were naive elitists who didn't know what they were talking about. If I were a psychology major, I'd think she was using the piece as a catharsis for her guilt. Fortunately, I'm not, so I can just think she's ignorant. Ms. Ryals, like the legislators, is wrapped up in her own little world. At least the legislators can claim to be trying to balance the state budget; well maybe the demand of writing all those cute commentaries is causing Ms. Ryals' perceptions of reality to be warped.

Both seemed to have overlooked that we live in a democracy where each and every citizen is guaranteed equal rights under the law. Both have forgotten that state budgets or the right to assemble were created for people, and are not abstract concepts that belong only in their exclusive country club. Both think students are apathetic and aren't on the same level of enlightenment. Both are ignorant. Both are wrong. Unfortunately, on Feb. 4, only one of them had their eyes opened.

Ms. Ryals, just because some of the students who were marching were white or middle class or in a Greek-letter organization doesn't make them bad people. Just because they aren't high-powered lobbyists or self-important reporters, doesn't mean that they don't have a right to speak to their legislators. Those legislators were elected to represent the people, and the people are hurting. That was the message. Maybe that isn't important to you, but it was to those students and maybe now it will be to those legislators.

I understand that just as we had the right to march, so too did Ms. Ryals have the right to express her opinion in the commentary. I don't begrudge her that. What I do think is that it is sad. While the students were out trying to make a difference, Ms. Ryals sat down at her typewriter and convinced herself that her sarcastic jabs in the Flambeau are really how to get to the state legislators.

The budget situation is desperate. Education is in crisis and the students, and most Floridians, feel alienated from the process. The legislators and the reporters are condescending and patronizing to the people of this state. Maybe our march on the Capitol didn't change the final outcome, but at least we tried. At least we stood up to be counted.

Lacking taste, merit

Editor:

I am a junior at Florida State University. I read your paper whenever a copy becomes available to me, and I'm generally impressed by the views and opinions expressed in it. Today, however, I came across an article that was poorly thought out and poorly written. I am referring to the writer Mary Jane Ryals. Her article "(Pretty please Mr. Legislator) we are off our duffs, no more cuts," not only mixed up the facts to fit her interpretation, it lacked clarity or precision. Her estimation of 2,000 students started the maneuvering of the facts. The front page 3,000 while the Tallahassee Democrat printed 3,500 attended. I can't conclude which estimate is exact because an official count wasn't taken, but the fact that she downsized the crowd by a thousand or more forecasted the tone of the rest of the article. "Naive," "fine ideals," "experience nil" were just a few of the phrases that described the mass of protesters that had gathered to exercise their constitutional right to peaceable assembly. A tall blonde-haired student marched among the thousands and chanted "no more cuts" as loud as he could. I was that student and Ms. Ryals' article echoed some of the same thoughts that ran through my head as the Capitol steps came into sight. Many of the students, I dare say a majority of them, have no idea how decisions are made in our government. The boos and outbursts heard while Gov. Chiles spoke made that fact disturbingly clear. I too thought the fraternity banner tainted the messages that were trying to be put across. The view of Ms. Ryals neither surprised me or offended me. The poor writing of the article did. I had to reread half of it before I could comprehend what she was trying to say. Students from all universities were holding signs, and the comment about FAMU signs meaning more business was ludicrous. One of the signs saying, "MO MONEY, MO MONEY, MO MONEY," belonged to a FAMU student, but that wasn't mentioned when the sign became a part of Ms. Ryals' mocking of the white guys in the crowd. I'm not saying that FSU or UNF students had better signs; on the contrary trying to add race into her article lacked taste and merit. I say the least, I hope that next time Ms. Ryals writes an article she would complete her thoughts and reports the facts as they are not how she would like them to be.

We must change

Editor:

Last night we saw Straight out of Brooklyn and we were disturbed not by the movie but by the audience. Personally we didn't see much humor in this stark, tragic story about 80s in the projects. However, some people found parts of the movie hilarious and that is what we find disturbing. The protagonist's girlfriend's face is shown for the first time and the initial audience reaction is: "oooh" as in "boy is she ugly." Then there are bursts of laughter from a majority of the crowd. What the hell were they laughing at? Because she was not like the beauties that Spike Lee uses but a real life black woman? Because she was dark and not light skinned? How can we expect to progress if we have no respect for ourselves? The part that pissed us off was when Shirley and Dennis were in bed together. Is sex that funny? Or is it just so damn funny when the woman and man don't look like Lenny Kravitz and Lisa Bonet? The characters in the movie looked like what the majority of the audience must look like in the same situation. Would the audience laugh at themselves if they had been on the screen? We all don't look like Hollywood stars, even though we like to think we do. Are we only to be respected when we are beautiful and well dressed? Can we expect not to be taken seriously just because of our appearance?

"People, we must change."

Get facts straight

Editor:

From a black, female, college student's point of view I read the article entitled "Australian Olympic basketball team makes Magic blunder."

Before making it his business to scare the players on the team this doctor should first get his facts straight before exposing such untruth. This type of thing gets me to think about people who talk only because they believe what they are saying will hopefully raise some heads. To such news the only heads that will raise and believe such are specifically the ones who are naive and untaught.

Boring legislators concoct strange reapportionment plans

BY D.K. ROBERTS

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

It slices, it dices, it ghettoizes. It's the Florida reapportionment process and it's chopping up the state like a Cuisinart possessed by demons.

It is Wednesday morning in the House of Representatives. The chamber is decorated with maps of Florida carved up in about forty-three different ways. There are districts that combine Miami and Wewahatchka. There are districts that link the Keys, Sea World and the Bel Air trailer park on the Blountstown Highway. There are districts that bring together Bonifay, the Bermuda Triangle and the planet Neptune. Most creative.

The Doctor of the Day grins weakly from the Speaker's dais. The Padre of the Day prays for unity. The members slap their hands over their (faint) hearts and say the Pledge of Allegiance—"one nation under a groove," etc. Then they fall to fighting like rabid squirrels.

Reps. Peter Wallace (D-St. Pete) and Peter Deutsch (D-Tamarac—wherever the hell that is) try to hold back the flood of hostility by acting like Chip and Dale. They thank each other, they thank everyone on the reapportionment committee staff, they thank the House, they thank their mothers, they thank their second grade teachers, they thank all the little people. Then they commence vying who can say how proud everyone involved should be, oblivious to the people being carried out on stretchers, collapsed from sheer boredom.

You will not be surprised to learn that things get worse before they get better. The amendment process begins.

Rep. Daniel Webster (R-Orlando) gets up to explain the map he and Rep. Luis Rojas (R-Hialeah) have concocted. Webster looks like Fess Parker, the old Daniel Boone on TV. Sans the coonskin cap. In real life he is an air conditioning contractor and every bit as exciting. In the Clerk's Manual he blames God for everything he has achieved in his life.

Pushing his plan, Webster coos his support for minority empowerment, the Voting Rights Act, and small, furry animals. His discourse becomes rather metaphysical. "Is it real?" he says. "Well, I don't know what real is..." His sidekick, Rojas, stands next to him in slept-in-looking clothes, opening and closing his mouth like a guppy. Rojas appears as though he doesn't know what Webster's talking about which is OK because no one else does, either.

Drama intrudes! blasting the dozing into consciousness. Rep. Miguel "Mike" De Grandy vaults to his feet to squeal like a wronged sheep that his reapportionment plan (four, count 'em, four black districts and two hispanic!) is being ignored by the powers that (wanna) be. Clearly De Grandy had one of those high protein breakfasts because, boy, is he hyper. He belts out this speech about democracy and how he is being denied the chance to put forth his plan to be voted up or down. He yelps about being a member of a minority, about fighting and dying for the flag, about oppression and civil rights.

A number of De Grandy's "minority" brethren get up to agree with him on the big oppression thing. Pobrecitos! Republicans line up and take a number to insist that they believe in Civil Rights, that they are in solidarity with their black brothers and sisters, that they, too, have been rabbit-punched by the iron fists of racism, etc, etc. Most affecting.

It is about now that everyone loses track of exactly where we are in parliamentary procedure and starts grandstanding like there's no tomorrow. Seriously surreal (some would say obscene) is Rep. Marian Lewis (Airhead-North Palm Beach) bleating her concern for oppressed minorities in Florida. Lewis, class war fans will recall, has often inveighed against better benefits and more money for migrant workers on the grounds that those people don't even know how to use proper toilets and don't appreciate frills like, say, electricity and medical care, when they have them.

De Grandy, on a roll again, points at an African-American member, praising his intelligence and "articulacy," and says without such equitable impulses as the Republican plan for dividing Florida, this man wouldn't have been elected. (Yeah, and he's a credit to his race, too).

To steal a line of Rep. Mario Diaz-Balart's, it's time for a reality check. Consider: all of a sudden, there's a stampede of Republicans piously intoning their commitment to the African-American community. Say what? These are the people who think Ronald Reagan and George Bush, presidents who have made racism respectable again in America, are two parts of the Holy Trinity. So, if you smell a rat, you probably have a career in either government or exterminating.

It's not that Republicans have suddenly become card-carrying members of the NAACP. It's that they are trying to carve up Florida in order to strengthen Republican infestations. Divide and conquer—if they can separate African-American Democrats from white Democrats, they can weaken the Democrats' overall support base. Their plan is basically a crafty form of segregation.

And it's all a waste of time. The Democrats will go with the majority plan and the whole thing will probably end up in federal court. Sometimes you just feel like calling up the Russians and saying, "look, this democracy thing—are you sure you want to go through with it?"

COMMENTARY

Fight to defeat athletic fee increase at FSU isn't over yet

BY ANNE HOLT

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

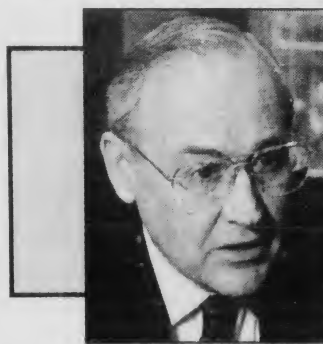

An attempt by petition of more than one-third of the Florida State University student body to convince the Board of Regents to stop an athletic fee increase proposed by President Dale Lick was defeated in the board's Feb. 7 meeting.

Appeals by elected representatives of graduate students and the Committee to Defeat the Athletic Fee Increase (composed of graduate and undergraduate students) were ignored by all but two Regents.

It was no help to student opposition that the board's agenda was long and the vote came up when the regents were tired and hungry. It also hurt that this controversial proposal to increase FSU student's athletic fees by 19 percent was buried in an item which contained all fee requests by Florida university presidents.

Speaking for almost 6000 graduate students, I requested that the FSU athletic fee proposal be separated from all other fees because it had created so much confusion among students and so many were opposed to it. My request was not heard.

Dr. Lick had the support of Jerry

Holt suggests FSU students write to President Dale Lick (guy at left)—the address is simply: FSU, 211 Westcott Building—and tell him NO, WE DO NOT WANT THIS ATHLETIC FEE INCREASE! No stamp is necessary if you put your letter in campus mail or in the FSU post office.

Draper, dean of Visual Arts and chairperson of the Athletic Fee Committee, and Brian Philpot, student body president. President Philpot completely supported the proposal by citing a high number of students in favor of the fee.

In saying this, he ignored the 44th Student Senate Resolution No. 46, of Jan. 29 1992. Passed by a vote of 22 yes to 6 nay, the resolution was sponsored by Senators Dietrich, Belin, and Badagnai and said:

"Whereas, we believe that Florida State University should be renewed as an academic institution rather than an athletic institution, and whereas, we believe attendance at athletic events is an entertainment luxury that for financial and academic reasons not all students can afford, and whereas, we believe that the opportunity to pay money to view athletics should remain as an option for students, therefore

Be it resolved by the forty fourth student senate that:

We do not support the proposed Athletic Fee increase."

A copy of this resolution was presented to each Regent during the meeting, but like President Philpot and Dr. Lick, they were not impressed.

When I asked President Philpot after the meeting how he could disregard the will of the elected representatives of all students, he answered, "the student senate was hardly at half-strength when that resolution passed." I understood his comment to mean that he felt Senate Resolution No. 46 was worthless.

The people who worked so hard to defeat this proposal were shocked that the plea of more than 8000 FSU students could be so easily brushed aside.

It took us about an hour to realize that we still had the right to write letters, continue to petition, seek a referendum, to appeal to Dr. Lick as the leader of our university to consider our side of the question.

We discovered a truth we hope all FSU students will discover: THE MORE YOU EXERCISE YOUR RIGHTS, THE STRONGER THEY BECOME.

We also discovered from the Board of Regent's office that the vote of the board only means that Lick and the university administration have permission to go ahead with this proposal. The vote did not put the proposal into effect nor did it require that it be implemented. Like George Washington, we lost a battle, but not a war.

We can and will continue to oppose this athletic fee increase. It is philosophically and practically ill-conceived and against student's best interests. It may be legal to make us pay for the athletic addition to the University Center when we were under the impression boosters would pay for it, but it is not acceptable. This proposal makes us appear to value athletics over academics. We must prove that this is not true.

Are you angry to be treated as a child? To have one-third of our student body given the brush off? I am. Except for a few prodigies, who deserve respect for their ability, there are not children at FSU. We are all old enough to vote, to fight for our country, and to be listened

ZAGREB, Croatia—An opposition party leader who resigned from the coalition government of Croatia said Wednesday he quit because the full Cabinet had little role in the decision to reaffirm acceptance of a plan for deployment of U.N. peacekeepers.

"I cannot share the responsibility for the crucial decision made outside this Cabinet, and this is the main reason for my resignation," Drazen Budisa said in a letter formalizing his withdrawal from the government of communist-turned nationalist President Franjo Tudjman.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan—Pakistani troops fired on thousands of protesters marching toward a cease-fire line dividing India and Pakistan in the scenic Kashmir region Wednesday, killing as many as 15 people and wounding up to 150 others, march organizers said.

Independent sources confirmed at least seven people were killed and 50 wounded among the marchers, estimated to number as many as 10,000.

JERUSALEM—A plan to settle 350,000 Jews along a narrow stretch of Israeli land threatens to overwhelm the 140,000 Arabs who live in the strip already, the authors of a new book charged Wednesday.

In a comprehensive study of Housing Minister Ariel Sharon's "Seven Stars" plan, the authors assert Israel is determined to "suffocate" its Arab population by increasing the number of Jews nearly tenfold in the area, which borders the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

LIMA, Peru—A journalist and a law student were shot to death early Wednesday in political violence as the capital braced for a 24-hour general strike threatened for Friday by radical leftist guerrilla group.

The latest slayings, believed to have been carried out by a right-wing paramilitary squad, followed by hours a bloody attack on the residence of U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quinton, which was attributed to the extreme leftist rebel group Shining Path.

The committee's action was designed to politically embarrass the president by demonstrating how little support there is for his economic stimulus package.

WASHINGTON—President Bush, sounding the clarion call of conservatives, announced Wednesday he would seek re-election to reduce the power of government and scale new heights of economic achievement.

"I want to continue serving as your president of the United States, officially," Bush told a cheering crowd of supporters before leaving to tour New Hampshire with stops in Manchester, Concord, Hooksett and Bedford.

to with respect. The opinion of over 8000 students cannot be simply ignored.

Our next step is to appeal to Dr. Lick. He has told us that he understands and sees merit in our point of view. He was big enough to indicate before the Board of Regents that we had good arguments and a lot of student support.

We believe Dr. Lick does care how students feel and if we stick to our fight, we will be able to convince him that too many students oppose this fee for him to ignore us. We must appeal to his sense of justice.

Another group of poorly trained and ill-equipped underdogs once yelled "No taxation without representation" and became Americans. We can become students who care about other students and win a true voice in the decisions of our university.

Hill gives endorsement to Meisburg

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

Oliver Hill, the only candidate from the race for City Commission Seat 1 who has not yet endorsed one of two remaining contenders for the position, said Wednesday evening he has a Thursday meeting with incumbent Steve Meisburg.

Hill, who came in fourth with 8 percent of the votes in last week's election, said he expects that after the meeting he will announce his support for Meisburg.

"My support will come only after sitting down and working out an agreement with him," said Hill. But, he added, "I don't foresee a problem working things out."

A runoff will be held Feb. 25 between incumbent Meisburg, who received 43 percent of the vote, and second place finisher Dan McDaniel, who received 23 percent.

Last week, third place finisher Francis Powell gave her endorsement to Meisburg, while John Gibby, who placed last, endorsed McDaniel.

"I think Steve (Meisburg) has made some mistakes in the past," said Hill. "But he's willing to look at them and make changes."

Hill said he has already spoken with Meisburg since the election and most of their policies are compatible. "I want to get the best for poor people," said Hill.

he spent two years writing.

"They have had a kind of popularity among almost a kind of cult readership among black readers who pretty much are involved with black issues," Akbar said. "This sort of mushroomed out from them."

In Tallahassee the book has been a top-seller at Amen-Ra's bookstore on South Adams Street. Dubey's bookstore has sold out and reordered, and Rubyfruit Books recently ordered the book after receiving numerous requests.

"I recommend it for black men that need some focus in the 21st century," said Adolphus Faggins, an employee of Amen-Ra's.

But according to the manager of Amen-Ra's, the book has attracted readers of all types, not just African Americans. He added women have been buying the book just as much as men, even though the book focuses entirely on role images for black men.

The book is also being used in many Florida A&M University history classes.

"I think that it talks to all people, not just blacks," Cole said.

think a school with no African Americans and only one woman could provide an environment free from racism and sexism.

"My concern is that it seems even with the report and what they're trying to do, you end up rewarding the people that cause the problem," Holmes, an FSU criminology alumnus, said Wednesday.

In the reorganization process, Daniel Georges-Abeyie, the former associate dean in criminology and the only black professor, was moved into the School of Social Science.

"I think it's in his best interest," Glidden said of Georges-Abeyie's transfer.

But in an interview with the Florida Flambeau last week, Georges-Abeyie said his transfer was partly due to racist attitudes among the criminology faculty and staff. During his past three years in the school,

Georges-Abeyie said he was harassed and referred to several times as "nigger."

According to Glidden, the school has plenty of room for improvement. He said the school must complete the curriculum revision which would provide separate specialization programs in criminology and criminal justice and prepare for a review from the Graduate Policy Committee.

"The faculty should continue to build sensitivity to racial and gender issues and bring that sensitivity in the curriculum development process," Glidden said. Holmes countered by saying that a few sensitivity lessons were not going to change the ingrained behaviors of prejudiced people.

"The perpetrators of the problem have not been removed and they still can create a problem," he said.

A review scheduled for the end of 1992 will determine if the School of Criminology and Criminal Justice becomes a department of the School of Social Science or returns to its autonomous state, according to Glidden.

more recycling was being done there.

"Recycling cans are around (FSU), but they just look like trash cans," he said, adding that recycle bins need to stand out to be effective or else students will use them as regular trash cans.

John Carnaghi, FSU Vice President of Administrative Affairs, said the university gave Lietz permission to place his box on campus. But Carnaghi added there are no university funds available to help with the cost.

"We have supported recycling as best we could," he said.

But according to Carnaghi, FSU has been hit hard by the state's financial woes, making it unlikely there will be funds available to expand FSU's existing recycling programs.

Paul Michal, FSU's Coordinator for Recycling, said the university's goals are to keep any recyclable items out of the city's landfill and save money.

Michal said FSU has several different recycling programs. Among other things, the university maintains two mulch piles used for landscaping. The piles are made from grass cuttings, limbs and branches taken from campus and then chipped and mulched.

According to Michal, in the past much of that material ended up in the landfill, but now gets recycled on campus.

Michal also said the university encourages all its departments to recycle paper. He said they pick up and recycle about 11.5 tons of cardboard, office and computer paper each month.

Every truckload that gets recycled saves the university money in landfill fees and is good for the environment, too, Michal said.

He added that students can participate by using recycle bins around campus, both indoors and outside.

"Unfortunately, most recycle cans do look like trash cans," Michal allowed.

When the university first bought the recycling cans in 1989, there were some concerns that the bins might clash with the campus decor, and so the current design was chosen to blend in with existing trash cans, Michal said.

To alleviate the identification problem, Michal said new garnet and gold signs will be put on the recycling cans during spring break.

Almost all aluminum cans on campus get recycled, Michal added, regardless of where they end up.

Many custodial workers collect cans and resell them, he said, and so do the "shopping cart scavengers" who pass through campus.

"Cans are not a problem anywhere because of their value," Michal said.

Any FSU department or organization can contact the recycling office at 644-2225. Anyone wishing to help Lietz expand his project throughout campus can call him at 575-7093.

Juice squeezes out sparkling performances

BY CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

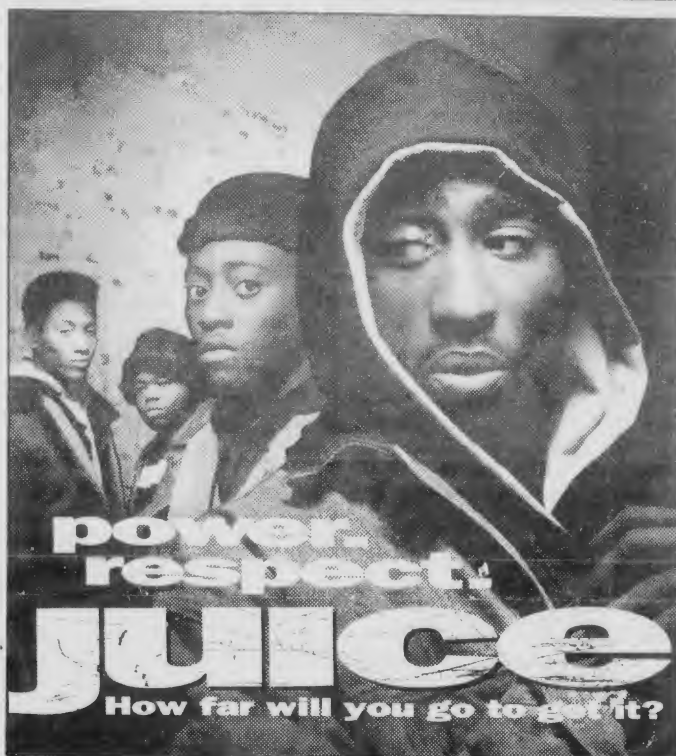

As the cinematographer for all of Spike Lee's endeavors, Ernest Dickerson was the eye behind Lee's poetic visual images. As director of Juice, the latest in a recent rush of movies about black inner-city youth, Dickerson provides less stunning imagery, but manages to tell a rather tired story in a way that captures the imagination.

The story, about four friends in New York and the violence that rends their bonds of kinship, is a little melodramatic, falling in the second half of the flick into the typical "killer with a vendetta" mold. However, the smoothness of the editing, the director's svelte montage technique, and a curiously moving camera that creates a panoramic world in motion around the characters, is enough to take you away from the plot, and keep you waiting on the next (inevitable) locale.

The film opens with the four young men being woken up individually by their family members, who rush them off to school. But this insight into their families is only cursory, for the film focuses on their time together, hanging, blowing school, and walking the streets. There's Steel (Jermaine Hopkins)—quiet, smaller and fatter than the others; Bishop (Tupac Shakur)—fiery and proud; Raheem (Khalil Kain)—smooth, fair-skinned and good looking, the unspoken leader; and Q (Omar Epps)—the protagonist, a slick talker with DJ fingers.

Tired of being sweated by everyone on their block, they go looking for some "juice," or respect, by knocking off the corner grocery. What follows is the crux of the story, but doesn't win points for creativity. The plot unfolds rather mechanically, and is saved only by the camera's ability to get inside the characters, especially through the use of close-ups. There is nothing that jumps out as truly special—but there's no loss of interest throughout the movie, either.

Some credit should go to the actors, particularly Epps, whose performance is complex enough to engender both sympathy and interest. The others are solid. Shakur holds his own despite the melodramatic choices of his character.

Though ostensibly about pride, respect and the ways to get them in an environment that keeps you down, this movie falls short of examining those or any other issues in an in-depth manner. The series of blind alleys, abandoned buildings and recessed stairways traveled by the boys offers a visual allegory of their choices, but no dramatic resolution is given. When the movie ends, it's over.

Not social criticism in the style of Spike Lee or John Singleton, Juice is an action film whose message is a negation (i.e., don't let this happen to you). Well done and cleverly shot, it's enough indication that Dickerson's directorial future could be bright given good material.

Juice is showing at Parkway 5.

Universal wants to provide the masses with more cheap seat

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

HOLLYWOOD—Universal Pictures, citing the effects of the recession on moviegoing, proposed Wednesday that theater chains showing its films offer half-price tickets on Tuesdays.

The proposal, announced by studio chief Tom Pollock and distribution head Fred Mound, urged other studios and theater chains to adopt the half-price idea. It also proposed that theater owners cut concession prices on Tuesdays.

"We encourage all distributors and exhibitors to follow our example by offering first-run entertainment to the public at reduced prices during the midweek period, if only on an experimental basis," Pollock said.

Universal said the program will reach out to consumers whose entertainment budgets have been "squeezed" by the current economic slump.

The studio also said half-price Tuesdays have been an "overwhelming" hit during the past five years in Canada. All major exhibitors have adopted the idea, with the result that business in Canada is as strong on Tuesdays as it is on Fridays or Saturdays, it added.

Universal said that in the United States, the average screen has less than 40 admissions on a typical midweek day.

Dixie Dregs bottom of the barrel — not!

BY MICK BUCHANAN

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Tonight when the Dixie Dregs touch down at the Moon, Tallahassee will have a rare opportunity to experience what was one of the greatest virtuoso instrumental bands ever.

The Dregs' history is long and colorful. The band formed in Augusta, Ga., in the early '70s while several of its members were enrolled in the University of Miami School of Music. After graduation, the band paid road dues for several years before signing with Capricorn Records in 1976.

The Dregs spent several fruitful years at Capricorn, which released three of the group's recordings. The first, widely considered their best, was Free Fall, released in 1977 to critical acclaim. Full of searing solos and evocative arrangements, this album was to set the blueprint for a multi-instrumental outing the likes of which had not been previously experienced. Free Fall was followed by What If in 1978 and Night of the Living Dregs in 1979, their last album for Capricorn. In the process of switching labels to Arista, the Dregs acquired keyboard virtuoso T. Lavitz and powered out three more recordings.

During its lifetime, the band received four Grammy nominations.

As a counterpoint to the band's superb studio work, their live shows were legendary. Between the mind-boggling, furious fret work of guitarist Steve Morse, the rhythmic permutations of drummer Rod Morgenstein and the angelic screechings of violinist Allen Sloan, the Dregs possessed one of the most dynamically unrivalled stage shows ever, as they proved in 1978 when they played to over 1,000 enthusiastic fans on Florida State's Union Green.

The founding members have reunited for this tour, which will yield a live album recorded at their two-night stand at Atlanta's Center Stage.

See one of the best instrumental bands EVER tonight at the Moon, when the Dixie Dregs, featuring guitarist extraordinaire Steve Morse, hit the stage at 9. Doors open at 8. General admission is $8, reserved seats are $12. Call 222-MOON for more information.

ARTS BRIEFS

TALLAHASSEE'S OWN JOHARI (NOT JOHARI'S) WINDOW WORK THEIR MUSICAL magic at the Club Downunder, after Rhythm Method whips the crowd into an appreciative froth. Johari Window was born from dorm room jam sessions (from such lowly roots giant acorns grow, or something like that), and got their big break opening for Gratefully Yours, a Grateful Dead copy band, in October 1991 at the Moon. The band's name has a very unique meaning, which I can't remember right now. Ask 'em. They'll be glad to tell you. The show starts at 9:30. Admission is $3 for non-students and free of cost, charge, or other monetary remuneration for those lucky (?) stiff with validated FSU IDs.

EXTRA! EXTRA! HOT SCOOP! WE GOT THE POOP! AND WE DON'T MEAN MAYBE! The latest in Student Campus Entertainment's wondrous film series features the much-lauded and eagerly awaited Prospero's Books tonight at 7:30 and 9 in Moore Auditorium, one night BEFORE the movie opens at another venue here in T-town. Admission is free to students and $2 for non-students.

THE FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MUSIC PRESENTS A CONCERT by the FSU Chamber Winds, with James Croft conducting. Violist Pamela Ryan will join the ensemble for a performance of Paul Hindemith's Der Schwanendreher on a program that will also include works by Robert Washburn and Claude Debussy. The concert begins at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall and will cost you only your time and attention.

ACC revenge would be sweet for Seminoles

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

Florida State's basketball team is on the road again. Coach Pat Kennedy's Seminoles have scored five Atlantic Coast Conference victories outside of Tallahassee, a record for first year ACC teams, and are currently third in the league. The Seminoles (15-6, 7-4) will try to add a sixth conference road-victory against Virginia tonight in Charlottesville, at 7:30 p.m.

Tonight's game, which can be seen on ESPN, wraps up the season series with the Cavaliers (11-8, 4-4). FSU lost the first game in overtime, 64-75, in the Civic Center Jan. 4. It was an emotional letdown for the Seminoles primarily because they led the majority of the game until their shooting luck ran dry in the extra period.

This time around Kennedy said his coaches and team are fired up to return the favor.

"I think this is a game that we're really shooting for," Kennedy said Wednesday. "I know, as a coaching staff, we're going in fired up."

Kennedy said his team has changed since the last matchup with the Cavaliers.

"We did not play well in that game," Kennedy said. "Charlie (Ward) and Rodney (Dobard) didn't start in that game. Now that we've come to know ourselves a little bit better I think that we're just very charged up."

Dobard, who was injured during the Clemson game, Feb. 8, didn't see any action in the Seminoles' win against N.C. State Monday but Kennedy said the 6-9 forward will get the start against Virginia. Dobard is leading the ACC in field goal percentage, nailing better than 70 percent against ACC schools.

Guard Chuck Graham (13.1 points per game), also injured against Clemson, hasn't healed as quickly as Dobard but will serve a vital role off the bench.

"Right now Rodney (Dobard) is going for sure," Kennedy said. "Chuck (Graham) seems very good but we're not going to push him. We'll keep Bobby (Sura) starting and we'll bring Chuck in off the bench."

Forward Douglas Edwards (16.8 ppg) and guards Sam Cassell (18.9 ppg) and Charlie Ward will also start for FSU. Ward has had five or more assists in four of his last five games.

Coach Jeff Jones' Cavaliers haven't played since

Adrian West slides into first base during FAMU's doubleheader with Alabama State Wednesday. The Rattlers and Hornets split the two-game series.

FAMU stung in first game, win second

BY DAVID BOEHM
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Errors continued to plague the Florida A&M Rattler baseball team as it split a double header with the Alabama State Hornets at Rattler Field Wednesday.

The Rattlers lacked intensity as they dropped the first game 5-1 before bouncing back to take the second game 7-6.

"I think the game against Jacksonville (Tuesday) took a lot out of us," FAMU coach Joe Durant said. "We had no fire on the field or in the dugout. Our pitching staff just could not get it done."

The Hornets scored first in game one taking advantage of two Rattler throwing errors. FAMU starting pitcher Malcolm Hamilton (1-1) walked Lamond Howard who advanced on a throwing error by third baseman Curtis George.

Alabama State's Michael Rankins followed with a base hit and teammate Marvin Boleware tapped a run-scoring single.

The second error of the inning by outfielder Mike Ray sent Rankin to third where he scored on a single by Allan King.

The Rattlers scored their only run of the game in the bottom of the first when Ray walked, stole second, and scored on a wild pitch.

The Hornets added a run in the fifth. In the seventh, Rattler reliever Ricky Montz gave up two walks and hit a batter before being replaced by Demetrius Milner.

The Hornets capped their scoring with two runs in the seventh on yet another Rattler error, this one by third baseman David Watkins.

In game two the Rattlers came out aggressively, scoring four runs in the second inning and three more in the third.

"We came out strong, then I thought we were going to give it away," Durant said of the second game. And the Rattlers almost did.

Rattler starter David Prosser started to tire in the top of the fourth as Hornet batters touched him for four runs. FAMU changed pitchers three times finally putting the ball in the hands of shortstop Curtis George in an attempt to stop the bleeding.

"The pitching staff was not getting it done and I could tell by Curtis' intensity that he did not want to get swept on his home field."

George finished strong, stopping a seventh-inning rally by striking out two and forcing the Hornets Fredrick Holland to ground out with a man on third for the game's last out.

Florida A&M improved its record to 2-2-1 and will complete Tuesday's 5-5 tie with Jacksonville University March 3 in Jacksonville. The Rattlers begin a three-game series with Virginia State this Friday at 2 p.m. at Rattler Field.

their 61-57 win over rival Virginia Tech February 5. Such a layoff could leave them stale but Kennedy said the short break may actually benefit Virginia.

"I think if they take that time (and use it) properly it will be to their advantage and they have had a good amount of time so that has to concern us," Kennedy said.

The Cavaliers are led by senior forward Bryant Stith, the ACC's tenth all-time leading scorer with 2,217 and candidate for ACC Player-of-the-Year honors. Freshman Junior Burrough (12.1 ppg) will be their other forward, Cory Alexander and Derrick Johnson will be the guards.

ACC Notebook

FSU fans need to fill some more seats

BY JIM VERTUNO

SPORTS EDITOR

Well it's not Tobacco Road but it is an improvement. The average attendance for Florida State home basketball games this season is 7,678 which is a far cry from the 19,000 plus Atlantic Coast conference member North Carolina manages to pack in the Dean Dome.

But the average attendance for FSU's home ACC games is 9,552, up from the 7,400 average for last season's home Metro Conference games. Granted, it takes time to get people in football country to show some interest in roundball. But knowing the high expectations FSU fans have for their sports teams, maybe it's time the fans started giving some support back to the players. It is a two-way street you know.

Perhaps the biggest news (bad if you're a Duke fan) of the last week in the ACC was Blue Devils guard Bobby Hurley's broken foot. Hurley suffered the break during Duke's loss at North Carolina and is likely to be out of action for another two weeks.

Duke seems to be doing alright without him though, as the Blue Devils thumped Shaquille O'Neil and 22nd-ranked Louisiana State without the squirt running the floor.

Sports information departments will come up with anything they can just to fill space in the press releases. The big news coming from the Georgia Tech women's basketball program this week is that senior forward Allison Echols has moved into a tie for second place in career blocked shots at Tech. She's recorded 72 to date.

Echols might be able to catch career leader Delores Bootz if she tries real hard. She only has 173 to go.

It's been said all season what a remarkable job FSU coach Pat Kennedy has done in his first year in the ACC. Now, following Monday's win at N.C. State, no

HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1992

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Merging creativity with practicality can be your ticket to the top. Unexpected visitors and trips are featured next month. Romance flourishes. Travel for both business and pleasure in June. An older person will play an important role in your success next fall. Form new alliances in October. A windfall or legacy in November will make the winter holidays even more merry than usual. Reach out to a relative who feels all alone.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Kim Novak, singer Peter Dinklage, actress Carol Lynley, actor Oliver Reed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A journey or special arrangement with an older person is in the spotlight. It may be necessary to revise your plans. Keep your schedule as flexible as you can.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A marriage proposal is worthy of your serious consideration. Let loved one know the extent of your feelings. A voice from the past could upset your emotional appraiser.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Allies and competitors alike may prevent you from achieving a goal. Play a waiting game until the tide turns. Someone's toes are exceptionally sensitive now. Be careful not to tread on them!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This is no time to shut out the world. Taking a more active role in your community will lead to valuable new friendships. Words of understanding encourage someone to make a fresh start.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Limits are placed on how much assistance you can command today. Why fight the tide?

You need to swim with the stream to win now. Cast your cares aside tonight and party!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A day of twists and turns lies ahead. Refuse to be thrown off-balance by a change in plans. Losing your temper will only make a difficult situation worse. Look on the bright side!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Something wonderful happens today. Your balanced nature will impress someone in a position to help your career. Tap into your spiritual power when faced with a tough choice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your social life accelerates! Prominent people express new interest in your ideas. Be careful not to get carried away with your own cleverness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Re-evaluate a recent decision; you could be repeating another person's mistakes. Taking a nonsense approach to business will help you avoid financial tangles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep a low profile today and stay out of the reach of a rival. Loved ones will be supportive if storm clouds gather. Be grateful for their loyalty. Confide only in trusted pals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay away from the stores today. An urge to splurge must be squelched if your savings are to grow. Find something interesting to do at home. A mystery book or movie holds appeal tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on your long-range plans. You learn a valuable lesson from someone else's mistakes. A loved one's habit of analyzing everything could grate on your nerves.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are open-minded, gracious and intuitive deeply interested in the way other people think. They have a finely honed taste for adventure and love to travel. Their peers find these Aquarians both brave and friendly. Although they tend to flit from one romantic relationship to another in their 20s, these Aquarians express a strong interest in settling down. The problem is finding the right mate for life!

Olympic Notebook

Jansen back to take another shot

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

ALBERTVILLE, France—Norwegians Johann Koss and Geir Karlstad, two long-distance specialists, and sprinting rivals Uwe May of Germany and hard-luck American Dan Jansen are expected to dominate when men's speedskating events begin today at the Winter Olympics.

Jansen, who fell in both his races at the 1988 Olympics following the death of his sister, is not competing in the 5,000. He will be a gold medal favorite in the 500 and 1,000.

Koss, a triple world record-holder, will test his inflamed pancreas problem for the first time against his teammate in the 5,000 meters, the first of the five men's races on the 400-meter Olympic oval. Koss, 23, was hospitalized last Friday after suffering from severe stomach pains while training.

After his pancreas difficulties, the result of a gallstone blockage, subsided last weekend, Koss has been training and resting in Germany for the past several days. He announced Wednesday he will compete.

There was no golden encore for American gold medalist Bonnie Blair.

The triumph and the day belonged entirely to Jacqueline Boerner, a 26-year-old German speedskater whose career nearly ended in a bicycle accident 18 months ago.

Boerner won the women's 1,500-meter gold medal at the Winter Olympics. She edged teammate Gunda Nieman by five-hundredths of second to win in 2 minutes 5.87 seconds.

Blair of Champaign, Ill., gave the United States its first medal at these Games Monday by winning the 500 meters. On Wednesday, in an event that is not her specialty, she finished 21st.

...

France won its first gold medal of the Winter Olympics Wednesday when Fabrice Guy captured the nordic combined.

"It was pure euphoria," Guy said after winning the two-part event of ski jumping and cross country skiing.

To add to the thorough delight of the crowd, French compatriot Sylvain Guillaume came from 13th place at the start of Wednesday's cross-country leg to take the silver medal. Austria's Klaus Sulzenbacher won the bronze.

Guy's victory was expected after he finished his weakest leg of the event, the ski jump, in third place. The weather worked to Guy's advantage. Overnight rain followed by a warm morning gave him the kind of wet grounds he likes on a difficult course with lots of hills and drops.

Flamboyant French World Cup champion Edgar Grospiron and compatriot Raphaëlle Monod held the pole positions for the first Olympic medals ever to be awarded in moguls skiing after Wednesday's competition.

Grospiron, the mogul artist who has won everything else at stake in the young sport, took a thin 1.96 point margin over teammate Oliver Allamand.

Donna Weinbrecht, considered to be one of the best American hopes to win an Olympic gold, placed second behind Monod in the women's event. She is the reigning World Cup holder and world champion.

FAMU wants to grab Bulls by the horns

BY TY SIMPSON

STAFF WRITER

Claudette Farmer said her young team has been playing hard all of late and despite the losses the Rattlerette basketball team has accumulated, she is not discouraged about the season.

In their last game against the University of Georgia, the Rattlerettes played with the intensity that Farmer hopes to draw from when the Trans-America Athletic Conference tournament begins March 5.

"They kind of played up, played tough, at the level I'd like to see them play," Farmer said Wednesday. "Although we lost the game, there were a lot of positive things that came out of it."

The Rattlerettes are without one of their major scoring contributors while sophomore Theodora Allen is still out with a broken jaw. In Allen's absence, 6-2 senior center Polly Innerarity has carried the load offensively.

Tonight at 7 p.m. at Gaither Gym, the Rattlerettes meet South Florida. Farmers' team defeated the Lady Bulls last year by two points in Tampa.

"They've got some new people that we haven't seen," said Farmer. "Their guard shoots the ball exceptionally well."

Book from page 15

coach has won more games on the road in the ACC (five) in his first conference season than Kennedy.

As well as the Seminoles have done on the road, three of their six losses have come at home at the hands of ACC opponents. The first was to tonight's foe Virginia back on Jan. 4. Maybe those measly crowds have something to do with it.

Last week's ACC Freshman-of-the-Week was Georgia Tech's James Forrest. The 6-8 small forward has scored 73 points in the last three games.

The threat of AIDS has led many to change ways

BY AMY ELLERSON
NEWS EDITOR

There's not much stopping people from doing the old in-out in-out whenever and wherever possible, but the threat of HIV is causing many young swingers to call timeout in the throes of passion and reach for a condom—or a cold shower.

Troy, a Florida State University junior, says he's so shaken by the spread of the disease that he's cut down quite a bit on his sexual escapades.

"It's not that much fun to go out anymore. You've got to know someone real well, and even then you don't know if she could kill you five years from now," said Troy, who like all the other students interviewed for this article did not want to discuss his sex life using his full name.

"It's not fair. I wish I were born before. All that free love I missed out on," he added. "I think when they find a cure for AIDS it'll be worse than ever because people will have been holding it in for so long."

Although many students say they've changed their attitudes on casual sex due to HIV and learned to control themselves a little better, studies indicate they're not being exactly honest.

In a recent survey conducted by a researcher with the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, only 24.7 percent of the respondents from FSU, Florida A&M University and Tallahassee Community College said they use a condom every time they hop in the sack with someone.

Thirty-seven percent of the 792 students said they use condoms sometimes and 19.4 percent said they never use the things when doing the horizontal bop. The rest said they don't even have to worry about using rubbers since they're simply not doing the deed.

"In general, people are using condoms more and more, but they're not using them consistently, or in some cases, correctly," Mary Penny, FSU's health enhancement coordinator, said earlier this week.

"I think students are very afraid of HIV, but students still tend to trust their instincts about who's safe as a sexual partner," Penny added.

Sean, a 22-year-old student at TCC, said he no longer goes on mere instinct when he beds women. In fact, the born-again condom user said he and his friends would never consider sleeping with a woman without wrapping their genitalia in latex.

"There are a lot of girls around here who are really dangerous," Sean said. "I'll say to a girl 'I'm using a condom or else you can get out of here.'"

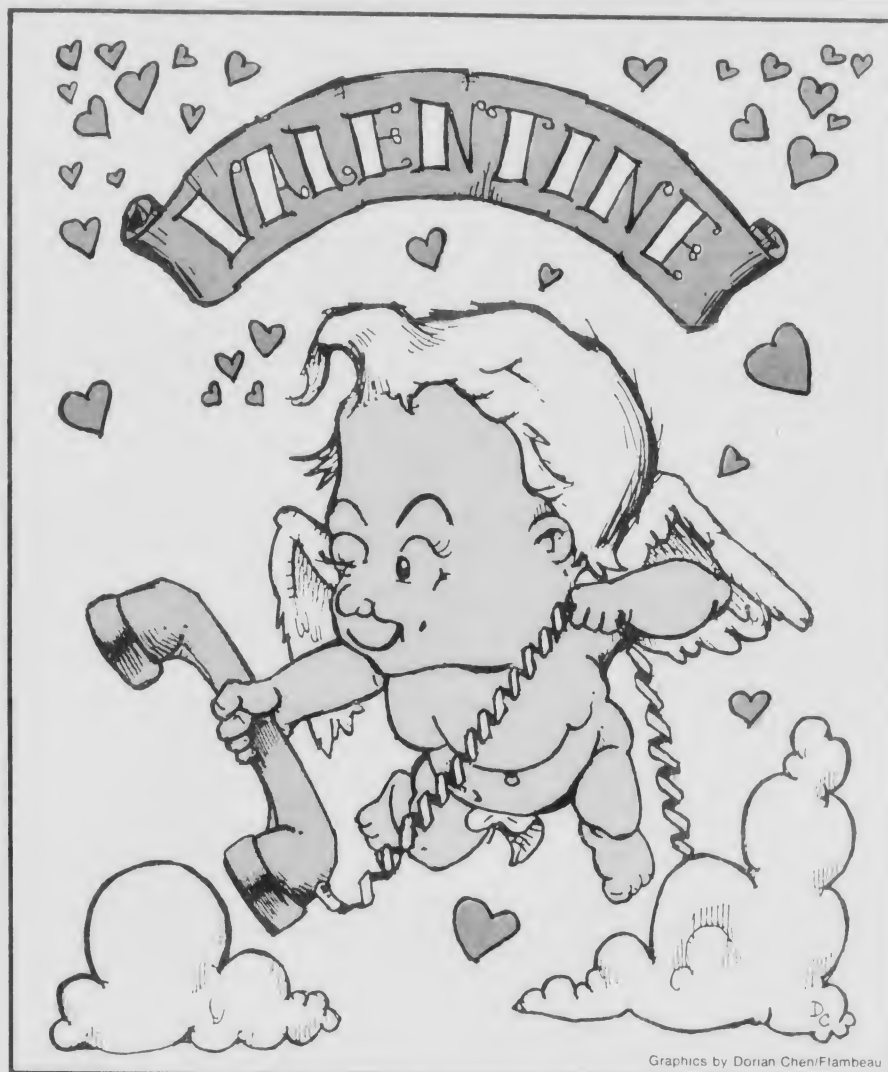

He added that although people his age are being hit real hard by the spread of HIV, there's still just as much rolling in the sheets going on. He said they're just reaching for Trojans or Lifestyles, instead.

"At some parties I've been to, instead of putting out candy or chips, they would put out bowls of condoms," Sean said.

According to general college research conducted several years ago, one in 500 college students is estimated to have HIV, which causes AIDS. For FSU, that would mean 60 to 70 students are infected with the virus, but since Florida ranks third in the number of AIDS cases, the number could very well be higher, Penny said.

"We know of a couple of cases, but there's no way of knowing how many are really out there because they don't know

Peer advising may soon expand to every FSU department

BY JOEL RISBERG
STAFF WRITER

It's easy to feel alienated on a campus the size of Florida State University's, and the inaccessibility of some faculty advisors doesn't help, says administrator Gerry Frost.

Recognizing this problem, FSU's student Senate voted Wednesday night to draw up plans for a peer advising program that would eventually span every department on campus.

"We have a rather large university, and it's sometimes difficult for students to feel a part of it," Frost, coordinator of FSU academic support programs, said Thursday.

The campus-wide advising project stems from a pilot volunteer program started by social science and criminology administrators, professors and students last semester in a small room in the Bellamy building.

Frost said the initial program was designed to fill in the gap left when faculty advisors are unavailable or when students want to get advice from a fellow student in the same major.

Student Senate President Pro-Tempore David Miller, who came up with the idea of using students to help other students last summer, proposed the student Senate bill establishing a plan to expand the project. The Senate will decide next week whether to fund the campus-wide advising program.

"We used to be able to throw money at a problem and solve it that way," Miller said Thursday. "But now we need more creative solutions."

According to Miller, programs such as peer advising are especially needed now because of recent budget cuts that have reduced services to students at all levels.

Philpot

"There's a true need for it," he said. "It has done amazingly well."

So well, in fact, the program's success has led to the partnership with student government.

"It's just a matter of funding and finding the space now," Student Body President Brian Philpot said Thursday.

According to Philpot, the program's founders are asking for $10,000 from student government.

or suspect they have it, so they don't get tested," Penny said.

"You're not going to see many college students on campus with full-blown AIDS because it has such a long incubation period. It's invisible," she added.

Burt, an FSU freshman and member of a fraternity, said he's practically paranoid about contracting HIV.

"I wouldn't go out and sleep with some chick just because the time seems right," Burt said. "If you sleep with a girl who has AIDS, you're not going to just worry about it until the next time she gets her period, you're going to worry about it for the rest of your life."

He said in high school he couldn't wait to get to college so he could do all the humpin' and bumpin' his heart desired, but now that he's here, it ain't happening.

"I feel our generation kind of got gypped out of having a good time," Burt said. "The point of dating anymore isn't to have sex, because it can kill you. AIDS is all over the place."

He added that having a steady girlfriend is much more popular nowadays among his fraternity brothers because they feel less vulnerable to sexually transmitted diseases. Burt said he's been dating the same person for quite a while now.

"It seems like everybody's looking for a girlfriend. I kind of feel like if I stay with this girl, I'll be safe," he said. "But it kind of scares me because we went to different high schools and I have no idea what she was like in high school. All you've got to go on is what they're like when you meet them."

David Moynahan, director of FSU's student health services, said more students are requiring their significant others to get tested for HIV. In December, 34 students went to Thagard Health Center on campus to get tested—a much higher number than a year ago, according to Moynahan.

"I think students know the facts," Moynahan said. "But there's a strong drive and it's just easy to let it slide now and then, and there's the feeling that it'll never happen to me."

'If you sleep with a girl who has AIDS, you're not going to just worry about it until the next time she gets her period, you're going to worry about it for the rest of her life.'

—FSU freshman

Kati, a Florida State University junior, said although she and her friends are using condoms or putting their sex drives on hold to shield themselves from HIV, their main worry is getting pregnant.

"(HIV) isn't really something your neighbor next door gets. It hasn't really happened to enough people yet to hit home," she said. "I think pregnancy is still the biggest concern because it's much more immediate."

Chuck, a star player on FAMU's football team, said he and his teammates are very scared by the spread of HIV. But he added that many still refuse to do the nasty with rubbers on because the pleasure just isn't as great.

"Some people say they don't feel the real thing, even some girls say that," Chuck said. "They just live for the moment. They don't think about it until after it happens and then think, 'Damn, I should have used a rubber!'"

He added that while a lot of his friends claim to use condoms every time they're slamming and banging, he doesn't quite believe them.

"A lot of guys, when they get into it, don't want to stop and put a rubber on," Chuck said. "I know a lot of guys who just don't care. They're going to get as much as they can with whoever they can."

But "Donna," an FSU sophomore and member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, said condoms are much more popular than they used to be. Women who buy or use condoms are no longer thought of as promiscuous or sleazy, she added.

"I don't think there's that stigma anymore. It just means that they're being careful and protecting themselves and other people," she said.

A well-known football player at FSU said he and his teammates have turned on to condoms due to growing concern over AIDS. He added that because football players at FSU are highly revered, safer sex needs to be stressed on the team.

"I guess athletes are put in the position where a person is going to throw themselves on them," he said. "But with the help of Magic Johnson, although it's such a sad story, it opened a lot of eyes and hit home for a lot of people."

According to Bill Milford, an administrator of the Florida HIV-AIDS hotline, 4,096 people ages 20 to 29 in Florida have full-blown AIDS, which is 21 percent of the total number of people with AIDS. He also said non-students the same age as college students tend to be more aware of the need to don condoms when bopping than their peers in school.

"My guess is that when people are in a community of peers like them they feel they're a lot safer," Milford said. "Generally, people in college are young and vibrant, so if you're around those people you're not going to think you're going to get HIV."

But Monique, a sophomore at FAMU, said she doesn't trust anyone, not even her boyfriend of more than a year.

"We are sexually active. However, I make him use condoms," she said. "I mean, if you have one person in the relationship fooling around, it really defeats the purpose."

"It makes you want to find a girl and get married right now so you don't have to worry about it," FAMU's Chuck added.

director for the program will be hired to coordinate activity.

The peer advising project will not be a student government agency, but will receive partial funding from SG for administrative costs.

Frost said the program will likely stay in its current location for now, but she hopes that increased SG support will lead to quick expansion of the program to other majors and departments.

"We're pretty happy with the way things are going," she added.

Volunteers are predominantly juniors and seniors who receive up to three hours of credit for their time.

The peer advising center is open daily from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in room 216 of the Bellamy building.

or suspect they have it, so they don't get tested," Penny said.

"You're not going to see many college students on campus with full blown AIDS because it has such a long incubation period. It's invisible," she added.

Burt, an FSU freshman and member of a fraternity, said he's practically paranoid about contracting HIV.

"I wouldn't go out and sleep with some chick just because the time seems right," Burt said. "If you sleep with a girl who has AIDS, you're not going to just worry about it until the next time she gets her period, you're going to worry about it for the rest of your life."

He said in high school he couldn't wait to get to college so he could do all the humpin' and bumpin' his heart desired, but now that he's here, it ain't happening.

"I feel our generation kind of got gypped out of having a good time," Burt said. "The point of dating anymore isn't to have sex, because it can kill you. AIDS is all over the place."

He added that having a steady girlfriend is much more popular nowadays among his fraternity brothers because they feel less vulnerable to sexually transmitted diseases. Burt said he's been dating the same person for quite a while now.

"It seems like everybody's looking for a girlfriend. I kind of feel like if I stay with this girl, I'll be safe," he said. "But it kind of scares me because we went to different high schools and I have no idea what she was like in high school. All you've got to go on is what they're like when you meet them."

David Moynahan, director of FSU's student health services, said more students are requiring their significant others to get tested for HIV. In December, 34 students went to Thagard Health Center on campus to get tested—a much higher number than a year ago, according to Moynahan.

"I think students know the facts," Moynahan said. "But there's a strong drive and it's just easy to let it slide now and then, and there's the feeling that it'll never happen to me."

Kati, a Florida State University junior, said although she and her friends are using condoms or putting their sex drives on hold to shield themselves from HIV, their main worry is getting pregnant.

"(HIV) isn't really something your neighbor next door gets. It hasn't really happened to enough people yet to hit home," she said. "I think pregnancy is still the biggest concern because it's much more immediate."

Chuck, a star player on FAMU's football team, said he and his teammates are very scared by the spread of HIV. But he added that many still refuse to do the nasty with rubbers on because the pleasure just isn't as great.

"Some people say they don't feel the real thing, even some girls say that," Chuck said. "They just live for the moment. They don't think about it until after it happens and then think, 'Damn, I should have used a rubber!'"

He added that while a lot of his friends claim to use condoms every time they're slamming and banging, he doesn't quite believe them.

"A lot of guys, when they get into it, don't want to stop and put a rubber on," Chuck said. "I know a lot of guys who just don't care. They're going to get as much as they can with whoever they can."

But "Donna," an FSU sophomore and member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, said condoms are much more popular than they used to be. Women who buy or use condoms are no longer thought of as promiscuous or sleazy, she added.

"I don't think there's that stigma anymore. It just means that they're being careful and protecting themselves and other people," she said.

A well-known football player at FSU said he and his teammates have turned on to condoms due to growing concern over AIDS. He added that because football players at FSU are highly revered, safer sex needs to be stressed on the team.

"I guess athletes are put in the position where a person is going to throw themselves on them," he said. "But with the help of Magic Johnson, although it's such a sad story, it opened a lot of eyes and hit home for a lot of people."

According to Bill Milford, an administrator of the Florida HIV/AIDS hotline, 4,096 people ages 20 to 29 in Florida have full-blown AIDS, which is 21 percent of the total number of people with AIDS. He also said non-students the same age as college students tend to be more aware of the need to don condoms when bopping than their peers in school.

"My guess is that when people are in a community of peers like them they feel they're a lot safer," Milford said. "Generally, people in college are young and vibrant, so if you're around those people you're not going to think you're going to get HIV."

But Monique, a sophomore at FAMU, said she doesn't trust anyone, not even her boyfriend of more than a year.

"We are sexually active. However, I make him use condoms," she said. "I mean, if you have one person in the relationship fooling around, it really defeats the purpose."

"It makes you want to find a girl and get married right now so you don't have to worry about it," FAMU's Chuck added.

director for the program will be hired to coordinate activity.

The peer advising project will not be a student government agency, but will receive partial funding from SG for administrative costs.

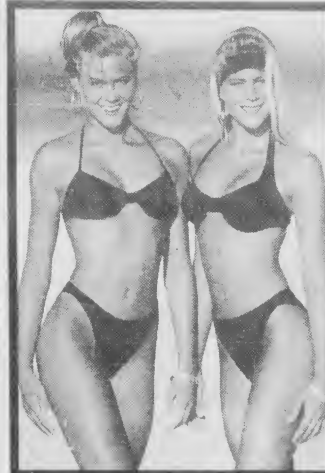

Frost said the program will likely stay in its current location for now, but she hopes that increased SG support will lead to quick expansion of the program to other majors and departments.

"We're pretty happy with the way things are going," she added.

Volunteers are predominantly juniors and seniors who receive up to three hours of credit for their time.

The peer advising center is open daily from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in room 216 of the Bellamy building.

FSU's sex counselors are ready to go at it

LISA SPRAGUE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Sex education isn't for adolescents and junior high school anymore, or so that's what Salt-N-Pepa tell us in their hit song "Let's Talk About Sex."

Following the pop group's advice, Florida State University has started a new Peer Sex Education Program to tell students everything they need to know about sex.

The program enlists students to inform their fellow peers on human sexuality and health issues, according to coordinator Ginny Allen, who says peers are the best people for the job.

"Studies show peer educators are more effective because peers respond better to peers," Allen said Tuesday.

The program, which will actively begin after Spring Break, consists of skits and discussion groups for residence halls, sororities, fraternities and athletic teams.

Peer educators must feel comfortable discussing sex and enjoy performing in front of people, as well as meet some basic qualifications, according to FSU Health Enhancement Coordinator Mary Penny.

"The peer educators must have the time to give—at least two to three hours a week—have a stable G.P.A., attend all training meetings, and be open minded," Penny said.

The peer sex educators will train for eight weeks under Allen, a graduate student in health education. Allen was a peer sex educator at the University of Richmond, and spent her senior year training counselors and developing a training manual for the program.

"This program was very successful at University of Richmond. We were performing at least one program a week, and we hope to have even more success here," Allen said.

FSU's 16 peer educators are a mixed lot—all are enrolled in dif-

Admit it. If you have one curious bone in your body, one inkling of devlry, you've yearned to know. You've seen those ads on TV or wherever that offer 1-900-CUTE-BABE or HUNKY DUDE. At first you're revolted. But then some Tom Foolery in you says, I wonder what those fabulous babes, dudes—uh—say to you.

That's why I took the assignment for Valentine's Day. Good excuse. Holidays hold such false myth now, false hope and untrue ways of making sense of the world. Sure, if you're lucky enough (victim enough?) to have a Valentine, you can spend the day saying honey pie, hoochie poo, lovey dove, angel face. Don't forget to suck face and um a lot.

But what of all those out there without a Valentine, without a way to thinly dramatize the myth of the Old Testament—be fruitful and multiply? The loneliness of mythlessness is the deepest and least assuageable of all. (I stole that line from Rollo May.)

So I call up the hot hot line. Get warned that I gotta be 18 or older to hear this stuff. A guy named "Sam" comes on the line. "Sam?" I say. He clearly has a Hispanic accent. "Sam I am," he says. What, am I in a Dr. Seuss nightmare? Comedy? No last names permitted, he tells me. Says he's in California. He asks my age.

want? I could have been 62 and lied, said I was 28. But he's 20.

Am I married? Silence. Divorced, he says, heaviness in his voice. Sam I Am gives the phone to another guy who says "Hi." Real sexy. I feel like an idiot. How do you flirt with a voice? He says he's doing OK. I say OK? He says, OK, Great. And you can take that more than one way. I don't get the joke, so he hands the phone back to Sam I Am. I'm a tough one, so I confess.

OK, I'm doing this for a news story.

Sam I Am clams up. Then tells me what he can't do. No sex talk. No talking about other clients. No, I can't tell you if I get a commission for keeping people on the line. I have no evidence you're not with the CIA. You may be a serial killer, he says.

Serial killer? I ask. Has a serial killer threatened you on the phone? Not me, he says. Somebody else who works here. He tells me the phone's gonna automatically cut us off after 10 minutes.

BY JIM RICHARDSON
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

When Sarasota Vice busted Pee Wee Herman for allegedly spanking his monkey in the shadowed aisles of a Southwest Florida porn theater, the jokes flew fast and furious. But as with most good comedy, there was a nervous twinge to the laughter. The truth that provoked it was more like the tickle of electric shock than the soothing of Magic Fingers, for it's doubtful there's a person alive who hasn't once indulged in a bit of autoerotic stimulation.

Even in the Dark Ages, Pre-Pee Wee, the joke went something like this: "Fifty percent of all guys masturbate, and the other fifty percent are chronic liars." And we laughed because it was true, because at some point, we had buried ourselves under bed linens, flashlights in one hand, copies of dad's Playboy, stolen from the hall closet, laid before our eyes. Or maybe it was Catholic girls' summer camp, after lights-out, making little soft circles beneath old army blankets, trying to keep the cot-springs from squeaking too rhythmically and giving away the game, wondering if our bunkmates were at it too.

Pee Wee's misadventure brought back all the memories. Visions of the child-man being slapped on the same wrist that flicked furiously in the darkness made us revisit the dread we felt knowing that, at any moment, Mom or Dad might walk in and discover that we had discovered something we'd been

The sight of Paul Reubens' dour, goateed mug also reinforced every parent's assumption that masturbators are greasy little men who fling open their trenchcoats in semen-sticky peep-show aisles and flail themselves into panting oblivion. "No, not my kid," mom and dad intoned.

So they, like their parents before them, let little boys play with Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and G.I. Joe's Main Battle tank. They let little girls play with Malibu Barbie or gaily-colored plastic Playskool vacuum cleaners. But woe unto the kid who wants to play with him- or herself.

Chances are, though, that Mom and Dad have acted on nature's call at one time or another. And the Post-Pee Wee notion of exactly what goes on in the playhouse has to make us pause and think about our judgements concerning our bodies and ourselves.

Masturbation, after all, is older than the story of Onan, Judah's son, who refused to obey his father's orders to impregnate his sister-in-law, spilling his seed on the ground instead. The church tells us

from page 4

Asks me what I look like. I'm speechless. I'd rather read Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair than say I'm too short, too thin, wish I could hide the crows' feet around my eyes that deepen when I smile. Lie? I could. But for what? It hardly seems worth the effort. The phone disconnects automatically. This call has cost $30, and for what? I'm pissed.

Call their sex line, the, you know, heavy duty one. They tell me I need a credit card to get real phone sex. Don't.

I call back the first number and to my surprise don't get Sam I Am. I get a guy who says this is the gay line, how can I help you.

I say gay?
He says you want a straight guy?

I say, no. Don't girls like gay guys cause they can, you know, really talk to them.

He says his best friend is a woman next door, she's married to a Redneck from Hell.

This phone hunk says his name is Tony, he's a purebred Texan. He tells me once his own husband—got that—his own husband wasn't at home, and the Redneck from Hell said he wanted to show Tony some snakes. Redneck from Hell, it seems, has a lot of snakes. Ahem. So Tony says, sorry, gotta go take a shower. So, next thing you know, Redneck from Hell has busted into Tony's house and thrusts a python into the shower. He didn't know I was afraid of snakes, Tony says.

I start up about isn't that kind of a combination of homophobic and homoerotic...

He didn't know I was afraid of snakes, Tony insists. Whatever. I ask him what he talks to women about.

All sorts of things, he says. This one lady calls all the time and they exchange recipes. Wild recipes, he claims. She gave him a recipe for chocolate cake with cream in the center. Says he made the cake and had a sugar kick, was wired for two days, couldn't sleep. If I want a male sex line he can refer me to another number.

No, you're just weird enough for me, I say.

Tony the Texan says he likes horseback riding, does it for fun.

Really? I grew up riding horses, I say. What am I doing? This guy is all innuendo, why am I being naive and literal.

I got a Palomino and a Quarterhorse, he says. I like saddling up the horse and sneaking a bottle of champagne underneath (?) the saddle, riding with my husband down to the lake and the stars and pulling out that bottle of champagne—Surprise!

Uh, well, Tony, what are you guys gonna do on Valentine's Day? I gotta get off these metaphors. Never knew I was this much of a prude. Maybe not that. Just feels so—this is his job. This is my job. We're passing time, I'm spending money, he's making it. We're good capitalists. Why, President Bush would be proud of us. Free exchange, free marketplace.

I'll probably be sitting around the house, he sighs. He's become despondent, seems to have heard my thoughts over the phone wire. Why do people call you, I ask.

Lonely, depressed. Some talk for hours. I wonder how much they pay to get this brief little high. Not as good as pot, coke, shrooms in our just-say-no culture. Hours? One hour would cost $400.

Sir Lancelot, Tony says, perking up a bit. I was riding my horse Sir Lancelot one day when he reared up 'cause a rattlesnake startled him. That's why I'm so scared of snakes.

The phone line cuts off. I find myself wanting to call Tony back and tell him my horseback riding stories. I mean the real ones. Maybe his are real, too. I've just spent $60.

Yeah. Us "Generation X" kids—born in the '50s and '60s, the ones working McJobs, low-pay, low-prestige, low-benefit, no-future service jobs. Overeducated, underemployed, unpredictable. Living with an ozone layer like cheap Saran Wrap—tearing easily, killing so swift.

Hey, do you know how many human deaths are possible from one pound of plutonium if finely ground up and inhaled? 42 billion. Know how many pounds we had in the U.S. in 1984? 380,000. Angst, anxiety. Squirring.

Wishes, rather than actions, are the cause of neurosis, Freud told us. Act? Call the scammers back? F—k it. I'll go read "Little Red Riding Hood" or The Secret Garden or Alice in Wonderland. Now there's some HUNKY DUDE, CUTE BABE stuff in those books.

More golfers robbed by teenagers

The fifth green of the Jake Gaither Golf course is getting rough. For the second time in two days, two men were robbed by a gang of juveniles while playing the green, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Thursday.

At 12:04 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, the two victims were golfing when a group of six juveniles ran out of the woods and demanded the golfers' wallets. A suspect grabbed one of the golfers, threw him to the ground and kicked him in the upper back. The victim was not seriously injured and did not require a medical stay.

Another suspect, armed with a handgun, fired three shots at one of the victims.

The assailants stole the victims' wallets, a watch and some golf clubs before leaving the area on foot. One of the victims, however, was able to hit an attacker on the leg with a golf club before the assailants fled.

A K-9 dog attempted in vain to track the suspects. The suspects are described as African-American males between 14 and 17 years old. The armed assailant weighed approximately 155 pounds and wore a short-sleeved shirt and jeans.

Teenager shoots into mobile home

A playground scuffle between several teenage boys escalated into gunfire Wednesday afternoon in a southside mobile home park, TPD's Garrett said Thursday.

The dispute involved a group of eight boys who attacked two youths on the playground of Pine Ridge Mobile Home park at 12:50 p.m. One of the outnumbered boys ran to a trailer at 203 Great Lakes St., the home of his girlfriend.

An armed youth followed him to the trailer and fired one shot at the door when the homeowner stepped out to see what was the matter. The shot narrowly missed one of the residents of the mobile home who was inside at the time.

The bullet passed through a window, out the rear wall of the trailer and into a neighboring trailer. Witnesses' descriptions led police to the home of 16-year-old Roderick Quadarryl Hall at 216-B Tropicaire St.

During a search of the trailer, police found a .38 caliber revolver with one fired round in it, a bag of crack cocaine hidden in a bed and a small semi-automatic pistol in a closet.

Hall was arrested and charged with aggravated assault and shooting into an occupied dwelling. He was taken to the Leon County Juvenile Detention Center. Bond information is not available for Hall because he is a juvenile.

Announcing low-interest loans for high-performance machines.

Here's how you can afford an Apple® Macintosh® computer, even if you can't afford a Macintosh.

Qualifying students, parents borrowing on behalf of students, and faculty and staff members with an annual salary of at least $15,000, can purchase a Macintosh using the Apple Computer Loan program.

Apply to borrow from $1,500 to $10,000 for the computer, other Apple products—including the AppleCare® extended service plan, and up to three software packages.

If you're a student, you'll be able to defer principal payments for up to 48 months while in school, making interest-only payments until 30 days after you graduate or leave school. Interest rates are surprisingly low, and you can take up to eight years to repay.*

So stop by and fill out an Apple Computer Loan application today. You could be driving a very powerful machine sooner than you think.

For more information visit the FSU Computer Store
University Union, N118
644-7348

*The interest rate is the average of the higher of the 30-day or 90-day commercial paper rates as reported in the Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 4.35%. After June 30, 1992, the spread may increase if program costs increase, but will not exceed 5.6%. Existing borrowers would be notified at least 30 days in advance. The loan may be prepaid at any time without penalty. For the month of October 1991, the rate was 10.06%, with an annual percentage rate of 11.4035%. This rate would result in monthly payments of $18.81 for every $1,000 borrowed. The total finance charge for each $1,000 borrowed would be $442.87. If you elect to defer principal payments for four years, the APR on your loan will be 11.0127%. Your monthly payments during the deferment period will be $0.26, and your first monthly payment of principal and interest will be $29.67 per every $1,000 borrowed. The total finance charge on every $1,000 you borrow will be $617.24. The interest rate is subject to increase after you have received the loan. Each applicant pays a $20.00 non-refundable application fee. Approved borrowers will be charged a 4% loan origination fee. Loan applications after June 30, 1992, may be subject to a higher loan origination fee. The loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount and repaid over the life of the loan.

onanism thwarts divine purpose, that sex is for procreation; any pleasure is a fortunate happenstance. Hence, we are taught, certain body parts should only be used betwixt sanctified sheets in the presence of one's spouse—and only when the two of you are planning on having a baby.

But like most things religious, that's a matter of faith and our church fathers' extremely subjective interpretation. Onan had very practical reasons for not ejaculating inside his sister-in-law; he wanted an heir for his own lineage, by his own wife, so he left the task to someone who enjoyed the job—his father, Judah. Meanwhile, nature and common sense combine to suggest that, incest aversion aside, Onan could have had a very practical motive for wanting to wank.

Quite simply, the activity is pleasurable. It is a perfectly good means to achieve one of the greatest highs possible, without the aid of drugs or mechanical devices. There are no side effects, and it's easy to do any time and anywhere privacy is available (except maybe Manatee County), with no dates to plan and pay for, and no foreplay rituals to engage in. There are, after all, several good reasons why cucumbers are better than men.

Of course, miscreant wags may poke fun, saying it's unmanly—or unwomanly. As State Attorney Willie Meggs will probably tell you, masturbators are pathetic, potentially criminal creatures who buy Vaseline and Kleenex in bulk and frequent the adult section of their favorite video store. Real men and women can get the real thing; only nerds with pocket protectors and wallflowers with horned-rim glasses need to diddle themselves.

What the Real Men and Women don't know is that the nerds and wallflowers are probably way ahead of them when it comes to getting the most out of sex.

Those who masturbate with any frequency learn more about their bodies, and what they like done to them. They know how to push their own buttons, and they can guide their lovers' hands to the same spots.

After all, who said masturbation has to be a solitary activity? Drs. Kinsey and Ruth tell us the paths to pleasure are as many as the people who wish to walk them. Some men, for instance, want a tight grasp and spirited flagellation; others prefer feathery flicks. One woman wants two fingers inside and the others pressing hard on the out; the next responds better to the barest massage. If you can cure your partner's inculturated aversion to exhibitionism and convince him or her to please themselves in front of you, you'll learn to please them better, too.

That made sense before, when sex was simpler and men and women wanted nothing more than to be better lovers. Now, they also like to remain living lovers; beneath the shadow of AIDS' sinister wings, safer sex is crucial. And masturbation is safe sex: You can't give yourself a virus you don't already have, and infected fluids need ever pass between you and your partner; all you have to do is look.

Intercourse is wonderful, but like any good thing, it can become a stagnant routine. A little spice now and then keeps the spark alive, and if the Divinyls' Christina Amphlett believes it's OK to touch herself when she thinks of her lover, how much better would it be to touch yourself when yours is with you, fantasy in the flesh?

Simply put, there is nothing wrong with making yourself feel good—alone or in the presence of your partner. You will not go blind; you will not grow hair on your palms or stunt your growth. You may, however, find that with practice your sex life takes a turn for the better. Then maybe you'll stop laughing and realize Pee Wee Herman isn't as dumb as he looks.

ferent majors and all have different reasons for volunteering.

Tammy Hirtz, a Russian major, said the counseling is a continuation of her life.

"Before I answered the ad for peer sex educators, I was teaching my friends and family about the usages of good birth control," Hirtz said Wednesday.

While training, the sex educators will learn basic reproductive terminology and facts about sexually transmitted diseases, AIDS and birth control. They will also have to complete outside research.

"Right now we are doing research on topics and then giving presentations so that all the educators will learn what everyone researched," Hirtz said.

When their training is complete, their knowledge of human sexuality will be evaluated by staff before they can go out and talk to students.

But according to Penny, the volunteers are not just information booths—they're also supposed to be positive influences on students.

"Peer educators will serve as role models, so they must practice what they preach," Penny said.

Peer sex educators must be willing to discuss all forms of birth control with students, but according to Penny, abstinence will be stressed as the best form of protection against pregnancy and disease. Sexual orientation will also be dealt with, Penny said, meaning the volunteers must be open-minded enough to discuss homosexuality.

Anyone interested in becoming a peer sex educator for next semester, or would like more information, contact Mary Penny or Ginny Allen at 644-6489 or 425 Thagard Health Center.

Black Student Leadership Conference looks to Afrocentrism for inspiration

BY CLAIRE COHEN
STAFF WRITER

Afrocentrism and the seven principles of Kwanza will be the driving force behind a series of black leadership workshops slated for this weekend at Florida State University, organizers said Wednesday.

Workshops at the sixth annual Black Student Leadership Conference will be based on Nguzo Saba and the seven principles of Kwanza, which can be used to define the role of the black leader, according to Annesia O'Garro, programming co-chair of the conference.

The event, which takes place Saturday, is a function of FSU's division of student affairs, and funded in part by student government and the FSU Caribbean Student Association.

"(The seven principles of Kwanza) were selected because they not only aptly described the objective of the black leader, student or otherwise, but they addressed the issues that we felt the conference should address," O'Garro said.

The seven stages of the Kwanza are unity, self-determination, collective work and responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, and creativity and faith. Workshops on the principles will be followed by a panel discussion and keynote speech tying the concepts together, O'Garro said.

According to O'Garro, this year's event, entitled "The Time is Now," is rooted more in Afrocentric concepts and values than previous conferences.

The conference will help participants formulate a definition of black leadership that, "reflects the uniqueness of our Afrocentrism," O'Garro said. The conference will be supplemented by a libation, a general session, a performance of African dance, and a luncheon.

This year marks the first time students will have primary responsibility for planning and implementing the conference, which has been held annually for the last five years. According to conference co-chair Robert Malone, the event will be a departure from previous years, when activities tended toward the superficial.

"It was primarily a place to get free food and a T-shirt," he said.

"In the past, many workshops focused on African-American students being successful in a multi-ethnic world," said Leonard Perry, associate dean of student affairs. "We are shifting the focus to the development of one's self as an African American. If one develops one's self, one will have the tools to be successful."

Student Affairs

While the focus of the conference will differ from previous years, the structure will remain similar to past conferences, according to Perry.

"The conference will provide both something familiar and something different," he said.

Malone summarized his feelings about the conference by saying "BSLC is the beginning of a recognition that leadership in the white community and black community are different and, based on that difference, our attempt is to provide a perspective that black students can embrace and know that it is their own."

"As we know historically, leadership leads to great things and it is my opinion that this conference will be a start in producing great black leaders," he added. "If other racial and ethnic groups can define leadership based on their beliefs and values, it is our attempt to exercise that same right and define our leadership and use it to benefit ourselves."

The Black Student Leadership Conference will be held Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. in the FSU ballroom. Registration for the conference, which is free and open to all FSU students, will be held at 7:30 a.m. in the ballroom. Organizers expect 150 registrants, but said no one will be turned away from the conference.

Skank with your sweetie tonight

BY BLAND LAWSON

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

A good friend of mine used to worry about the potential for a rash of fender-benders around town, the consequence of folks listening to ska on their car tape decks. He envisioned the telling headlines: ANOTHER SKA-RELATED ACCIDENT. Or, RECKLESS DRIVER APPREHENDED; SKA SUSPECTED.

To the uninitiated or unconverted, ska (rhymes with "AH") is an infectious, maddeningly danceable kind of Jamaican pop music, a fast-shuffle precursor of reggae that flourished in the early-to-mid '60s and attracted some notice here in the early '80s, thanks to British bands like the Specials, the English Beat, and the Selecter, which revived the sound in the wake of punk.

My friend was right: It IS risky to drive under the influence of ska—you speed up, pound on the wheel, bob around in your seat. If you happen to be hauling a full load of passengers, the car itself will appear to be "ska-ing" to the other astonished drivers on the road.

Preferable for safety's sake is enjoying ska in the stationary security of your own home. But preferable for FUN's sake is ska-ing with a clubful of deliriously happy people. Best of all is when there's a great live ska band at said club to drive everyone out onto the dance floor.

You'll have the chance to experience this best of all possible skascenarios when the Toasters play the Club Downunder tonight. Their show at the Downunder last year was joyous, with everything connoisseurs (or skannoisseurs) expect from bona fide ska-revivalists: tight, fast playing, a punchy horn section, and a madman of a "toaster" who flipped and careened all over the stage.

Guitarist/singer Rob Hingley, who played in various ska bands in his native Britain before moving to

The Toasters

New York in 1980, formed the group in 1985 with American musicians after introducing them to the sound. Hingley's old friend Joe Jackson has produced two of their previous albums.

1990's This Gun For Hire, which came out on their own Moon Records label, bears out Hingley's claim in an earlier interview that The Toasters are by no means a "purist" ska band: "If you have too strict a vision of ska, it becomes very sterile." While ska is clearly at the core of the songs on the album, there are lots of stylistic flourishes in other directions, too—calypso, high-life, jazz, funk, Memphis soul.

As nicely as all this hangs together on the recording, it doesn't begin to suggest the band's hyperactive live show. They may not be purists, but the Toasters certainly have all the hallmarks of the sound nailed down—scratchy guitar and horn riffs on the offbeats, bass line bouncing around on the front beats, clanging drum turnarounds, a relentlessly fast tempo. And EVERYONE there dances—not just timid little one-tile skanking but full-floor chugging and flailing.

Ska may never be anything more than a marginal disruption on the American music scene; it only got as far as it did 12 years ago because the major record labels, shocked for a few nanoseconds out of complacency by the surprise commercial success of punk, thought they'd cash in on the next big thing that appeared to be wafting this way from England.

But, as Hingley himself noted in a recent phone conversation, ongoing interest in ska really has very little to do with the mainstream music industry anyway. The major labels, he said, "don't have a clue." Although this has been frustrating for them in the past, Hingley says they have rethought their business. For now, the band is quite happy with the way things are going with their own label. They've recorded material for another release (to be called New York Fever), and they're bringing in bigger, more diverse crowds at shows.

"We're having a better time than we were two years ago," Hingley said.

If you need any proof, catch their show tonight. If you've got to drive to the Club Downunder, be safe and responsible—leave the ska tapes at home. Besides, you're going to need all the energy you can possibly muster.

The Toasters party all over the place at the Club Downunder tonight. Show starts at 9:30, and is free for FSU students with validated IDs and $3 for other ska-natics.

Facing challenges

'What I call the Goddess is this living being that is the Earth; it's the cycles of birth and growth and death and regeneration. Because we live in a toxic culture ... we are called to be healers very strongly ...' Those are the words of Starhawk, author, feminist, peace activist, and 'witch.' She will speak on "Challenges in the 21st Century" tonight at 7 in Ruby Diamond Auditorium in a lecture sponsored by the Center for Participant Education, the Women's Center, and the Jewish Student Union. Starhawk brings a distinct, unique perspective to the problems facing us as we move into the new millenium. The lecture is free.

FLORIST & GIFTS

Cupid will be slammin' at the Library tonight

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

Darth Vader's Church, affectionately known as D.V.C., has ruled Tallahassee's underground metal scene for four years, delivering some legendary slam fests at the late, great Planet 10. With their minions thoroughly subjugated here, they're eyeing bigger and better things, and V 89's Break Your Heart Ball at the Late Night Library tonight will be the last chance to see them before they cross the ocean to conquer the pagan hordes of Europe.

Guitarist Glenn Lawhon believes there's more of a market in Europe for their dark, hardcore style of music, but admits he's perplexed by this.

"It's weird because a lot of people when they hear about what kind of music we play, they kind of expect something really different," he said.

Less playing around town has meant more woodshedding, and the results can be heard in their new album, Molecular Shadow, their second for the German label SPV, distributed here by Manufacture Records. The European tour will in fact be their first real tour, an exciting prospect for this bunch of Tallahassee locals.

Originally categorized as a thrash band, Lawhon says they've diversified their sound on the new album.

"It's not just heavy guitar all the way through, and then it stops," said Lawhon. "There's keyboards, acoustic guitars, even a harmonica, just s—t flying everywhere."

That doesn't mean D.V.C.'s sound has changed, however.

"Heavy guitar is where we came from pretty much, all that Black Sabbath we listen to—you've got to have that in there," Lawhon said.

Lawhon expects a different kind of show tonight at the Late Night Library, if only because of the different crowd. This reflects the all-ages atmosphere of D.V.C.'s previous shows at Planet 10 and recently at Club 506.

"I think we got blacklisted by some people a long time ago," he said. "But if they're not open-minded enough (to listen), forget them."

Opening for D.V.C. is the Shatterposts, a new band (thanks to the addition of guitarist Steve Fox) with an old name.

"We're completely divorced from the old band; I don't even think of it the same way," said bassist Jon Lammers. "There was a big impetus to change the name, but we couldn't come up with a name we could all agree on."

The new incarnation is six months old and has been hard at work on an entirely new batch of songs. They hope to have a CD out by the end of the summer. So throw out your preconceptions, because according to drummer Errol Kolosine, "we've evolved into something a little bit more menacing than we used to be."

"It's the difference between acid and beer," added Lammers. No word on which was which.

D.V.C. and the Shatterposts stomp on St. Valentine's little paper heart tonight at the Late Night Library at 649 Gaines Street at the Break Your Heart Ball Benefit for V-89. The show is 18-plus and the doors open at 8. Admission is $4, but hey, it's for a great cause.

Hold on to your seat (among other things) when you pore over these

BY ANDREW ARVESEN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

As Valentine's Day approaches the sap begins to rise. Although Hallmark says V-Day is all about L-U-V, it's well known that this most popular Saint's Day is equally concerned with S-E-X. In the spirit of the season, the Flambeau presents this handy guide to erotic literature.

A NOTE TO SELF RIGHTEOUS TYPES: These works are NOT degrading to women/violent/dull/dim-witted macho baloney. Most of them were written by honest-to-God feminists. Who are very sexy.

In fact, as studies by social scientists have shown, women have the advantage in erotica. While most women are bored to tears by the mechanical, labored writing of male-oriented porn (e.g. Penthouse Letters: The Magazine of Sexual Marvels), men are actually more aroused by reading the sensual, emotional erotica focusing on a feminine point of view.

Some of these works are fiction, some are social science, some are self help. But ALL of them are SEXY!

The Song of Solomon: Yeah, this is part of the Bible, but it's also one of the most erotic poems in any language. Solomon had something in the neighborhood of 800 wives and judging by this poem, he shared Shakespeare's taste for dark complexioned beauties. Sex has been around a long time and even the patriarchs liked to get down.

The Kama Sutra: Another golden oldie, this Hindu love manual is between 1,500 and 2,500 years old. Although written in a deceptively matter-of-fact style and espousing some fairly antiquated social ideas, this book features explicit and astonishing instructions on such lovemaking specialties as the Biting of the Boar and the Leaf of the Blue Lotus.

Shakespeare's Sonnets: These are more pulsating poems. The first 126 sonnets are addressed to an unnamed friend and contain profound insights on the nature of love. The last 27 concern a love triangle between the poet, his friend and the raven-haired mistress they share. This is the Bard at his Bawdiest. Keep in mind that Will is not only our poet's first name, but Elizabethan slang for sex organs.

Florida Flambeau commentary

Delta Of Venus by Anais Nin: Jumping forward several centuries, we come to Nin's celebrated smoldering prose. Although she wrote these stories for a male patron (at the rate of a dollar a page), this book is the first important erotic work from a decidedly womanly point of view. A bewildering array of fantasy and romance, these tales will open the eyes, minds and possibly legs of male and female readers alike.

The Sensuous Woman by 'J': This mid-'60s sex manual seems amusingly dated, but it contains the best instructions for oral sex available anywhere.

The Joy Of Sex: A Gourmet Guide To Lovemaking by Alex Comfort, MD: THE classic sex manual. Comfort maintains that "Sex is the best form of adult play," and gives detailed discussions of nearly every aspect of sex. This book was revised last year, so now you can seek out the new edition, with frank articles on all the new STDs, or the old version, with its pictures of hippies and oriental sex paintings.

The Hite Report by Shere Hite: This landmark study of female sexuality is one of the most worn books at any public library. The big draw here is not only Hite's extremely frank overview of how women's sex lives work, but the extensive quotations from her survey's respondents. These women describe, in exquisite detail, their experiences, preferences, fantasies and rituals. From the detailed section on how to enjoy a shower massage to the many reasons for having affairs, this book is an eye-opener and pulse-quickener.

My Secret Garden by Nancy Friday: This is Friday's first compendium of women's sexual fantasies. This was the first major book on this taboo topic and raised quite a fuss in the early '70s. Like The Hite Report,

CALENDAR

AUTHOR, PEACE ACTIVIST, FEMINIST, WITCH: STARHAWK IS ALL THAT AND MORE, and she brings her particular insights to Ruby Diamond Auditorium tonight, when she speaks on "Challenges Into the 21st Century." Starhawk holds an M.A. in Psychology from Antioch West University and teaches at several San Francisco Bay area colleges. Her books include The Spiral Dance: A Rebirth of the Ancient Religion of the Great Goddess and Dreaming the Dark: Magic, Sex and Politics. The lecture, which is sponsored by the Center for Participant Education, the Women's Center, and the Jewish Student Union, begins at 7:30 and is free. Call 644-6577 for more information.

TREAT YOUR LOVE MUFFIN TO AN EVENING OF ROMANCE AND HELP THE TELEPHONE COUNSELING and Referral Service tonight at a benefit concert at the Monticello Opera House. The stellar lineup includes Del Suggs, Steve Meisburg, dancers Darrell Jones and Rebecca Garay-Simmons, the Harmony Grits barbershop quartet, and more. Tickets are $12.50, $25 and $50, and include a champagne reception. Call 681-9131 for information and reservations.

CALLING ALL RUDE BOYS AND GIRLS! IF YOU'VE GOT MUSIC IN YOUR TEETH or even in your feet, you must worship at the altar of ska tonight at the Club Downunder, when the Toasters put on a Valentine's Day ex-ska-vaganza. The show starts at 9:30, and costs a mere $3 for non-students. For those with validated FSU IDs, it is, as the Great Wooga Wooga from Aruga says, free. Call 644-6710 for info.

BANG HEADS WITH YOUR BABY TONIGHT AT V-89'S BREAK YOUR HEART BALL at the Late Night Library. The Shatterposts, featuring the ever-lovely and stylish Errol Kolosine, and D.V.C. will play tunes of love, lust and horror. The proceeds benefit FSU's very own alternative radio station, so go on out and break SOMETHING (heart, head, butt, whatever). No wussy lace-and-heart valentine types allowed. Doors open at 8.

AFTER ALL THAT MUSHY LOVE STUFF, YOU CAN CLEANSE YOUR EMOTIONAL PALATES Saturday night with a laugh fest at the Club Downunder featuring comedians Tom Ryan and Chris Baker. Laugh till you gag, y'all. Show starts at 9:30 and is $3 for non-students and free as a spring breeze for the proud holders of validated IDs. Call 644-6710 for info.

THE CENTER FOR ARTS ADMINISTRATION AT FSU HOSTS A SERIES OF LECTURES, discussions and workshops addressing current arts issues during Arts Week 1992, which begins Saturday and runs through Wednesday, Feb. 19. The theme for this year is "Facilitating Cultural Growth Through Planning and Advocacy." Meetings and activities are too numerous to list here, but a schedule can be obtained by calling the Center for Arts Administration at 644-5473 or 644-5475.

LIKE CHILI? LIKE KIDS? THE ELKS LODGE HOLDS A CHILI COOK-OFF SATURDAY at the Lodge on Magnolia Dr. to benefit the Oaks Children's Hospital in Gainesville. Yum, yum! Call Bob Peters at 562-4898 for more information.

SOPRANO BARBARA FORD WILL SING SONGS BY CURRENT AMERICAN COMPOSERS in a recital Saturday night at 8 in Opperman Music Hall. The program includes "Animal Ditties," by Anthony Plog, using poems by Ogden Nash, and is free. Call 644-4774 for more information.

THE BETHEL BAPTIST CHURCH WILL BE THE SITE OF A SPECIAL EXTRAVAGANZA Sunday night. The program is presented in honor of the birthday of the Reverend Doctor Charles Kenzie Steele, Sr. (better known as Rev. C. K. Steele), whose legacy as a civil rights leader and man of God is being perpetuated by his friends and family in the form of a scholarship fund for deserving students of Florida A&M University. Music will be provided by Helena Barrington, the Bethel Baptist Choir, Carl McBride (of WAMF-FM's "Classic Showcase") and others. For more information, contact Darryl or Rhonda Steele or the Rev. Henry Marion Steele at 681-2944.

THE REZZ ON GAINES STREET HOSTS A COSMOPOLITAN PARTY SUNDAY NIGHT FEATURING MISS Shayla Monet and other guests in a surprise midnight show, as well as a wine and cheese mixer from 6-8 and dancing from 8-midnight. A portion of the proceeds will benefit the RISE Project, which is a non-profit organization dedicated to intervention/prevention of addictions and AIDS in the black community. Admission is $3 for students and guests; $1 before 8 p.m.

WILD HAIR 2

An Exhibit of Media Madness

'Wild Hair 2,' an exhibition by the Artist's League of the University Gallery, opens tonight at 6:30 at the 621 Gallery at Railroad Square and runs through March 1.

Parents teach their children more than the ABC's. They teach them all about being a family by the way they raise them.

Sometimes child abuse is what a child learns.

Passed on from parent to child, child abuse is taught by one generation to the next. Without intervention, young parents who were neglected or abused as children may repeat the pattern of abuse.

Community supported opportunities for parents to learn how to give their children nurturing care will help break the cycle of abuse.

Stith chokes big time and FSU wins

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Bryant Stith, the leading free throw shooter in the Atlantic Coast Conference, missed two foul shots with two seconds remaining Thursday, enabling No. 22 Florida State to sneak by Virginia, 64-63.

The Cavaliers, 11-9 overall, 4-5 in the ACC, appeared to have their fourth straight victory when Rodney Dobard fouled Stith, an 85.6 percent free throw shooter. But Stith clanked both shots off the rim and Florida State's Doug Edwards grabbed the rebound to seal the win.

Chuck Graham scored 18 points, including four 3-pointers, to pace the Seminoles, 17-6 overall, 9-4 in league play. It was Florida State's sixth victory on the road in the conference, two more than any other first-year team in ACC history.

Bob Sura gave the Seminoles a 63-62 lead when he stole a Cory Alexander pass and drove the length of the court for a layup. Sura then made one of two free throws with 22 seconds to go for a 64-62 Seminole lead.

Virginia's Junior Burrough made one of two free throws from the line with 13 seconds left.

The Cavaliers fouled Charlie Ward one second later, but he missed the front end of a one-and-one. Virginia grabbed the rebound and set up Stith, who was fouled attempting a 15-foot jumper.

Burrough led Virginia with 19 points, Stith had 16 and Ted Jeffries added 10. Sura had 13 points for the Seminoles and Sam Cassell scored 10.

Rattlerettes dump USF

BY TY SIMPSON

STAFF WRITER

The Florida A&M Rattlerettes broke a three game losing streak Thursday night using an impressive offensive performance to beat the University of South Florida 89-86.

Center Polly Innerarity scored a season high 40 points on 16-of-19 shooting and hitting 8-of-13 free throws.

Rattlerette coach Claudette Farmer said she has been pushing Innerarity to be more consistent inside the paint.

"She did a real good job focusing in there tonight," Farmer said. "I'm very happy with the fact that she converted most of her buckets inside."

As a team, FAMU shot 59 percent compared to just 46 percent for the Lady Bulls.

"Many times we want to run it, but that's not always in our best interest," said Farmer. "We scored a lot of buckets in transition on steals, and thats fine."

With the win, the Rattlerettes up their record to 7-13.

From the diamond to the dinner table FSU infield friends and competitors

BY PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

Okay romantics, here's true love with all the traditional themes to boot: reunion, fidelity, intimacy, all, of course, coming against great odds. It's all there, packaged by Cupid himself, except it occurs in a most peculiar place ... on the baseball field.

Particularly the infield at Florida State, where actually it is coach Mike Martin who put it all together, and for those afraid of the L-word, let's just call these guys madly happy to be together again.

But this tag appears rather mild after understanding the camaraderie developed between Link Jarrett, Allen Bevis, Nandy Serrano and Kevin McCray.

"It didn't really seem like that big of a deal to all of us just because we grew up in the same atmosphere," shortstop Jarrett said Wednesday. "It only seemed a big deal when people started talking to us about it."

All right, they all played together at Florida High School here in Tallahassee and now they form the starting infield for the seventh-ranked team in the nation. Cat's out of the bag. Big deal. It's a rarity worth being noted, yet it very well could mean they just caught a few rides to practice together.

It just goes much further than that.

Serrano, the third baseman, and Bevis, who plays at second, have been roommates for two years. Bevis has played with McCray, the first baseman, since Little League. Jarrett's been like a pesky little brother to both McCray and Bevis. And Serrano, a native of Puerto Rico, would be culturally inept and hardly the fluent English speaker he is without the other three's help.

Still, friendship's truest test comes in the competition that underlies it. It's certainly there.

"Anything the four of us do, we kind of compete," Jarrett said. "Whether it's eating wings or lifting weights or on the baseball field."

Wings, Link? Come on, is there no peace in eating? "We do that. We'll all go and get 100 wings and see who's going to eat the most," Jarrett said.

Of course, Jarrett would say he eats the most. Just like McCray would say he'll hit the most homers this season. But, then, not if Serrano has anything to do with it—the home runs, that is.

McCray's ahead in the race so far, knocking one out in his first game at FSU.

"It's eating Nandy up that I hit a home run and he doesn't have one yet," McCray said. "He doesn't show it, but I know he's anxious to get one."

For McCray, talking home runs with his old friends is a comfort he can relish. He spent the last two seasons at South Florida before arranging a transfer to FSU this season.

"I just wanted to come back here and play with them, play in front of a home crowd," said McCray, who hit .272 and drove in 30 runs at USF last year. "I mean, you make friends everywhere but not friends you've known growing up."

It's a good chance McCray has in him a few clutch hits, considering his nickname is "Chilly." Meaning, this book is best when Friday lets her informants tell their own tales. The astonishing variety and vitality of these fantasies will impress and inspire even the most jaded reader. Ignore Friday's often intrusive interpretations and this book will become a bedside favorite. Thy Neighbor's Wife by Gay Talese: This encyclopedic tome is Talese's chronicle of the Sexual Revolution. At the beginning, Talese is a sexually repressed, middle-aged journalist wondering if he's missing something. Hundreds of pages later, he drops his observer status and becomes a willing participant. This is the greatest source of information on swinging, '70s porn magazines, X-rated films, and all other aspects of "the Sex Industry". The book is dedicated to his wife of 30 years, Nan (they are still happily married).

Pleasures: Women Write Erotica and Erotic Interludes, both edited by Lonnie Barbach, Ph.D. These books further explore the sexual minds and lives of women. Intended as a sort of antidote to Penthouse Letters-style writing, Pleasures features 32 true tales of sex by a variety of gifted women writers. From monogamous marital excitement, to chance lesbian encounters, to one woman celebrating her 30th birthday being serviced by two male sex slaves, this collection shows that women are leading much more interesting lives than even Friday and Hite realized. In fact, they sound like Nin's heroines. Erotic Interludes is a collection of sexual fiction by many of the same writers. Both volumes feature Barbach's enlightening and unobtrusive commentary, exploring the themes of the stories.

Yellow Silk: Erotic Arts and Let- ters edited by Lily Pond: This is an anthology of the best of Pond's decade-old erotic quarterly. As readers of Harper's know, this magazine's credo is "All persuasions, no brutality." Simmering hot stuff by many leading writers, this book includes poetry, prose and whimsical illustrations in sections with titles like "I want you with three mouths." Smart, sexy and up-to-date.

ONE FINAL WORD: A book can be much more interesting and effective than a card or chocolate. This St. Valentine's Day, consider giving one of these selections to your mate. It could liven up the rest of the year.

SPORTS BRIEFS

There are still a few slots available for intramural softball. Come down to room 136 Tully Gym to sign up. The intramural office reminds those teams that have already signed up that they must attend the mandatory captains meeting and roster turn in on Wednesday, Feb. 19 at 4 p.m. in Moore Auditorium or they will lose their slot.

All fraternity IM reps are reminded that today at 4:30 p.m. is the deadline to enter fraternity tennis.

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1992

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your penchant for hard work pays splendid dividends.
Another person offers valuable financial tips in March. Go ahead and make some new investments. The summer of 1992 will bring you wider professional recognition. Your personal life could take a different direction by August. A promising love relationship is on the horizon. Discussing your business aims with family members could lead to a new alliance next winter. Get promises in writing.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Meg Tilly, sportscaster
Mel Allen, journalist Carl Bernstein, actress Florence Henderson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19):
Something that has been hidden comes to light. You benefit from taking the advice of trusted friends and family members. Be more discreet about a personal relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A project you guided to completion is widely applauded. Do not forget your New Year's resolutions: Get some exercise every day. Romance has its ups and downs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Slip into top gear and make your pitch to a prospective client. Originality counts big with those in authority. Romance takes a serious turn when you reveal your intentions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You are lucky to have more time to spend on personal projects now. Take an unconventional approach when dealing with a difficult person. Patch up any differences with your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Success comes when you discuss your long-term plans with professionals. Hold down spending by purchasing only the essentials. News from loved ones at a distance cheers you up. Write an overdue letter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Teamwork will lead to higher profits. Remember, two heads are better than one. Use any confidential information judiciously.
Spending more time with a lonely older person will do you both good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A secret admirer joins your social circle. A quiet tete-a-tete may hold more appeal than attending a party it is your choice. Cupid has a lovely surprise in store for you!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Learning new skills will boost both your earning potential and your self confidence. Do not expect everyone to go along with all your ideas. Romance requires careful thought.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A friend or relative offers help if you find yourself in a financial bind. Clear your desk of important papers before leaving work today. A secret wish will soon come true.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Bridge the miles by discussing your ideas on the phone, a wonderful agreement could result. You are lucky in love as well as friendship. Nurture your relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A personal project may hit a snag today. Do not despair! Other people will come to the rescue. Show your appreciation for their help and generosity. Repay favors as soon as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spending time with a co-worker or casual friend could give you fresh insights. Be careful not to reveal information that should be kept secret. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are bright, lucky and somewhat restless. Easily distracted, they tend to flit from project to project. Wise parents will gently encourage these youngsters to finish one task before tackling another. Very people-oriented, these Aquarians try hard to please those they like. Fortune smiles on their efforts to get ahead in business.
Good-natured and unconventional, these Aquarians are reluctant to sit in judgment of others. Their policy is one of "live and let live."

Olympic Notebook Americans slash Fins

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

MERIBEL, France—The United States hockey team survived its first major test Thursday, beating a much quicker and experienced opponent to assure itself a spot in the medal round of the Olympics.

Scott Young scored twice, the second coming on a short-handed breakaway late in the final period, to keep the U.S. squad unbeaten with an impressive 4-1 triumph over Finland.

We feel Finland is one of the better teams in the tournament," Young said. "They've always been in the running along Czechoslovakias, Russias, Canadas and Swedens, and we felt that this was a true test for us.

"I'm not going to try and lie to you. We've been reading the papers. We knew that everyone was going to gauge us on this game, and we came to play."

The United States, after placing seventh in each of the last two Winter Games, finish out the opening round with matches against winless Poland and top-seeded Sweden.

American Donna Weinbrecht captured the first gold medal ever awarded in Olympic freestyle skiing Thursday, using the motivation that came from failing to finish atop the elimination round.

Weinbrecht, a 26-year-old racer from West Milford, N.J., said she bore down during Wednesday night's countdown to the finals after coming in second to French rival Raphaëlle Monod in the semis of the moguls.

The American two-man bobsled team of Brian Shimer and Herschel Walker finished 11th in a practice run Thursday, the only run it was able to make because of heavy snow that fell in the area. Shimer and Walker had produced the best practice times on Wednesday. Thursday was the final day of practice prior to Saturday's first run in the bobsled competition.

Dudes from page 20

he's stoic-like cold, without a feeler in his body. Of course, this is all according to Jarrett.

"Kevin says what he feels. He's very spontaneous," Jarrett said. "He's not concerned whether he's going to hurt someone's feelings."

But it may not be beyond Jarrett to use a press medium in order to retaliate from earlier years, when McCray and Bevis were on Jarrett like Serrano is on a line shot down the third-base line.

Yes, Jarrett, a bit overweight as a youngster and in the unfortunate spot of being the youngest of the four, has absorbed more than his share of fun-loving ribbing.

"We've always picked on Link. We still do . . . he's just a nice guy," Bevis said.

Never-hold-back McCray had a bit more to say about Jarrett.

"He was always kind of slow and kind of chubby," McCray said, jokingly. "So it took him a while to lose that . . . he's really developed well, though."

Jarrett, a sophomore who hit .265 with 18 RBI last year, has amazed many with his late bloom.

"I would have bet $100,000 that (Jarrett) wouldn't have turned out to be the shortstop here," Bevis said. "But now he's one of the more consistent shortstops I've known."

They'll say it's Jarrett's work habits that make him successful, more so than raw talent. It's certainly not his glove, and or gloves. He's never happy with them.

"He's crazy. He's all about getting a good glove," Bevis said. "He's always got some connection, trying to get another glove."

But Jarrett takes care of his gloves. In fact, he was voted Most Loyal to Sleep with His Glove by both Bevis and McCray.

For Bevis, finding his glove may be his biggest trouble. His household cleanliness isn't exactly up to par with Ms. Manners.

"If I can see my floor it's a good day," said Bevis, a senior and three-year starter who hit .271 with 23 RBI last year.

It gives further proof to the opposite of the theorem. Bevis' roommate, Serrano, is a pon opposite, a list maker and a dish-cleaner.

"Nandy has to write a list for everything he does. He has to write down to eat and to go to the bathroom," Jarrett said. "Allen is the complete opposite. He does things when he wants to. He leave dishes sitting around for days."

But, the word is, Serrano sticks to his outs. If he doesn't, his internal balance just doesn't seem quite right.

"If I don't get everything done, I get mad," said Serrano, who hit .336 with eight homers and 46 RBI last year.

But Serrano can always relieve his anxiety with some country music. Say what? A Puerto Rican listening to country?

"He's not your normal Latino," Bevis said.

"I love country. I used to hate it," said Serrano, who said he hasn't ruled out bobsledding as yet either.

In fact, considering the chance it took to get these four friends together at a top-notch baseball field, they won't likely be ruling out anything.

Could they even form the future Atlanta Braves' infield?

"That'll work," Bevis said. "We just have to make a couple of calls."

Cupid may be able to arrange something.

FSU's brotherly infield and the rest of the Seminoles open a three-game home series with Virginia Military Institute this afternoon at 3:30 at Dick Howser Stadium. Saturday's game starts at noon and Sunday's begins at 2 p.m.

Financial aid situation looks pretty bad for ones who need it most

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

Florida's brightest and neediest students are staring down a gun barrel loaded with financial aid cuts resulting from a lack of money in the state's coffers.

"There are none that have been spared," Rick Lutz, director of the office of Student Financial Aid at the Department of Education, said last week. "Unless new revenue comes in, it looks like those cuts will go through."

The House and Senate have passed versions of a budget for next year that would underfund scholarships and grants the state gives to college students. After working out differences in their budgets, the two houses will send a joint budget to Gov. Lawton Chiles for approval.

Yearly payments of the Florida Undergraduate Scholars Fund, a scholarship awarded to Florida high school students who have done well in school and remain in Florida to attend college, could be cut from $2,500 to $2,000 if the Legislature gets its way.

"That's going to hit us pretty hard," David Badagnani, a third-year student at FSU who receives the FUSF scholarship, said Sunday.

Badagnani said he is on other scholarships as well, but added, "It's certainly not going to help me get money for grad school."

Approximately 9,600 students receive FUSF scholarships, but more than 11,000 people may get the merit scholarship next year because of a growing applicant rate.

"I came here (to FSU) only because they offered me the scholarship," said Christian Birkedal, who also receives the FUSF scholarship.

If the cuts make it through the lawmaking process, Birkedal said he would have to either get a job or transfer to a school in his home state of Alabama.

But the dilemma of where to find more money affects everyone receiving money from the state, not just FUSF recipients.

Due to a threefold increase in expected recipients of the Gold Seal

'Gender equity' bill would boost number of women and minorities in universities

BY RAJU CHEBIUM
STAFF WRITER

Florida's state universities and community colleges will hire more women and ethnic minorities to serve as deans, vice presidents and in other top administrative posts, if a state senator has his way.

Gainesville Democrat George Kirkpatrick's "Gender Equity Bill" also asks universities and community colleges to grant more women and minorities tenure.

The bill requires the Board of Regents and the State Board of Community Colleges, which run Florida's nine state universities and 28 community colleges, to submit plans for hiring more ethnic minorities and women to the Legislature by July 1992.

The bill does not say, however, how many women and ethnic minorities should be hired or granted tenure.

"The benefits (of the bill) are obvious," Kirkpatrick said Friday. "If 50 percent of the students and 50 percent of the population are women and (there is) a high percentage of minorities, then for us to have a system of administration and tenured faculty that for the most part in the past has excluded these folks, I think it's inequity and we've got to change that."

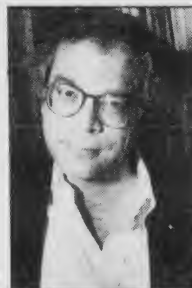

The bill would add more teeth to the 1984 Educational Equity Act, Kirkpatrick said. The 1984 state law prohibits universities and community colleges from discriminating against students and employees on the basis of race or sex, among other factors. But the law primarily targets discrimination against students.

Kirkpatrick's legislation would give individual departments special grants to serve as incentives for hiring women and ethnic minorities. But if departments do not make the effort when hiring an unfilled faculty or administrative position, they will lose the post to another department within the university or community college.

Pat Riordan, BOR spokesperson, agreed with Kirkpatrick that state universities need more minorities and women among their tenured faculty and top administrative brass.

"I won't try to defend the indefensible," Riordan said. "There's nothing wrong with the women (and minorities), there's something wrong with the way we do business."

Indeed, out of the 2,749 tenured professors in Florida's nine state universities in Fall 1991, 290 were women, Senate Education Committee figures indicate.

"Even when you allow for childbirth and child rearing, that still doesn't explain the (low

In the last four years she's been out of the abusive relationship, Amanda, like many other battered women today, has written poetry as a way of exploring her emotions.

Nicholas Mazza, editor of the Journal of Poetry Therapy, says poetry and song lyric writing is an increasingly popular counseling method used to help many battered women regain self-esteem and release pent-up anger.

FSU employee whips up aid program

BY ELIZABETH GREEN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

A Florida State University computer analyst has organized a volunteer project that would send 25 tons of food and medical supplies to the struggling republics of the former Soviet Union by mid-March.

"They are changing in Russia," James Carrion, founder and chairman of the Tallahassee Bridge to History Project, said last week. "So we decided to lend a hand."

According to Carrion, the crumbling economy and widespread shortages of food and other goods create a need for immediate relief.

"They really need it now," he pointed out. "They are in a hard winter and food is really scarce."

Carrion's project, endorsed by FSU and in conjunction with the Fund for Democracy and Development and Publix supermarkets, will collect donated food and medical supplies and then ship them directly to the republics for distribution.

Publix has donated food bin space at all of their local supermarkets until Feb 18 for food donations. Carrion hopes to get other supermarkets involved as well. Once the donations have been collected, the Fund for Democracy and Development, a national corporate-funded organization, will ship them to Kiev, capital city of the Ukraine.

"We have a distribution process in place in Kiev to make sure that the supplies won't end up on the black market," Carrion said. He and other project representatives will be on hand to meet the ship when it arrives.

Once in Kiev, the supplies will be distributed directly to hospitals, orphanages, and nursing homes which, according to Carrion, are in the most need of immediate aid. The Baha'i Faith of the Ukraine and the Ukrainian Peace Council will provide logistical support for the distribution of supplies.

Carrion hopes these donations will help ease the social tension that endangers democratic and economic reform in the republics.

"I want to insure their transition to a free-market economy," said Carrion. "Our efforts cannot only alleviate human suffering in that part of the world, but we can also benefit by building a more stable world order."

Carrion believes there is more than meets the eye in providing humanitarian aid to the republics.

"Ethnic unrest is on the rise," Carrion said. "Many people feel the republics could be on the verge of civil war."

Carrion said by contributing to peace, the U.S. can reduce the national defense budget and the national debt as well as establish ties that will have lasting implications in international trade.

Although Carrion thinks the program has a lot of room for growth, for the time being it is a short-term project. He hopes this first shipment will be successful and that it will prompt other cities nationwide to start other Bridges to History programs, he said.

"We want to see what the public response is and how generous the people are," Carrion said of future plans for the project. "We want this to be a model project that other cities can get involved in."

High school student murdered

Police have identified a suspect for the Saturday night slaying of 16-year-old Lincoln High School student Carey Morton.

Homicide investigators were obtaining arrest warrants Sunday afternoon, but the suspect's identity could not be released because the investigation is ongoing, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett Sunday.

Morton, of 925 Hawthorne St., had just left a school function in a 1989 Toyota when she and the driver stopped at the Suwannee Swifty at Sutor Road, Garrett said. At about 9:10 p.m., witnesses reported hearing an argument between a group of people in a red car parked at the store's gas pumps and the occupants of the Toyota.

They left the convenience store parking lot and stopped at a stop sign before pulling onto Apalachee Parkway. Two people ran up to the victim's car while one of them, armed with a semiautomatic handgun, fired numerous shots through the passenger window, striking Morton.

The driver, a friend of the victim, drove Morton to an acquaintance's house in the nearby Twin Lakes subdivision where an ambulance and authorities were called. She was taken to the Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center and later pronounced dead.

The assailants fled on foot.

Woman sexually battered by husband

After demanding $10, a man pulled his wife's pants off and forcefully searched her body cavities for the money, Garrett said.

After the attack, the man ransacked the apartment, which gave the woman a chance to escape.

The victim waited until she was sure her husband was gone, returned to the apartment and called TPD. The victim told police her husband's actions were caused by his drug use. The suspect has not been located.

Man rapes stepdaughter

An 11-year-old girl confided in her physician late last week that her stepfather had been sexually abusing her since the age of eight, Garrett said Sunday.

The victim told TPD the suspect would abuse her while her mother was away at school. She said he threatened to beat her with an extension cord if she ever told anyone of the acts.

The Hillsborough man moved out of the family home over a year ago in order to avoid arrest on separate charges of violation of probation and failure to pay child support. Since then, the suspect has moved at least three times to avoid capture.

Hillsborough County Sheriff's deputies served an arrest warrant for the man Thursday. The suspect is being held without bond in the Hillsborough jail until he is brought back to Leon County to face a charge of sexual battery on a child under 12 years old, which is a capital offense.

Attack at traffic light

A 23-year-old woman was sitting in her car at a stop light at Brevard and Macomb streets Friday night when a group of men attempted to rob her by throwing a brick through the driver's window, Garrett said Saturday.

The victim was waiting to make a left hand turn when three or four men surrounded her truck, trying to get her to by crack cocaine.

When she refused, the assailants pitched a brick through one of her windows. Another suspect reached into the truck and grabbed the steering wheel. Meanwhile, a third suspect entered the truck on the passenger side and snatched the keys from the ignition.

The attackers were unable to force the victim to leave her vehicle and soon fled the area. The Robbery Task Force is continuing the investigation.

Rumors of war

Rumors of impending war are once again fouling the air. Various reports have appeared in the news lately, saying the U.S. is "weighing the options" with regard to both Haiti and Libya. The options include—surprise, surprise—military actions.

In light of the desperate political situation of the president, it's difficult not to view these war rumblings with considerable cynicism, if not outright contempt.

In New Hampshire, Pat "The Terrible" Buchanan is breathing his right-wing, hot political air down the president's neck. There are even some who believe a Buchanan upset is now a possibility.

There's also our comatose American economy. No sign of recovery is on the horizon and politically speaking, that doesn't bode well for our embattled president.

And thus, our fear of the possibility of an election-year military escapade.

Sceptics of this president's motives couldn't have been reassured either by a now widely quoted statement the president uttered last month. To paraphrase: "I'll do anything it takes to win."

Much as we'd like to say we're wrong, we can't. A president who used the Willie Horton issue to scare whites into voting for him in 1988 is probably capable of anything.

Yes, even war.

And let us not forget Ronald Reagan's invasion of Grenada which occurred within weeks after the fiasco in Lebanon in 1983, when Islamic fundamentalists blew up the U.S. Marine barracks, killing at least 200 soldiers. Reagan bugged out of Lebanon and headed straight for Grenada.

News stories about the Lebanon disaster were replaced with stories on the heroic defeat of tiny Grenada by the world's strongest superpower. Images of America standing tall replaced the image of laying in coffins.

Perhaps it was just a coincidence that all this occurred a year before the 1984 presidential election.

Unfortunately for the Democrats, and the country, the strategy was a bigger success than the Reagan people could possibly have hoped for. And not least because most congressional Democrats, with a few notable exceptions, ran for cover rather than invoke their constitutional right to approve of such a blatantly unconstitutional use of presidential power.

From the available evidence it seems the Bush administration is following the scenario which led to the Persian Gulf war and almost a year of good news and positive polls for the president: calls for an international embargo, lots of name calling and the inevitable military strike.

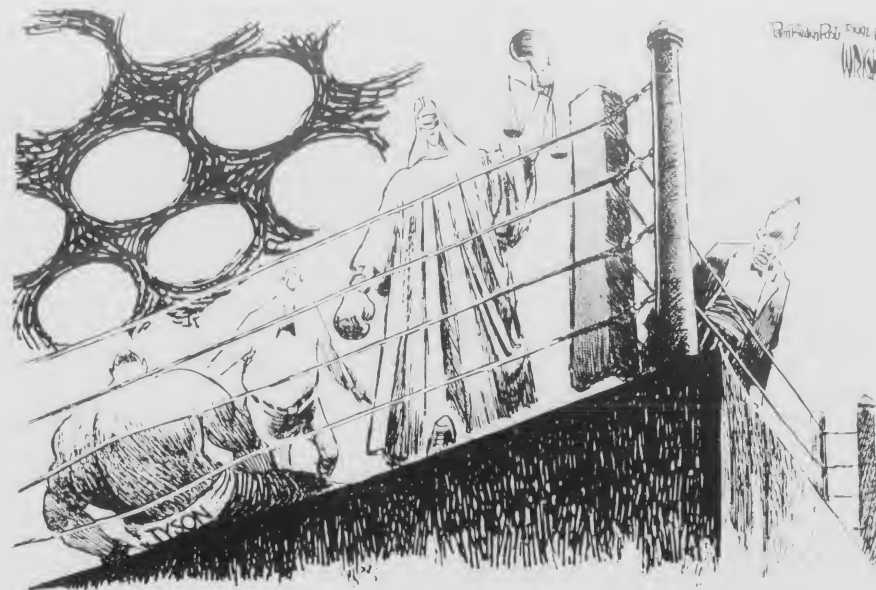

The U.S. wants Libya to extradite two suspects allegedly involved in the Lockerbie Scotland bombing of a Pan Am jet which killed 270 people, in spite of considerable evidence that points in the direction of Iran and Syria. The not-so-secret secret is that because the Iranians and Syrians were accomodating to the U.S. during the Persian Gulf war, the U.S. and Britain have decided to forgive and forget their possible role.

In the case of Haiti, the rumors of war refer to the out-of-control Haitian army and the exodus of thousands of Haitians to Miami. Here, the rumor has it, the U.S. has decided that a "restoration of order" is needed, and that either the U.S. alone or with a contingent of the Organization of American States is up for the job. This raises the obvious question: Why did the Bush administration lift the economic embargo on Haiti recently?

Whatever the rumor, we hope Congress has not only the political cojones to refuse to allow a politically desperate president to launch a military action without its consent, but the will to say no to any election-year war.

Fill your head

Editor:

RE: Malcolm X hats

It seems to me it would be a better day when you quote the manager of a local bookstore on the sold-out copies of The Autobiography of Malcolm X as told to Alex Haley, rather than a Foot Locker manager of the sales of Malcolm X hats. I do not deny the symbolic strength of the "X" ball cap, or its potential for positive association with a current issue, but the hat is a poor substitute for the impact we would see when all the prospective hat buyers instead read this book and acquainted themselves with the spectrum of ideas which Malcolm X developed throughout his brief lifetime. The symbol would hold much more strength when backed by an understanding of the full range of Malcolm X's beliefs. Until you can write such an article, let me suggest to your readers: Read a book or something." Fill your head before you put a hat on it.

Dime-eating grin

Editor:

We have a question for Al Gilligan, FSU business services director, concerning the price of Coca-Cola on the FSU campus. Would you please tell us, o wisest one, why the price for sodas was raised permanently to 60 cents, if the reason justifying the dime increase was for offsetting the cost of installing Access card slots? Presumably, at some point, all those extra dimes will pay for the installation—will the price then go back down to 50 cents? Or is it that big grin you were wearing on the front page all the answer we need?

We also are beginning to wonder how long will students allow themselves to be stepped on before they start throwing rocks and bottles. Tuition raises; athletic fees; crowded classrooms; limited class offerings—the list goes on. When you treat people long enough like pieces of trampled refuse, don't be surprised if they retaliate in a manner similarly dignified.

Sounds dangerous

Editor:

It is very kind of Randy Brien to take the time to let us "emotional" types bask in the glow of truth and enlightenment concerning X-rated videos. I now understand how the law can work to enforce the morality of a few on all of society. Of course the work of groups like the American Family Association is never really done. As George Bush recently said about Puritans, they have this terrible feeling that somewhere out there someone is having fun.

Mr. Brien's explanations were incomplete at best, leaving out anything that might interfere with his argument. He accuses anyone who would disagree of being ignorant of the law, yet shows a great lack of knowledge himself. Or does he understand but not want to admit it?

I agree with the statement that "Florida law concerning obscenity is very clear." It is clear that the definition of obscene material is set by the "the average person, applying contemporary standards" (FL Statutes 847.001 1991) not some special interest group. Mr. Meggs acted on the request of an association whose purpose is to impose their beliefs on all of society, not on any widespread community complaints. Average people don't even notice the X-rated videos, unless they're renting one.

Last year a state attorney in central Florida tried to shut down video store X-rated movies in his district. He went so far as to confiscate tapes and arrest store owners and managers. Unfortunately for him, after viewing many tapes the juries refused to declare them obscene. While he himself was merely wasting tax dollars, he was also costing the store owners considerable money.

Of course Mr. Brien and company are only doing this because it will "enhance the health and well being of the entire community." It's only for your own good; after all, they do know what is best for you. Sounds kind of dangerous.

COMMENTARY

Bama's backward when it comes to sex and civil rights in the '90s

BY D.K. ROBERTS

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

If you want to, you know, get next to somebody in the state of Alabama, you better do it like the preacher says. That is: it had better be heterosexual, missionary position, procreative (no female orgasms!), short-lived, partially-clothed, in-a-bed (with covers) sex. No substitutions allowed.

In this state where the Confederate battle flag still flies over the Capitol and no building is taken seriously unless it has white columns, the forces of WASP-ish repression are trying to regulate human sexuality. And it is a most unseemly spectacle.

You'd think the clampdown would be happening in some inbred, snake-handling North Alabama village unpenetrated by the modern world of Madonna, Gus Van Sant films and condom ads, but it isn't. It's happening on the two largest university campuses in the state.

At Auburn, a fledgling gay and lesbian student group was granted a charter by the university administration, giving them the right to student government funding. The student government, however, pitched a homophobic hissy-fit and tried to derail the organization. A fraternity-led outfit calling itself "Students for a Healthy Auburn," circulated a petition calling for the university to forbid the gay and lesbian group's use of campus facilities and held forth on "perversion," and "disgusting" lifestyles. They collected 12,000 signatures from students and alumni.

You can see that the "political correctness" conservative educators fear is infesting the students of America isn't exactly a problem at Auburn.

The Auburn administration stuck to its guns, so Auburn students took to theirs: When a member of the Auburn gay and lesbian organization was out putting up posters announcing a meeting, he was shot at by a student (from Florida, actually). It took the university three days to have the guy arrested.

Not to be outdone in backwardness, the Alabama state Senate weighed in with a resolution attacking the Auburn Gay and Lesbian Alliance and reiterating Alabama's collective disapproval of "deviants" who would "degrade the family."

Meanwhile, at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, where there has been a flourishing gay and lesbian student group for about a decade, a lot of us were sitting around feeling smug about how much more intelligent, tolerant and sophisticated we were than those yokels at Auburn. Those pathetic rednecks, we thought. Those prudish yahoos. Not like our progressive campus.

You'd think the clampdown would be happening in some inbred, snake-handling North Alabama village unpenetrated by the modern world of Madonna, Gus Van Sant films and condom ads, but it isn't. It's happening on the two largest university campuses in the state.

Then, a resolution passed the Alabama student senate calling for the Alabama Attorney General to "rule" on the legality of the university's funding of the gay and lesbian group. The sponsor of this vicious piece of work, student senator Liles Burke, explained round-eyed for the TV cameras that he wasn't gay-bashing or anything like that, it just occurred to him that since sodomy and fellatio were illegal in the state of Alabama, the university might be breaking the law in giving money and facilities to the gay and lesbian organization.

This oily disingenuousness fooled no one. Fornication is also illegal. But if you arrested everyone who had done it, you'd leave very few people (student Sen. Liles Burke might well be one of them, however) to guard the jailhouse.

Happily, the University of Alabama administration, like the Auburn administration, is having none of this. University President Roger Sayers issued a statement the other day dryly noting his surprise that students traditionally as independent as those at Alabama feel the need to ask the attorney general how to spend their money. Even better, the Alabama student government president, a frat guy not normally noted for his liberal attitudes, has vetoed the resolution.

Once again, the state of Alabama is made to look like a backward, provincial pit of Neanderthal intolerance, a national laughingstock. The Atlanta Constitution has done an editorial on the subject. It has even made National Public Radio. But the Liles Burkes of Alabama don't mind—they're after future political careers built on bigotry. And the sad thing is, they'll probably succeed in them.

Longtime Flambeau columnist D.K. Roberts is an English professor at the University of Alabama.

have to turn to loans to make up for the lost cash.

"Students will be forced into borrowing, going through the Guaranteed Student Loans program," he said Friday.

Being in debt is a poor way to enter the job market following graduation, McCloud added, but it's better than trying to get work without a college education.

"It'd be worth students' efforts to stay in school," he said, but added, "Something's got to be done somewhere down the road. We can't load students up with debt."

Alton Royal, director of student financial aid at Florida A&M University, was out of town this weekend and could not be reached for comment.

Though some people may be reluctant to get a loan to pay for school, Florida Board of Regents spokesperson Pat Riordan called it "investing in yourself."

"We unfortunately can't provide full support for everybody," Riordan said Friday.

But there is one thing students can do, he said, and that's let the Legislature know how they feel. By writing to their senators and representatives, students can send a message loud and clear.

"What you need to offer is that you know who they are, you live in their district and you're registered to vote," Riordan said. "You've got their full attention."

number of tenured women)," Riordan said, adding that most professors across the state are white males.

White males constitute 81 percent of 2,749 tenured faculty members in Florida, according to the Senate Education Committee figures.

That is deplorable, said Harry Goldman, president of United Faculty of Florida, a university faculty union.

"They tend to think the same. They have the same education and have the same background," Goldman said. "(They're) used to seeing the world from that background."

A university with many women and minority faculty members is one that better serves its students, Goldman added.

"Students who take classes with a culturally diverse faculty would have a better education," he said.

Goldman said most top university administration officials are also older white men.

"When you look at the top administrators, it's 90 percent white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant male," he said, adding that most women and ethnic minorities are in the lower administration levels.

"As you go higher and higher up the ladder, suddenly at the top, it's all the same," he said.

But that does not seem true at Florida A&M University.

Three out of 12 deans at FAMU are women, said Mary Vaughn, executive assistant to the president and the university's equal opportunity officer. In addition, 33 percent of all tenured faculty at FAMU are women, she said.

At FAMU, a historically black university, a non-black faculty member is considered to be an ethnic minority.

"FAMU's primary focus now is pretty much to increase representation of whites and Hispanics," Vaughn said, adding whites constitute about 30 percent of all faculty members at FAMU.

The BOR seems to be pleased with the number of minority and women faculty and staff at FAMU.

"(FAMU's) shortfall is in enrollment," said Riordan. About 85 percent of FAMU's student body is black.

But Florida State University, a predominantly white institution, does not come up as strong in its women and ethnic minority faculty and staff representation.

Out of 756 tenured faculty at FSU, 142, or about 19 percent, are women, said Freddie Groomes, assistant to the president and the official in charge of equal opportunity issues at FSU.

Further, ethnic minorities constitute only 5 percent of the tenured faculty at FSU, according to figures released by Groomes.

At TCC, the situation seems better.

In Fall 1991, 10 percent of the faculty were black and 51 percent were female, TCC figures indicate.

In addition, 25 percent of TCC's top administrators are black and 31 percent are women, the figures show.

But universities and community colleges will not be able to hire anyone unless the Legislature earmarks more money this year for education, officials say.

"We haven't been hiring women or minorities because we virtually haven't hired anyone in the last year," Riordan said.

are troubled—particularly focusing on battered women—sometimes poetry can provide them, and song lyrics as well, a means to discuss what they are feeling," Mazza, an associate professor in social work at Florida State University, said Friday.

He's really sorry, you know/ He really couldn't help it/ He promised no more are lines of poetry written by another battered woman who also fled from the bondage, the fist, the abuse from the hands of the man she lived with and loved.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation indicates that a woman is battered every 30 seconds, and other studies show that two million women are battered each year.

In Mazza's clinical practice, he prescribes Robert Frost's poem The Road Not Taken for women dealing with the pressures of deciding to act or refrain, and Stephen Crane's If I Should Cast Off This Tattered Coat for those trying to identify options during a crisis.

Mazza described poetry as a springboard into emotional depth.

"You start out by talking about the poem or song or piece of literature and then you begin to talk a little more about yourself," he said.

By writing in a journal, Mazza said, battered women can get a clear picture of their situation and measure their progress. At the same time, they can discover their ability to create something out of suffering and build self-esteem.

"What I found in my work is that if they begin to write things down, write what they are feeling, write what some of the troubling issues are, they begin to get control," Mazza said.

When troubled, Amanda will sometimes write six pages sorting out her feelings. She keeps a journal and writes letters she never sends, she said.

"It's a therapeutic tool, an adjunctive technique, to be used in conjunction with other forms of treatment," Mazza said.

He stressed that poetry therapy is only a tool and must be used with other forms of treatment, and cautioned that poetry has the power to both help and harm.

For example, he said, "There's a song by Melissa Manchester called Don't Cry Out Loud and it's a very powerful song which deals with what many people have been taught not to express. Now if I use that clinically, then we can talk about what it has been like not to cry."

But, he added, "If I don't follow up, if I just play the song and let them go their own way, then they may reach the conclusion that 'Yeah, I'm suppose to be quiet.'"

Mazza uses poetry therapy to counsel not only battered women but children, men and the elderly as well.

"The early Greeks, perhaps intuitively, knew the healing powers of poetry," Mazza said. "Now poetry therapy has joined the other arts therapies as a legitimate alternative to more traditional counseling methods."

Seminoles reach preseason's great expectations with weekend win

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

Florida State coach Pat Kennedy has said, since the pre-season, that his team's main goals were to break even against Atlantic Coast Conference opponents and to win 18 games overall. Eighteen, Kennedy said, would virtually assure the Seminoles a spot in the NCAA tournament.

The Seminoles earned that magic 18th win Saturday 80-67 over a slumping Georgia Tech squad.

Theoretically, the ACC's third-place Seminoles (18-6, 10-4) could finish with 21 regular-season wins and expect to be awarded a strong seed in the post-season.

"18 was our goal. To me, that would have been a great year," Kennedy said Saturday after the game. "This team has continued to make us believers in them and I think that's very, very exciting. They felt they were better than 18 wins and they're maybe on the verge of that now that they've got 18."

Kennedy said the confidence of Charlie Ward, Douglas Edwards, Sam Cassell and Bob Sura was a key reason for Florida State's success. And he said the win over Tech and even last Thursday's win over Virginia were crucial in maintaining that confidence until the end of the season.

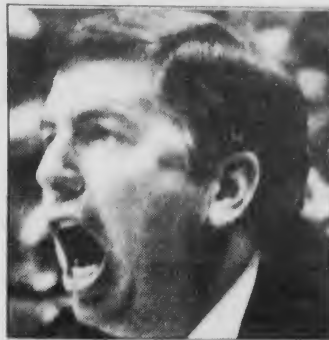

"Those guys expect to win every night they take the court and they've pulled the confidence of the other guys up with them," Kennedy said. "It's become infectious."

"These two games back-to-back ensure that our team builds in confidence as we come down the stretch," Kennedy said.

Cassell, coming off a poor shooting performance against Virginia, led all scorers with 22 points, 18 of which came on his six three-pointers. Cassell also grabbed eight rebounds.

Tech coach Bobby Cremins said Cassell's three-point touch was the biggest reason for the Yellow Jackets' loss.

"(Cassell) has got tremendous courage. He just lines up and drills the three and it just breaks your back," Cremins said. "He reminds me of (Tech alumnus and Orlando Magic star) Dennis Scott."

Kennedy

The Seminoles, who have been inconsistent on free throws all season, shot 47.6 percent from the foul line.

"We just try to make 'em up with defense and easy baskets," Cassell said.

FAMU unloads bench and any frustration against UMES

BY PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

Some task, Florida A&M Coach Willie Booker has in trying to satisfy his bench of players that's so extensive, word is, they had to piece together two photos to produce a team picture.

But Saturday night the sub crew got plenty of playing time in the Rattlers' 96-69 rout of Maryland-Eastern Shore at Gaither Gym.

"The reserves have been frustrated," said Booker, whose team has seen a number of close games of late so substitution has been limited. "They haven't been able to play so I think it was a good opportunity to clear the bench."

The 14 FAMU players who saw action also made for a needed win. The Rattlers, 12-12 overall and 6-4 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, remain in a nip-and-tuck league battle with Howard and Delaware State.

Howard leads the conference at 10-3 and FAMU

Paschal leads Lady 'Noles as they return for ACC finale

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Tia Paschal scored a team and career high 29 points Saturday to bring the Florida State women's basketball team back from a 10-point halftime deficit and beat North Carolina State 86-79.

The win in Raleigh made for a sweep of the Wolfpack team, after squeezing by them in Tallahassee in January, and boosts FSU's conference mark to over .500 at 8-7. The Seminoles are now 13-8 and coach Marynell Meadors said the victory could give her team the confidence it will need to beat Wake Forest tonight.

"This is the best I've ever seen this team play," Meadors said after the game. "We may not be the best team but we showed we have the best athletes and we gained a lot of confidence by winning here."

Paschal's 12-of-20 shooting from the field and 12 rebounds paced the Seminoles' come-from-behind effort, pushing the patient FSU offense to outscore the Wolfpack 55-38 in the second half. Meadors said Paschal's play really made things happen.

"Tia played great. She created so many opportunities when she had the ball and she just played hard the whole game," Meadors said. "It helped us open up our running game and let us take control of the second half."

The FSU guard trio of Robin Corn, Danielle Ryan and Allison Peercy combined for 11 assists, eight rebounds and 21 points. Meadors called the victory a "great team win."

"I'm very proud of the tremendous team effort, especially from Robin Corn, Allison Peercy and Berryhill," she said. "We felt more relaxed shooting and really supported for the rebound."

The Wolfpack was without the services of Rhonda Mapp, a 20-points-per game forward who was suspended from the contest for academic troubles. The Wolfpack hit over 50 percent in the first half but fell apart couldn't keep up with the Seminoles in the second.

Meadors said she hopes her team will carry that momentum into tonight's contest.

The Seminoles face Wake Forest tonight in a 7:00 meeting at Tully Gym to wrap up their ACC schedule.

Gutierrez, FSU sweep Rattlerettes

BY SCOTT DANAHY
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The Florida State softball team remained undefeated by rolling over the Florida A&M Rattlerettes in dominating fashion Sunday. Toni Gutierrez pitched a perfect game for the Lady Seminoles in the first game of the double header to earn a 12-0 victory. Rebecca Aase hurled a no-hitter for a 10-0 win in the second game to improve the Lady Seminoles' record to 4-0.

On the season, Gutierrez has pitched twelve innings and given up only one hit and no runs while earning 19 strikeouts. Gutierrez's performance marked the first time that the senior has had a perfect game. Despite her dominating performance, however, the pitcher was not entirely happy with her game Sunday.

"I pitched awful today, my ball didn't break (and) I just didn't feel good about my pitching," said Gutierrez who hinted that FSU's defense contributed to her perfect outing. "It's nice to have a defense behind you like ours. We have an excellent defense."

In the second game, sophomore Rebecca Aase enjoyed an equally dazzling performance as she fanned 10 Rattlerettes allowing no hits and walking only one. Aase also has not given up any runs on the season and has only allowed two hits.

"My pitches were working a little more than they did last week, and with our team hitting I felt more relaxed out there with a comfortable lead," said Aase.

The Rattlerettes were plagued by fielding errors as they fell to 0-6 on the season. Psauntia Andrews (0-3) and Jill Klundt (0-3) suffered the losses on the mound for FAMU.

In the 1992 season the Lady Seminoles have not allowed any runs to cross the plate in 24 innings of play, while outscoring the opposition 39-0.

FSU head coach JoAnne Graf emphasized that while her team is

FSU survives Keydets scare

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

After watching Florida State's baseball team stomp the Virginia Military Institute 10-4 on Friday and 20-0 Saturday fans probably weren't too excited afraid to watch Sunday's weekend wrap up. But the young VMI lineup fought hard, forcing the Seminoles (6-1) to go into the tenth inning to complete the series sweep, 5-4.

FSU coach Mike Martin said he, like his team, may have been lulled into a false sense of security by the easy wins on Friday and Saturday.

"I did not think they had the ability to beat us from what I'd seen the first two days," Martin said Sunday.

Designated hitter Bob Armstrong doubled with one out in the tenth. Then, with the bases loaded, second baseman Allen Bevis drove a 1-1 pitch into leftfield scoring pinch runner Casey Yarbrough to win the game.

"I was just trying to wait back and not get out front of a pitch and not ground into a double play," Bevis said. "I wanted to sit back and reach the outfield deep enough where the guy could score."

The VMI Keydets, who scored four runs on four hits in the first, were on top 4-3 in the bottom of the ninth inning when FSU first baseman Kevin McCray singled pinch runner Grady Jordan in from second. However Randy Hodges over-rouned second base, enabling VMI catcher Merlin Ikenberry to pick him off for the final regulation out.

In the top of the tenth, reliever Tim Davis set down the Keydet batters with three strikeouts on nine pitches.

Davis (2-0) picked up the win for FSU. VMI reliever Patrick O'Farrall (0-1) was tagged with the loss.

FAMU crushes VSU

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Florida A&M completed a three game sweep of Virginia State University on Sunday, improving its record to 5-2-1 overall with a 10-4 over the Trojans.

Virginia State fell to 0-3.

Freshman Antonio Rivers (1-0) pitched impressively, retiring the first ten batters he faced for his first win of the season.

The Rattlers stormed ahead to a 10-0 lead in the fifth inning. Nine players scored in the game for the Rattlers.

Earlier in the day, FAMU resumed Saturday's rain-delayed game. Catcher Derrick Richardson hit a grand slam in the sixth inning which led to a 10-2 rout over VSU.

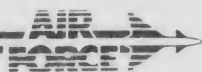

The Rattlers complete their nine-game home stand on Tuesday, by opening a two-game set with Mercer University. Both Tuesday's and Wednesday's games will begin at 3 p.m.

is tied with Delaware State, which it takes on tonight at 8 at Gaither Gym. "I think we are in the top two in the conference," Booker said. "We have the best front line in the conference. I think our guards are the best also, they just need experience."

Heralded freshman point guard Kevin Colson, inconsistent in his debut year, showed improved play Saturday night.

"He's been relaxing," Booker said. "He didn't force things as much as he has before. He kept the ball in the middle of the floor."

Since Delaware State likes to press, FAMU will need strong point guard play to avenge an earlier three-point loss to the Hornets.

FSU from page 8

playing well, it is crucial that it maintains a high intensity level after easy wins like this.

"If we can continue to score runs early, even against top twenty type teams, then I think we're going to win a lot of ball games," remarked Graf.

Outfielder and lead-off hitter

Susan Buttery, who had six hits and went 5-for-5 in the first game, said she was pleased with FSU's success at the plate so far this season.

"A lot of times last year we just got one or two runs and were winning games 2-0. Right now I like the way we're jumping on them in the first inning," said Buttery.

The Lady Seminoles will be off until Sunday when they face in-state rivals West Florida.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Reliability and a positive attitude are the keys to winning a higher-up's trust. Work with zeal and that long desired promotion or assignment could be yours by the end of next month. A supportive family is a tremendous asset. Let loved ones know how much you appreciate their help.
Seeking experts' financial advice next
October could save you a lot of money.
A winter vacation or second honeymoon does not have to be as expensive as you think.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Alan Bates and Jim Brown, author Margaret Truman, basketball great Michael Jordan.

ARIES (March 1-April 19): The emphasis today is on making shrewd decisions. Surround yourself with positive thinkers. Keeping your cool will help you hang on to all your options.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New sources of income present themselves.
Be careful if embarking on a new romance. A wolf may be concealing himself in sheep's clothing. Put away your credit cards until your bills are paid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A meeting or project may not go as smoothly as you hoped. Short-sighted words or actions could cause long-term damage.
You need to take financial precautions.
Put romance on the back burner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Certain friends or colleagues may have you chasing rainbows. Follow your heart instead. Your ingenious ideas will take hold with someone influential. Fact-hunting pays off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A surge of energy helps you accomplish even more than you expected. Reach out to people who share your views and goals. Play a more active role in a club or professional organization.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain new social acceptance and make important friends this week. A valuable secret alliance may develop. Attending an event with your co-workers is a good idea.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A debt or joint account could pose problems; you must not waiver from your practical sense.
Keep things under wraps today to avoid angering a longtime associate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Interest yourself in your children's activities. Are you pleased with the kind of company they keep? A steady income is essential.
Let employers know that your independence is a plus.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):
Good intentions alone may not be enough to bring about what you want. Obtain friendly backing or professional advice when necessary. Taking a financial gamble now would be a mistake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 9): You have a knack for making even strangers feel at ease. Roll out the red carpet for visiting dignitaries. Do not let a misunderstanding regarding money management strain an important relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):
Someone may try to soft-soap you into sharing inside information. Reveal nothing and nothing will be held against you. This is not a good day to sign contracts or make a major purchase.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): By refusing to be diverted from your purpose, you will extract a full measure of success.
Showcase your special skills to attract the attention of a prospective client or employer.

TODAY'S CHILDREN forge friendships easily and are experts at winning public

Pitts and Gilmer are out in administration changes

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

Changes have been announced in two important Florida State University administration posts, and President Dale Lick says there are more on the horizon.

Jim Pitts, vice president for university advancement, announced his resignation Friday due to a change in his job role. He will continue in the position until August, and then return to teaching in the business school, where he is a tenured professor.

Gerry Gilmer, Director of University Relations, was informed last week his contract with the university would not be renewed. Gilmer's future plans are unknown.

Gilmer did not return repeated calls to his office or home over the past two days, but Lick says Gilmer could stay in his present position for up to 12 months, or he could seek a teaching position at FSU or elsewhere.

According to Lick, the moves do not mean there is a major shakeup underway. "People have different styles," he said Monday, adding it's not unusual for there to be some personnel moves whenever there's a change at the top.

Lick became president of FSU in August 1991, following the retirement of

BOR picks Lee County for next state university

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

Lee County will be the site of Florida's 10th state university—if the state ever coughs up enough money to build it.

The Florida Board of Regents voted Monday to place the university on a 600 acre parcel somewhere in a 1,075 acre area south of Fort Myers near Interstate 75.

But the BOR hesitated on the exact location, given the choice of placing the newest college next to a landfill or in an environmentally sensitive area.

And unless the Legislature coughs up some cash, the unnamed university will linger in governmental limbo, Board of Regents spokesperson Pat Riordan said Monday.

"These documents can sit on the shelf forever unless the Legislature provides some money," he said.

Riordan said he expects the Legislature to eventually come up with the money, but there's only one way to do it.

"Unless we have major tax reform, we will never open the 10th university," he said.

The 10th university is low on the BOR's priority list for next year's funding, but if it gets funded close to 100 percent, it would receive $5 million in 1992-93.

According to Riordan, the Legislature passed a law last year ordering the BOR to choose a site for a new state university by March of this year.

Riordan denied that plans for a new university might send a wrong message at a time when the state's nine existing universities are facing economic ruin.

"We're meeting the deadline (the Legislature) gave us," Riordan said.

The seven-hour meeting saw flares of controversy over the chosen location—owned by Alico Corporation—and another parcel of land in Lee County owned by the

Gardner and Dudley's plan to axe FPIRG fee defeated

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

A proposal to eliminate the current funding procedure for the Florida Public Interest Research Group, an environmental and consumer advocacy group at universities around Florida, was defeated in the state Senate last week in a 20-18 vote.

The proposal, co-sponsored by Republican Senator Fred Dudley and Democratic Senator and President Pro Tempore Winston

"Bud" Gardner, would have replaced the waivable $2.50 fee assessed to students when they pay tuition each semester with a "positive" fee check-off in which students would donate the fee instead.

Rusty Payton, Dudley's legislative assistant, said the senator sponsored the amendment to the Senate implementing bill—which sets guidelines for the state budget—in part, because he thinks the current funding procedure is unfair.

"The rationale behind it is that Fred doesn't believe (in the) opt-out provision," Payton said Monday. "You should have to opt-in."

Payton added there may also be legal problems with the current system.

"There's (the) issue of whether the Board of Regents has the authority to let this happen," Payton added. "(And) there is still a discussion as to who actually certifies that petition."

But BOR spokesperson Pat

Riordan said the regents have the authority to approve the fee, and he added the BOR will continue to support FPIRG.

"The BOR has supported FPIRG and the means by which it raises its funds," Riordan said. "Our position is that the status quo is acceptable."

The FPIRG fee was implemented at Florida State University in 1981 by former President Bernie Sliger and the BOR after a majority of FSU students signed a petition in support of the fee. Every three years, each of the Florida PIRGs must get a majority of students to sign a petition in support of the fee in order to maintain it.

Hank Hernandez, vice chair of FPIRG's state board of directors and an FSU student, said the proposed amendment has not affected this year's petition drive, which began last week and has collected half the signatures it needs for next year's proposed fee of $3.50 a semester.

"What they're doing is separate

BEIRUT, Lebanon--Israelis and Arabs traded rocket and artillery fire Monday after a weekend of violence that killed 15 people, including the leader of the Muslim fundamentalist Hezbollah, but plans for the next round of Middle East peace talks remained on track despite the increased tension.

Surface-to-air missiles were fired from southern Lebanon into northern Israel overnight, and Israeli shells hit southern Muslim strongholds in apparent retaliation. Neither side reported injuries.

BALLBECK, Lebanon--Tens of thousands of mourners gathered Monday to pay tribute to Hezbollah leader Sayyed Abbas Musawi, who was killed in an attack by Israeli helicopters in the latest escalation of violence in the region.

The renewed violence in the region raised questions about the struggling Middle East peace process, but both Israel and its Arab neighbors indicated that they would be present when the next phase of the peace conference begins next week in Washington.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina--Intelligence files made public Monday said Josef Mengele, the fugitive Nazi "Angel of Death" held responsible for killing 400,000 Jews, kept a mistress in Paraguay who was an Israeli agent and survivor of a Nazi concentration camp.

The documents on Mengele, who is believed to have died in 1979, were among 10 pages of government dispatches and hundreds of press clippings released Monday that also showed the government knew of his whereabouts during his residence in Argentina from 1949 to August 1960, when he fled to Paraguay.

TOKYO--Japan's new ambassador to the United States,

Takakazu Kuriyama, said Monday that Tokyo and Washington are at a crossroads in their relationship and it is vital for them and the world they work together.

The 61-year-old diplomat, who joined the Foreign Ministry in 1954 and was posted to the Washington embassy in 1974, said while relations with the United States had become acrimonious recently, they remained essentially healthy.

WARSAW, Poland--Prime Minister Jan Olszewski vowed Monday to continue Poland's market-oriented policy and said his new economic plan will not negate agreements reached earlier with international organizations.

Olszewski, who released a 30-page document listing the new government's economic guidelines, accused the press of using leaks to distort them by indicating the government was departing from capitalism and breaking links with the world economy.

WASHINGTON--President Bush, battling a mounting protest vote favoring challenger Patrick Buchanan, arranged a series of last minute campaign broadcasts to New Hampshire Monday to drum up votes in the Republican primary Tuesday.

Bush's No. 1 surrogate, Barbara Bush, was campaigning in solo appearances in the Granite State Monday.

LOS ANGELES--The main parties in scores of civil lawsuits against jailed junk-bond financier Michael Milken have reached a tentative agreement to settle all of the suits for at least $1.3 billion, the Los Angeles Times reported Monday.

The huge settlement still requires approval of some parties involved in the litigation.

The tentative agreement was reached during marathon negotiations over the weekend in Houston, where U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack of New York is on vacation, sources told the Times.

TALLAHASSEE--A staff analyst for the Florida Senate said Monday rules governing lobbyists in the House and Senate are confusing and led to a controversy over payments made by the Republican party to two black women who testified about reapportionment.

Steve Kahn told the Senate Select Subcommittee on Rules he has sorted out what happened in January during testimony before Senate and House Reapportionment committees about plans to divide the state into congressional districts.

BAL HARBOUR--The president of the nation's largest labor federation denounced President's Bush's economic recovery plan as inadequate Monday and said the economy "needs beef."

"He's offering us sushi, freeze-dried sushi at that," said Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO.

Kirkland noted that when Bush accepted the Republican nomination four years ago, he promised to create 30 million new jobs but has only created 6,000.

FORT LAUDERDALE--The United States has spent more than $24 million intercepting, feeding and returning Haitian boat people since September, about $1,500 for each refugee fleeing the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere.

The $1,500 sum is more than four times the annual per capita income in Haiti, a country of 6.3 million people.

Readers respond to criticism of 'off our duffs' rally

Editor:

Regarding the editorial concerning the budget cut rally, I do agree many students attending the rally were unaware of actual statistics concerning the budget cuts and who were their representatives. But I strongly disagree that the whole rally looked like a "big fat joke." The purpose of this rally was so students could individually voice their concerns about education. It allowed students to tell their personal horror stories which have occurred because of the cuts. We must realize legislators already know the statistics but what they don't know is how it feels to have to sit on the floor in a crowded classroom, or to not be able to get a class in order to graduate, or to have to graduate a semester late. We must realize these personal stories have much more of an impact than do actual statistics. Although many students did not know actual numbers, the one thing all 3,000 students know is that their education is diminishing. They continue to pay more and receive less.

Lisa Griffin

Editor:

The Legislature is met each session with a core group of students, well-versed on the needs of their universities and the state's ability or inability given that year's budget, to meet these needs. These students have been orderly, informed, and educated on the day-to-day status of the budget with regard to education from the beginning to the end of each year's legislative session.

Yes, every year these students, usually student body presidents, vice presidents, and directors of student lobbying, have been joined by our universities' lobbyists and the Florida Student Association to speak in a professional setting about the plight of education in the arena of a shrinking budget.

I was one of those students, greeted by legislators year after year with a handshake and a I-can't-promise-you-anything grin, to be sent away with a wave goodbye and a sense of helplessness. Helplessness because being attuned to the political climate, knowing the limitations of our state's budget and being armed with testimonies about the struggle of my fellow students was never enough ammunition to bring into legislative offices and expect to be heard. Because make no mistake - in the eyes of legislators, non-voting, complacent students DO NOT COUNT!

So, while years of experience have led students and professional lobbyists to believe that a student rally and march to the Capitol were long overdue, it seems we could have saved ourselves a lot of trouble by consulting with the cynics at the Flambeau first. The editorial board could have warned us that if not every student knows the details surrounding legislation on Education, our words are worthless. They could have told us that it does not matter if you face overcrowded, undersupplied classrooms every day if you do not know your legislator by name. It does not matter if your little brother or sister will not attend your alma mater because they want degrees that are worth something if you are rude enough to tell Gov. Chiles you are disappointed when you see him. This is what commentaries in the Flambeau would have you believe. The radical stand-up-for-your-rights Flambeau would have you sit down and shut-up. You cannot make a difference.

Students - quit your pursuit of higher education! A more perfect source of wisdom lies superbly disguised as mediocrity and bias at the office of our local "newspaper."

D.D. Hornsby

Editor:

I cannot believe that the Flambeau has the audacity to insult the students of not just Florida State University, but of all nine state universities in our system. I don't know about all of the students who participated, but I am very disappointed by the way in which the Flambeau has reported the successful march on the Capitol. To suggest that students go to a bar to discuss the fate of higher education is not only a ludicrous idea but also irresponsible encouragement. This idea claims, along with all of the others you have suggested, that a rally has lesser value and no effect to our cause. I am not aware of any activists in the 60s sitting 'on their duffs' in bars. To compare the actions of 3,500 motivated students with the ranting of a disillusioned man whose infantile maneuvers mirror those which you advocate, is revolting. I will not be reading this editorial or others in your paper any longer for I refuse to patronize a pathetic attempt of mute journalism!

Kristen Eppers

Editor:

The articles presented in the Flambeau about the recent student rally are not only extremely degrading to students but I think the Flambeau is the one who needs to get a clue! It is ironic that the students received positive coverage for their efforts in the rally all over the state and even as far away as New York, yet in their own town, nothing positive has been said in the Flambeau. If students sit around and do nothing, they do not stand a chance! The legislators with whom I met at the Capitol were extremely responsive and encouraged us to keep up our motivation. Our efforts do not stop here. Handwritten letter drive from students to their legislators is now in progress. You are simply stating that students do not matter. When are you going to realize that we do?

Angie Dooley

Editor:

In response to Michael McCarthy's article, "Get on your duffs, not of em," I would like to comment on what a ridiculous idea it is.

The only possible way students are able to make their concerns heard by legislators is through a strong voice and activism. Unlike many other organizations, the students of this university system do not enjoy unlimited resources which would enable them to influence state legislators. All that McCarthy's proposition would do is compel a few, if any, legislators to leave Clyde's.

Secondly, I, and I hope other students are insulted and enraged that you had the audacity to compare our rally to that of Marshall Ledbetter's drug-induced break-in at the Capitol. Throughout the state, the protest received positive press and responses. However, the Flambeau sinks again to the level of trash journalism. What took place Feb. 4 was a positive first step in voicing our concern for higher education.

Scott Philips

Editor:

When 3,000 students marched to the Capitol Feb. 4 to speak up for their concerns, the media said, "That's nice." The legislators said, "Look at the cute little students." The students said, "We want what we deserve!"

Students are paying more than ever for their education and they want quality. So when the legislators and media say the students have "no clue" what is going on in politics, the rational response is: Students do not need to know politics to know they are paying more for a poor education.

The students that marched Tuesday may not have a copy of the latest legislative calendar but are concerned with an equally important issue. While the student vote may not be strong enough to threaten the legislators, the idea of a poorly educated population should. The students are asking for a quality education, something the legislators and the Flambeau should understand.

Jill Lefkowitz

Editor:

I would be very interested to find out exactly who it was that decided Mary Jane Ryals' little attempt at satire regarding the "Off our duffs" rally was a true commentary.

The rally on Feb. 4 was the largest mobilization of students the state of Florida has seen since the early '70s, and I am proud to have been a part of its planning. I have talked with many students who spoke with their legislators and got to see just how ambivalent towards education our elected officials truly are. Does Ms. Ryals actually believe Tracy Newman was out of line to ask that people not get arrested and be somewhat civil? Perhaps Ms. Ryals thinks storming the Capitol with sticks in hand, shouting obscenities would get more accomplished. I think not.

And as far as criticizing the students for being uninformed, those of us who worked on the rally went through the dorms, to fraternities, sororities and campus organizations, and spoke with students in between classes telling them how past cuts have hurt us and the impact future cuts will have. Rather than spend time saying we didn't do enough, why not utilize your position as a "student read newspaper" to provide comprehensive information about the state of education and work with us?

Hearings in 'Dr. Death' trial begin

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

ROCHESTER HILLS, Mich.—A court order forbidding Dr. Jack Kevorkian from using his "suicide machine" was ruled out as evidence Monday in the euthanasia advocate's preliminary hearing for murder.

The retired pathologist, who calls himself "Dr. Death," was indicted on two counts of open murder for helping two chronically ill women commit suicide last October in Oakland County. Medical experts have testified the women were not terminally ill.

When the 3-day-old hearing that began Friday is over, District Judge James Sheehy will decide whether there is sufficient evidence to order Kevorkian to stand trial in circuit court. His decision could come later Monday.

Sheehy refused to let a clerk for Oakland County Circuit Court Alice Gilbert testify about Gilbert's injunction against Kevorkian using his suicide machine. That ruling came after Kevorkian helped Janet Adkins, an Alzheimer's patient from Oregon, commit suicide in June 1990.

First-degree murder charges against Kevorkian were thrown out in the Adkins case in 1991 by another district judge who said Michigan law does not forbid physician-assisted suicides.

On Feb. 3, an Oakland County grand jury indicted Kevorkian in the Oct. 23 deaths of Sherry Miller, 43, of Roseville, and Marjorie Wantz, 58, in a cabin in the Bald Mountain Recreation Area, about 40 miles north of Detroit.

Kevorkian is charged with open murder—which would allow a jury to return one of a range of verdicts, from first-degree murder to manslaughter—and one count of delivering dangerous drugs.

Miller, a multiple sclerosis victim confined to a wheelchair, inhaled carbon monoxide from a mask placed over her face. Wantz, who suffered from chronic pelvic pain, died using a device similar to the one used by Adkins that enabled her to admit poison into her veins.

Dr. Thomas J. DeKornfeld, professor of anesthesiology at the University of Michigan Hospital, testified Monday the type and amount of drug used by Wantz was fatal.

Kevorkian's lead attorney, Geoffrey Feiger, challenged DeKornfeld's testimony by getting him to admit that while he is an expert on drugs, he is not an expert in doctor-assisted suicides and is not familiar with "obituary," a branch of medicine coined by Kevorkian.

Prosecutors also tried to call two psychiatrists who had treated Wantz at Sinai Hospital in Detroit, but questions about the patient-doctor privilege were still being discussed when the hearing was recessed.

Dr. Ljubisa Dragovic, Oakland County's medical examiner, testified Saturday that the deaths of Wantz and Miller were homicides, not suicides.

Dragovic said Wantz' pain was psychosomatic and that Miller was "no more terminal than Magic Johnson," the professional basketball player who recently retired after announcing he had contracted the HIV virus.

Lick said both Pitts and Gilmer have been very important to FSU in the past, but with the recent organizational shifts he has made, some changes are to be expected.

Under Lick's reorganization, the vice president of University Advancement would take on responsibility for governmental relations.

"I have no experience in, or desire to pursue that aspect of the job," Pitts said Sunday.

Pitts will continue as chair of the University Center Building Committee, a group that has raised money for the expansion of Doak Campbell Stadium.

Pitts has been at FSU since 1968, achieving tenure and rising through the College of Business ranks to become an associate dean there in 1980. He is also a past president of the Faculty Senate.

Pitts has been a vice president since 1989, overseeing the FSU Foundation, the Alumni Association and the Seminole Boosters.

Pitts will likely suffer a pay cut with his return to teaching. His administrative salary is $123,600 annually. Tenured faculty cannot be denied a position within their school, but their maximum pay is determined by a formula which considers the salary range of other professors in the school.

Without special Board of Regents approval, the maximum Pitts can receive as a business professor is $87,275 for the nine-month academic year.

Gilmer has been at FSU since 1978 in a variety of positions. Although he has taught in the school of communications, he is not tenured, and so is not guaranteed a job at FSU. His current salary is $74,494.

Lick would not give a specific reason for his decision not to renew Gilmer's contract.

"With what we had planned, we felt we needed someone different," Lick allowed.

Lick said he does not have replacements in mind for either position, and added the university will go through a usual search procedure to fill the spots.

Lick said future personnel changes are likely to be shifts within the administration, not departures from it, adding that most of the shifting should be over within the next two months.

third the height of the Capitol is less than a mile from the Westinghouse site.

Among other effects, prevailing winds would send methane odors across the campus nine or 10 months of the year.

Regent Jon Moyle asked a host of technical questions in an attempt to determine if the landfill's presence could cause problems for the university in the future.

"I don't know what the answer is," Moyle said during a break in the meeting. "You can only go so far in asking questions, then you have to rely on what people tell you."

Cerio wasn't convinced by Westinghouse executives that the landfill would not create difficulties down the road.

"The environmental considerations of having a landfill are very serious," Cerio said.

But not every regent was convinced the land use problems at Alico were less serious than the landfill at Westinghouse.

"I'm convinced that we're going to see a long, drawn out process over the land use and environmental issues," Regent Robert Dressler said after voting against accepting Alico's offer.

Timothy M. Cerio was one of the regents who voted for the Alico site.

"I felt that Alico had the better package put together," said Cerio, from the University of Florida.

Cerio pointed out the rural features of the land owned by Alico, which includes a pristine lake, as one of the reasons he voted the way he did.

But the area's beauty is where some of the trouble brewed.

Alico has filed its Development of Regional Impact papers with the Department of Community Affairs but the DCA hasn't approved them yet. The DRI forces builders to take into consideration the results of development—from environmental impact to having more cars on the road.

Miss FSU Pageant gets underway tonight

BY CATHY AREU
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Twenty female Florida State University students will don swimsuits and evening gowns tonight and tomorrow night in the 1992 Miss FSU Pageant, and although a similar pageant at the University of Florida was met with controversy last month, organizers at FSU aren't expecting any protest.

The FSU Pageant is an official preliminary to the Miss Florida and Miss America pageants but is not an official university activity because FSU does not directly sponsor it, said Jon Dalton, vice president of student affairs.

The event can carry the university's name in its title because the student group sponsoring it, Kappa Alpha Order fraternity, is directly related to FSU, Dalton added.

The FSU Pageant was terminated in the 1970s and later brought back in 1986, according to Michael Bell, executive director of the pageant from 1988 to 1990. In the two years he was involved in the pageant, Bell said there was never any controversy.

Marlon Champion, president of Kappa Alpha, said Monday the fraternity has raised all of the money for this year's pageant with help from individual sponsors and donations from local businesses.

The FSU music department helped provide the event's location on campus at Ruby Diamond Auditorium, and the opera department assisted in its production, said Ryan Grovjohn, the KA member in charge of the pageant.

Even though the pageant includes evening gown and swimsuit competitions, Grovjohn said, it is not a beauty pageant but a scholarship pageant.

The winner will receive $1,000 in FSU scholarship money and the second, third and fourth place runners-up will win $500, $400, $200 and $150 scholarships, respectively.

But Jean Bryant from FSU's Women's Studies department said there are other ways for women to earn scholarships.

"We would prefer women to achieve scholarships through other means than forms that emphasize physical appearance," Bryant said. "And, in light of excessive media attention to sexual appeal and physical attributes, (they) tend to make women into objects."

Champion said the contestants will be wearing one-piece swimsuits during one of the competitions. The interview and talent portion of the pageant carry more weight than the swimsuit competition's 15 percent of the final score, added Grovjohn.

The Miss University of Florida pageant, held the third week of January, met protests from about 15 to 20 people calling the pageant degrading to women.

"The 40 degree weather had a chilling effect on the protest because no one wanted to stand around long enough to hear what the protestors had to say," said Carl Brown, member of the Florida Blue Key student organization sponsoring the UF pageant.

Brown said Monday that the protestors, who were required to notify the campus police of their demonstration, had no effect on the pageant.

Jack Handley, spokesperson for the FSU Police Department had not been notified of a protest as of Monday.

The Miss FSU Pageant preliminaries are tonight at 7:30 and the finals are Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Ruby Diamond Auditorium.

from what we're doing," Hernandez said.

But Hernandez added that Dudley's and Gardner's efforts at the Capitol are aimed at dismantling PIRG, which has lobbied the Legislature on controversial issues such as off-shore oil drilling and the bottle bill, saying the group would not be able to survive if it relied on donations.

"FPIRG is the program and fee," Hernandez said. "Without the fee, you don't have PIRG."

According to Hernandez, a donation system wouldn't provide a stable enough revenue base for the group to be effective.

"A self-tax works," he added. "Twenty-five to one-hundred dollar donations aren't reasonable for students. (Students) can't afford it. That's how groups like Sierra Club do it. We do it with a $2.50 fee. This way it gets more people involved."

Hernandez added that the main issue is whether students should have the right to democratically assess themselves a fee.

"If the majority of students on campus say they want to assess the fee they should be able to, period," Hernandez said.

Riordan said the Board supports FPIRG even though it is an inherently controversial organization.

"What FPIRG does gets it into trouble because it's a whistle-blowing, trouble-making organization by nature, which is good," Riordan said. "It makes people sometimes feel uncomfortable. FPIRG will probably never become totally accepted."

But Lisa Rice, Gardner's legislative assistant, said the fight to change the fee procedure is not over and the education committee may hear the fee proposal next week.

"It depends on whether we can get it on the agenda," Rice said.

Engineer's Week will include much more than math and measurements

BY MATT GRIMISON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Sex, race and robots will be among the subjects of conversation during this week's Engineer's Week, a week-long event hosted by the Florida A&M/Florida State University College of Engineering.

Engineers in today's world must deal with more than mathematics and measurements, according to Jackie Breiter, chair of the Engineer's Week committee. That's why the week's agenda includes a forum on social issues such as interracial relationships and gender equality in the work world.

"The point I would like people to get out of the week is that issues facing engineers are not all mechanical," Breiter said Monday. "There are social and cultural issues we must face."

There will be a panel discussion today with nine practicing engineers on just that topic.

"An example of the discussion is if you have a female boss and male workers, or blacks and whites working together and also, when you have a foreigner working in an office with other people," Breiter said.

The discussion will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the FAMU/FSU College of Engineering at Innovation Park, where all of this week's events take place.

The events are part of national Engineer's Week, which is sponsored by the National Society for Professional Engineers.

FAMU/FSU's Engineer's Week kicked off Monday with an informal luncheon, and will carry on through Friday with a variety of activities ranging from a job expo to a barbecue.

The point of this year's Engineer's Week, Breiter said, is to arouse interest in the College of Engineering among the local community and to bring students and faculty closer together.

"(The week) is designed to recognize engineers and raise awareness about engineering," Breiter said.

Students can learn about the engineering job market Wednesday during the Corporate Expo. Representatives from 25 large companies will have booths set up at the school offering employment information, said Michael Gordon, an engineering student and member of the Engineer's Week committee.

The expo will take place in two sessions. The first one is from 9 a.m. until noon, and the second is from 1 to 4 p.m.

Ten professional societies with student chapters at the college will run booths from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday to hand out information on their organizations and recruit new members. But they'll also provide fun and entertainment.

"There will be games and activities to catch people's attention," Breiter said. "A student-faculty Jeopardy game is planned, and there will be robots and electronics displays." The week of activities comes to a close Friday with a barbecue and field day. A volleyball tournament for the clubs is planned, as well as an obstacle course, which Breiter said would be very sloppy. The events begin at noon.

The final activity of the week is a banquet on Friday night, sponsored by the American Society of Engineers, to be held at the Florida State Conference Center. Breiter expects 200 people to attend.

All Engineer's Week events be held in the FAMU/FSU College of Engineering building located at 2525 Pottsdamer St. All are open to the public and are free of charge.

Murder suspect gives up

A 16-year-old youth surrendered to police Sunday evening for the Saturday night shooting death of Lincoln High School student Carey Morton, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Monday.

David Lee Jones, of Miccosukee, was charged with second-degree murder, shooting into an occupied vehicle and carrying a concealed firearm. He will be tried as an adult.

Morton and the driver of the car she was riding in stopped at the Suwannee Swifty at Sutor Road last Saturday evening after leaving a school function. At about 9:10 p.m., witnesses reported hearing an argument between a group of people in a red car parked at the store's gas pumps and the car Morton was in.

After the argument, Morton and her friend left the store's parking lot. Before they pulled onto Apalachee Parkway, two people ran up to their car and fired several shots into it, fatally wounding Morton.

After spending Sunday night at the Leon County Juvenile Detention Center, Jones was moved to the Leon County Jail at 2 p.m. Monday.

When the case is presented to the Leon County

Grand Jury at a later date, the charge may be upgraded to first-degree murder, according to Garrett.

Manager suspected as store robber

A Suwannee Swifty manager who reported he had been robbed while making a night deposit for the store was arrested Sunday night when police determined he had stolen the money himself, Garrett said.

Reginald Leonard Hooker, 31, of 2014 Hillsborough St., reported to police that at 11:22 p.m. Sunday he was making a night deposit at the Barnett Bank on North Monroe Street when he was robbed of the store's money. In actuality, according to police, he and two accomplices were the thieves.

Isaac Pierce, 25, of 2030 Bellevue Way, played the part of the robber. A clerk who works at another Suwannee Swifty was also an accomplice.

Hooker was charged with grand theft and filing a false report. Pierce was arrested on an outstanding warrant for violation of probation on a possession of cocaine charge and will be charged with grand theft.

Both men are being held at the Leon County Jail. Officials with the jail were unable to provide bond information for either man Monday evening.

The third participant's name is not being disclosed because he has not yet been arrested.

Dinosaur Jr. leads the grunge in tonight's sonic assault on the Moon

BY CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

If crunchy feedback-driven guitar served over a melancholy melody, fixed with a punchy danceable rhythm rising to the emotional pitch of the music sounds like a satisfying musical meal, then feast your ears on Dinosaur Jr. tonight at the Moon.

Since their debut in 1985 Dinosaur Jr. has been lauded as a seminal alternative band whose heavy melodic grunge has had an influence on many bands, including Buffalo Tom and SverreDriver.

Dinosaur Jr. came to Tallahassee two years ago, putting on an electric show at the Club Downunder to support their SST release, Bug. Nowadays, Dinosaur Jr. just stands for lead singer and guitarist J. Mascis. Since signing with Sire records, Mascis has jettisoned the other members of the band and written, performed and produced almost every track by himself on his latest album, Green Mind.

Mascis' voice is a Neil Young-ish rasp that somehow complements both the twisted melody and throbbing grunge. His songs resound with feelings of alienation and thwarted desire but he addresses them in an ironic, honest manner that avoids self-absorption. An example is the band's single "Repulsion": The world drips down like gravy, with thoughts of love so hazy, and everyone's ideal becomes repulsion. I tried to wake up, I tried to break it open, it's not what I felt like

Turn to DINOSAUR, page 11

What the...! Why, this isn't Dinosaur Jr. at all. It's my bloody valentine, a Dublin-based quartet that'll be opening up tonight's festivities at the Moon, along with all-female SubPop band Babes in Toyland. Could you possibly have anything better to do?

Weird bugs make a creepy Lunch

BY CLARK PERRY

FLAMBEAU WRITER

David Cronenberg loves freaked-out artists. In the Canadian director's 1980 sci-fi thriller Scanners, one of the minor characters is a telepath whose psychic ability to listen to the thoughts of others almost drives him crazy—until he finds release in creating a bizarre sculpture.

Cronenberg's last movie, Dead Ringers, contained another sculptor who displayed no qualms about helping a mentally ill gynecologist construct tools for the examination of mutant women. "Mutant women," the artist quips thoughtfully, "That'd be a good theme for a show."

Now, with Naked Lunch, an adaptation of the infamous 1959 novel by William S. Burroughs, Cronenberg populates the big screen with a handful of freaked out creative souls, and the results are spectacular, disturbing and unforgettable.

Naked Lunch, along with Thomas Pynchon's apocalyptic Gravity's Rainbow, is surely one of the most widely discussed unread novels in contemporary American literature. To enter its stream of consciousness prose is a difficult task, and not many make it through to the final page. That's the way Burroughs wanted it. Naked Lunch, chock full of surrealistic imagery involving drugs, sexual deviation and violence, is about subversion, and in this case the content dictated the form. A truly "subversive" novel, Burroughs reasoned, cannot contain a linear plot or realistic, well-drawn characters—it can't be a "good read."

Those who have struggled through Naked Lunch acknowledge that the book is unfilmable. Cronenberg clears this major obstacle by choosing not to film the book at all. Instead he opts to tell the story of how Burroughs became a writer, using multiple elements from Naked Lunch to illuminate this strange and twisted journey.

Burroughs' early association with the Beat movement certainly provided him with plenty of literary motivation, but there is one notable, horrible event that seemed to push the meandering Burroughs full-tilt toward writing: the death of his lover Joan Vollmer in 1951, the victim of a shooting accident in which Burroughs pulled the trigger.

Several books (including Ted Morgan's definitive 1988 Burroughs biography, Literary Outlaw) posit the theory that Burroughs might never have become a writer had it not been for this shattering event. After the tragedy, Burroughs muddled around a while in Mexico and ended up in Tangiers, shooting up drugs and writing Naked Lunch.

Using this as a loose theme, Cronenberg plunges us in to the dark and musty world of Bill Lee, quietly played by Peter Weller (Robocop). Lee is a struggling writer working as an exterminator to support himself. His wife Joan (Judy Davis) likes to shoot up Lee's bug powder, which is very addictive. She's also addicted to men, and when Lee catches her with someone else, he jokes and—in a scene that closely mirrors reality—attempts to shoot a glass from atop her head. Joan dies and Bill is suddenly on the lam, hallucinating and headed for a mysterious Middle Eastern city called Interzone.

Lee meets several otherworldly "case officers" and "controllers" who inform him of a shady organization known as Interzone, Inc. Lee is ordered to infiltrate Interzone and write "reports"—actually sections of Naked Lunch, many of which Burroughs has no memory of composing.

Cronenberg seems right at home in this conspiracy-ridden universe where typewriters change into huge cockroaches and speak through exaggerated sphincters beneath their wings. It's a bazaar of the bizarre, all tied into a pebbly-green race of aliens known as Mugwumps, who dispense a highly powerful drug in their semen, which is sucked and squeezed from several protuberances on their skulls.

As is typical with Cronenberg's films, the imagery is visceral and disturbing—watch Lee type on his bug, for example. We hear the insectile clatter of the keystrokes while we see Lee's fingers massage the creature's throbbing carapace.

The cast, Weller in particular, seems born for this movie. Thin and gaunt, he looks just like the young Burroughs—a sad skull wrapped tightly in parchment. The ever-watchable Judy Davis (Impromptu) gets a juicy dual role as Joan, Lee's wife, and another Joan, based loosely on writer Jane Bowles. Also notable in this mad dream frenzy of a movie are actors Roy Scheider, Ian Holm and Julian Sands.

The technique of Naked Lunch mirrors that of an earlier Cronenberg movie, Videodrome (1983), about the addictive and voyeuristic effects of TV. Videodrome also featured a main character whose descent into a hallucinatory world is the main story. But it was criticized for never pulling out of the protagonist's head and showing the audience what was going on "meanwhile" in the real world.

Naked Lunch is a similar trip into the weird, but here the real world is inside the character's head, not outside. The many layerings and literary road signs should be discernible to anyone who has at least a rudimentary knowledge of Burroughs' life and work.

This is a movie born from the meeting of two minds. Burroughs provided the rough material in his life and writing. Cronenberg, one of the best filmmakers working today, has shaped and sculpted those pieces into one of the most original movies to hit the screen in a long time.

Check your expectations at Finales' door

BY DARRYL DOCKSTADER

FLAMBEAU WRITER

Before conjuring up any expectations for this evening's Florida State University English Department poetry readings, beware: Bill Snyder and Melanie Abrams will be reading short fiction that thwarts creating expectations and stereotypes.

Snyder graduated from Florida Atlantic University with a B.A. in English Education in 1969 and didn't return to academia until 1988, when he began his Master's degree program in Creative Writing at Temple. He is currently working on his PhD in English/creative writing at Florida State.

In the interim, Snyder worked as a performance artist. He spent six years as a musician, after which he created his own one-man clown act, which ran for eight years. It wasn't, however, the standard tomato-nosed, paste-faced Ringling Brothers version.

"It was more like a vaudeville variety show done by one person," Snyder says. "I juggled, did plate-spinning, flea circus, puppets, a levitating swami act, and all kinds of stuff."

Snyder claims no father-author, although he admits to the influence of magical realism (Borges, Llosa, Marquez) on his writing. Tonight he'll read what he terms a winter story. It is sort of (emphasis on sort of) a magical realist piece about two children and the winter—he didn't want to ruin the story and revealed nothing more about it.

"I hate to make predictions or categorize my stuff because it causes expectations," Snyder said.

If Snyder averts expectations and stereotypes, then Abrams equals Snyder squared. Consider her personally compiled music tapes—typical juxtapositions of musical artists include John Galway to John Denver to Vangelis to Sweet Honey in the Rock to John Lucian (even K-Tel would be at odds to label and market such a tape).

Abrams says that "John Denver's Country Road segues wonderfully into Vangelis' Heaven and Hell... Juxtapositions are important."

One would not normally expect such a transition between songs, yet this is exactly the way events in life can be: unexpected and strangely coordinated. In line with this ideology, Abrams bases her stories on a "what if" proposition.

"What if things aren't the way they seem? What happens is that whatever premise I start with, I generally wind up with something entirely different. I'm trying hard not to create stereotypes... everything is more complex than you think."

A Master's student in rhetoric and composition) she says she "defected from creative writing") at Florida State, Abrams generally writes poetry, but is exploring her "what if" this evening in short fiction. She'll be reading a love story about a woman whose marriage is on the rocks; but then, what if it's not this at all, but much more? Be sure to come and find out.

All are invited to sift through the magic and the real, the expected and the unexpected, and great beer prices tonight at 8 at the Grand Finale.

Dinosaur from page 8

Well, I'll just keep on hoping it's hard to face it, still waiting, still alone. The arrangements have a pulse that pulls and tugs for an effect that is quite compelling in combination with the fuzzed lead guitar. Green Mind adds some new elements, including an acoustic number. Murph, drummer on the first three albums, did help out on three tracks of the new album and apparently is touring with Mascis again. No word on the bassist, but if you're going to see Dinosaur Jr., you're going to see Mascis perform, so it's no big deal.

Eclectic in their stylings, Dinosaur Jr.'s songs have a thickness that is more than just a lot of noise. It's a sound that grows on you like a ChiaPet. See it live. Experience the grunge.

Opening for Dinosaur Jr. are Babes in Toyland and My Bloody Valentine, two up and coming guitar bands from the heavy side of the tracks. My Bloody Valentine plays lots of thick mutated atmospheric guitar that'll give your ears a good buzz. Live, they've been compared with a jet taking off.

Babes in Toyland is one of two excellent female bands on Sub Pop records (the other is L7). Their sound is anchored to a big bass line owing to early metal bands like Black Sabbath, with shriek guitar and punk sensibilities. The lead's voice is a throaty growl punctuating the music. Sort of a meaner version of Fetchin Bones.

Dinosaur Jr. with opening acts My Bloody Valentine and Babes in Toyland are at the Moon tonight. The doors open at 9 p.m. Admission is free for FSU students, $8 at the door.

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An amorous romantic partner and an opportunity to travel will make the coming months an exciting time for you. Be careful not to lose sight of your long-term business or financial goals. It is never too late to develop good work habits or learn new skills. Save your money this summer so that you can enroll in a special workshop or class next fall. Put work before pleasure when the winter holidays approach.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: editor Helen Gurley Brown, actors Matt Dillon and George Kennedy, actress Cybill Shepherd.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The idea that "bigger is always better" has been discredited. Remain true to your high ideals. More and more people are coming to share your views. Work up a healthy sweat by exercising.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The emphasis is on protecting your hard-earned funds. Your mate will cooperate with any well-thought-out plan. Career progress depends on your ability to move quickly when opportunity knocks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Staying put could prove more profitable than accepting a new job offer. Romance is fulfilling. Forget old grievances if you want to restore harmony within the family circle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Remain patient even when a project seems to be stalled. Trying to rush things would be a mistake. Postpone travel if you can. Consolidate recent gains.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Short trips can produce excellent results. Take a tip from a co-worker and you will find your way through a financial maze. Refuse to be distracted from completing important deadline.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not let a casual relationship jeopardize your career. Compartmentalize your personal and professional lives. Financial experts can help you make the most of what you have.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lay the foundation for long-term financial security. A conversation with a close friend is a real confidence-builder. In romance, take your cue from your partner. Avoid pressing for an immediate commitment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Play your cards dawningly and you will win every hand. Planetary blessings come in a downpour! Hard work and patience will pay rich dividends. Be persistent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 21-Dec. 22): Go ahead and ask an influential friend for help. People in positions of power can furnish valuable employment leads. A confident, good-humored approach will let you get your foot in the door.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow the path indicated by recent events. Success beckons! Your sense of humor serves you well so long as you do not get carried away. Avoid telling jokes that could cause offense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Duty comes first. Do what must be done even if you would prefer to look the other way. New faces and places will make your evening memorable. Dress to impress those who count.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Today brings good news regarding settlement of a claim or legacy. Certain delays or complications may remain. Keep your nose to the grindstone until you have completed vital tasks.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are friendly, honest and eager to improve themselves. Their easygoing manner makes them popular with people from all backgrounds. Although they have lots of school pals, they probably will not do well in subjects that do not interest them. Give these Aquarians an assignment that captures their imagination, however, and they will not rest until it is completed. Their persistence will amaze anyone who has mistaken their laid-back manner for laziness!

Rattlers earn share of MEAC top spot

BY PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

Hard to believe, but Florida A&M holds half of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference lead.

It comes thanks to an awkward 90-81 win Monday night over third-place Delaware State and, doubly thanks, to first-place Howard's 61-59 loss to South Carolina State, also Monday.

The Rattlers, a preseason favorite in the league, did last night what it's done to make a late season surge for the title—they let their star front line take care of business.

"I thought (DeLon) Turner, (Kelvin) Daniels and (Reggie) Finney were great," FAMU coach Willie Booker said.

Booker's speaking of FAMU's center and two forwards who ripped Delaware State for 55 combined points. Turner led the way with 22.

"Turner is just incredible," DSU coach Jeff Jones said. "He's so strong inside."

The 250-pound-plus Turner literally pounded his way for nearly all his points and 10 rebounds. Meanwhile, it was Finney who spirited the Rattlers in the second half when he scored 13 of his 15 points.

Finney woke up from a first half cold spell.

"I just wasn't feeling it," he said. "I guess I had to warm up."

And it was Daniels who provided nine of his 18 points in the last five minutes, hitting two important free throws with :36 left to give FAMU an 86-81 lead and putting DSU into desperation.

FAMU is now 13-12 overall and tied with Howard at 10-4 for the top spot in the conference. The Hornets fall to 11-14 and 8-6 in the league.

Although the Rattlers were around the middle of the MEAC pack at mid-season, Jones and the rest of the league knew FAMU was one of the top teams.

"They have some of the best talent. It just took them some time to put it together," Jones said.

And as for losing to FAMU: "That was a good game. I don't feel bad after those," Jones said.

Seminoles suffer shocker to Wake

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

The team that hadn't won an Atlantic Coast Conference game since a year ago last Sunday came to Tully Gym Monday night and surprised the Florida State Lady Seminoles with a 67-64 upset.

Wake Forest (10-13, 1-11) shot 63 percent from behind the three-point line and the foul line to surprise the Seminoles (13-9, 8-8) who were down by seven at the half but led by as many as 10 points in the second half.

"As a team we never got on track, we weren't mentally prepared," said FSU guard Danielle Ryan, whose off-balance three-pointer at the buzzer rolled just off the rim. "We felt that if we just showed up, we'd win, but we played in spurts and slumps all night."

Scoring a school record nine three-pointers, the Demon Deacons paced the offensive output of the night even though FSU outscored them 36-32 in the closing half. Point guard Nicole Levesque hit 5-of-6 from the far reaches of the court and half her shots from two-point range. The 5-foot-4 sophomore also made 5-of-7 freethrows, including four key freebies in the closing minutes to total 26 points. Wake Forest Coach Joe Sanchez called his play-caller one of the best in the ACC.

"We went with a guard oriented situation for the game and it paid off with our quickness on the press and our ability to win it with a perimeter game offensively," Sanchez said. "Nicole beat FSU's press all by herself—she handled three people in the backcourt and we cleared out a lot on passes to go backdoor."

The Seminoles, who closed out their conference play with an 8-8 mark, probably lost all chance of being seeded high enough in the post-season NCAA Tournament to get a home playoff game, according to FSU Coach Marynell Meadors.

"This loss really hurts. As a result of tonight we'll have to travel to play the NCAA tournament," said Meadors. "Our number one mistake was coming out here not ready to play, and we ended up adjusting to their game all night."

Rattlerettes sting Lady Hornets

BY TY SIMPSON
STAFF WRITER

A win is a win is a win is a win.

Despite turning the ball over 27 times and playing a game so sloppy that the coach stopped giving instructions, the Florida A&M Rattlerettes (8-14) snuck by the equally self-destructive Delaware State Lady Hornets (9-15) 86-84 Monday night in Gaither Gym.

"Tonight we did not have good chemistry on the floor," Rattlerette coach Claudette Farmer said. "I sat back at one point and said we were going to stop giving instructions and see how they did as a unit."

On top of the turnovers, Rattlerettes' 6-2 center Polly Innerarity and 6-1 forward Sherrall Bass were out rebounded by 5-10 Shervon Hunter for DSU. Hunter had twelve rebounds, while the FAMU duo combined for only eight.

The Rattlerettes were out rebounded 32-22 in the game.

"We had mental lapses tonight in that department," Farmer said. "The balls were falling right in front of us and we just weren't alert."

Bass led FAMU with a season high 30 points.

Freshman guard Natalie White did the job defensively for the Rattlerettes with 10 steals. FAMU forced 30 turnovers

When the rain comes . . .

. . . they run and hide their heads, don't they. A lot of people in Tallahassee were certainly doing that Wednesday, although it really wasn't all that bad. Mmmm, but then again, the wheel of this truck in a parking lot on Gaines Street and the intramural fields at Florida State University indicate it was no sprinkle, either. Oh well, spring's coming. ## 'Reality budget' is bomb waiting to explode on Florida's universities

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

Tick-tock. Tick-tock.

The sound reverberating from the state Capitol to university campuses could just be the passing of time, or it could be more sinister.

Perhaps it's a time bomb.

Little has changed since the House and Senate each passed a version of the so-called "reality" budget last week, a budget for 1992-93 that attempts to run the state without raising more revenue, education officials said Tuesday.

But now those concerned about the plight of education in Florida must wait for the next step to be taken by a legislative conference committee appointed Tuesday afternoon that will iron out differences in the budgets.

"It's up in the air," Steve Edwards, dean of the faculties at Florida State University, said Tuesday.

However you slice it, the current versions of the reality budget don't look good for anyone in the university system.

"The reality budget is not in anybody's best interest," FSU President Dale Lick said. "It's a loser. It's a loser for us. It's a loser for virtually every sector of society."

The immediate losers are professors, who saw a small 3 percent pay raise for Feb. 15 taken away when Gov. Lawton Chiles approved its elimination last week from this year's supplemental budget.

Especially hurt are professors who will miss out on a larger pay raise for being promoted and equity adjustments that would have sought to increase the salaries of the poorest paid professors, according to Kris Anderson, statewide president of United Faculty of Florida.

"For some people, it's a substantial raise," Anderson said.

Buchanan grabs 44 percent of GOP vote in New Hampshire; Tsongas tops Dems

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

CONCORD, N.H.—Conservative Patrick Buchanan struck a stunning blow to President Bush's campaign in New Hampshire's primary Tuesday while former Sen. Paul Tsongas held the lead over Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton in the Democratic battle.

Bush was heading to victory in the nation's first primary but Buchanan, the political commentator who was making his first run for elected office, was pulling more than 40 percent of the vote from a sitting president who a year ago had approval ratings above 90 percent.

Bush issued a statement through his press office at the White House saying, "I think the opponents on both sides reaped the harvest of discontent with the pace of New Hampshire's economy. I understand the message of dissatisfaction."

Tsongas, for most of the past year the only Democrat willing to challenge Bush, came out of nowhere to take the lead in the state that neighbors his home of Massachusetts.

Clinton, once ahead in the polls before questions about his past surfaced, was running a stronger second than he did in late pre-primary polls and he declared that his showing made him "the comeback kid."

With 89 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 74,705 or 58.5 percent to Buchanan's 53,094 or 41.5 percent.

For the Democrats, Tsongas had 43,427 votes or 35.8 percent; Clinton, 33,010 or 27.2 percent; Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska 14,714 or 12.1 percent; Tom Harkin of Iowa, 14,061 or 11.6 percent; and former California Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown Jr., 11,342 or 9.4 percent. Returns for a write-in for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo showed him with less than 4 percent.

For Kerrey and Harkin the final outcome in their battle for third would be important because they hoped the one in third would become the choice of the Democrats should the top two be considered unelectable.

Bush won the New Hampshire primary four years ago and that momentum propelled him eventually to the White House. But the strong showing from the right by a political newcomer was sure to force changes in his campaign strategy in the coming weeks.

"Clearly, we'd hoped to do better," said a White House official speaking on background. "In the long run, I don't think it is going to be disastrous for Bush, but it means the Buchanan candidacy will be with us longer than we had hoped."

Bush in his statement said, "This election was far closer than many had predicted," but "I am delighted to have won."

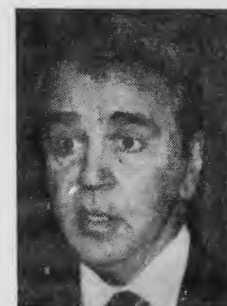

Bush refused to even mention Buchanan by name during the New Hampshire primary, and made no mention of him in his post-election statement either.

Clinton appeared before a rousing rally and gave his wife Hillary a big hug to the delight of the crowd. Clinton saw his showing as a vindication after weeks of being hampered by allegations of past marital infidelity and evasion of the Vietnam War draft.

"I think we know enough to say with some certainty that New Hampshire tonight has made Bill Clinton the comeback kid," he said.

"I just can't wait to take this campaign across the country. I cannot

KEEPING IT A SECRET WON'T MAKE IT GO AWAY

Sexual assault is one of the most traumatic events that can occur in a woman's life. She may choose to tell no one because the reality is simply too horrible to share. Unfortunately, keeping sexual assault a secret means that she probably will not receive the care and support that might help her recover.

If you or someone you know is the survivor of a sexual assault or attempted sexual assault, help is available. Confidential reporting and referral services are provided by the Office of Women's Concerns, Dean of Students Department and the members of the Sexual Assault Task Group. Two support groups for survivors also are available at no cost to FSU students.

Please call today, 644-2428.

AFRICAN-AMERICAN GRADUATE STUDENTS

Applications for the 1992-93 Delores A. Auzenne Fellowship for African-American students enrolled or accepted for study in a graduate, specialist or professional degree program are now available.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens, or permanent residents eligible for state financial aid. Priority consideration will be given to applicants pursuing graduate degrees in disciplines in which African-Americans are underrepresented. The fellowship carries a $5,000 stipend for the academic year which is distributed in equal increments at the beginning of the fall and spring semesters.

Applications and additional information are available from the Office of University Human Resources, 301 Westcott, 644-5283. Applications must be submitted no later than 4:30 p.m. April 1, to the Delores A. Auzenne Fellowship Selection Committee, Florida State University, c/o Office of University Human Resources, R-11, 301 Westcott, Tallahassee, FL 32306-1049.

Jealous ex-husband

A woman and a male friend were terrorized Tuesday morning by the woman's ex-husband, who broke into her home and battered the two of them, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Tuesday.

Michael Tyrone McGriff, 28, of Georgia, went to his ex-wife's house at 1105 Ridge Road to talk to her. The woman, Patricia Jackson, refused to talk to him and asked McGriff to leave. McGriff heard a man's voice in the house and broke in through a window.

Jackson's visitor, Rodney Johnson, 22, was chased from the house by the suspect. Johnson got in his car to leave but couldn't get the vehicle started. The suspect then smashed out Johnson's car window and tried to pull him out through the broken window.

While this was going on, Jackson tried to call police but found the suspect had cut the phone lines, so she fled to a neighbor's house for help. When the suspect saw her standing in the neighbor's yard, he ran to her and pulled her back to her house by the hair.

The suspect repeatedly beat Jackson about the face and head before he was alerted that police were on their way, causing him to leave.

Officers soon located McGriff and he was arrested without further incident. Both Jackson and Johnson suffered minor injuries during the incident but did not require medical attention.

McGriff was charged with burglary of an occupied dwelling, burglary of an occupied vehicle, battery and domestic violence. He was taken to the Leon County Jail and no bond information for him was available Tuesday.

Political rebellion

George Bush and Paul Tsongas were the declared winners in Tuesday's New Hampshire presidential primary. But, as the stunning results show, there's more to this story than numbers.

Take a closer look at the results of Tuesday's election and you'll see the other winner in Tuesday's New Hampshire presidential primary wasn't so much any individual or candidate as it was an emotion—the emotion in this case being rebellion. More precisely, a political rebellion.

Although this electoral uprising was generally unfocused, in essence it was a clear voter rebellion against the political and economic status quo—if not the schizophrenic, crumbling capitalist system, rife with contradictions, itself.

In the Republican primary, large numbers of people, 44 percent, voted for a man touted by his friends in the Washington media as a David Duke with a human face: rightist ideologue, infamous negative nabob of Republican negativity, Patrick J. Buchanan.

This time the CNN host of the program Crossfire hit his target squarely, and often. And as Bush now heads for the Southern primaries, where Buchanan will bait Bush on the civil rights bill he signed last years, Bush must feel the crosshairs of Buchanan's armed legions aimed at his head.

And well he should. In states like Florida with high unemployment, Buchanan's ultimately retrograde message may go over better than many assume.

And no one, we bet, knows that more than George Bush.

But, say what we will about Pat Buchanan—he's a bigot and a borderline fascist—his focus on Bush's neglect of the so-called middle class was a success. He hit a nerve with the voters in New Hampshire. He put the status quo to the test and the status quo, represented by George Bush, all but collapsed.

Fortunately, we saw little of the racist demagogery that often flows from Buchanan's pen or mouth. He ran against the moribund economy, and avoided divisive issues such as abortion.

Interesting, however, is the fact that Buchanan won the male vote and lost the female vote. This may be attributable to his well-known links to the anti-abortion movement. Although Bush has appointed the Supreme Court that will likely destroy Roe v. Wade, Bush has kept a much lower profile on the issue.

But for now Buchanan is standing tall, his shirt stained red from George Bush's bloodied nose.

In the Democratic primary, former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who despite his years in the Senate ran as an outsider, finished first. But finishing a closer-than-expected second was Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, and yet another sign of the rebellion in the air.

After nearly a month of fending off negative news concerning fidelity to his wife—and his country—and polls showing him far behind Tsongas, Clinton's strong showing bodes well for his candidacy. That's assuming, of course, another media feeding frenzy isn't in the offing.

The lesson of New Hampshire is the people are crying out for meaningful leadership. If a demagogue like Buchanan can nearly defeat Bush, and outsiders like Tsongas and Clinton can finish ahead of seasoned U.S. senators such as Bob Kerrey and Tom Harkin, anything is possible.

Books of baseballs

Editor:

Raising athletic fees sends the wrong message. Namely, it stresses athletic attendance over academics. To justify this increase, a student could rationally decide to attend every football, basketball and baseball game—all at the expense of library and study time. A recent study showed that 58 percent of FSU students have never checked out a book from the library and 45 percent have failed to check out an article or book on reserve. And this was before the fee increase! Meanwhile, the library is purchasing less books and magazines because they have no money. This penalizes those who do choose to use the library. Let's keep the fee increase, but give students the option of designating it for athletics or the library.

Wipe the egg off ...

Editor:

Brian Philpot's letter of Feb. 12 attacking the Monarchy Party/defending the Seminole Party was interesting, but confusing.

He asks what the Monarchy senators (I am sure these are no Monarchy cabinet members) did for the "Get Off Your Duffs" rally. He had just said that most Seminole senators or cabinet members did not help with the rally. What is it he wants? Must Monarchy Party members do more to be equal?

I know there are many Seminole Party members who give their time to help students. They know who they are and will realize I am not talking about them. But, the way our SGA works lately, good Seminole Party members who are not yet on the students' payroll (employed by SGA, paid by students through A&S fees) can certainly expect to be on the payroll if they work hard. Of course they helped.

I am particularly surprised that President Philpot has so little understanding of student opinion that he would write such a letter at this time.

On Feb. 7, he betrayed students when he spoke for the athletic fee increase. He betrayed the Student Senate, the elected representatives of all students, who had voted not to support the increase.

It is interesting that we just happened to find out a couple of days after Feb. 7 that Philpot was not even an enrolled student when he sucked up to university administration at students' expense. (He's on the student's payroll too, of course). How could he possibly speak for students on any issue?

Perhaps student body presidents who live in glass houses should wipe the egg off their faces before trying to make someone else's nest as foul as their own.

... sorry bootlicker

Editor:

I must say I was pleased to see how much Brian Philpot and THE SEMINOLE PARTY helped out with the recent march to the Capitol to protest budget cuts. I know I wouldn't have been there unless they had informed me of it ... no, wait, I think I read about it in the Flambeau ... anyway, the assistance of him and HIS SEMINOLE PARTY certainly greatly furthered the success of the rally.

However, Brian, I don't think anyone will soon forget your, and indeed THE SEMINOLE PARTY's, pandering, sycophant-like boot-licking of the administration in regards to recent tuition hikes, the parking policy (which you initially supported and subsequently, albeit belatedly, changed your minds about), and, most recently, this ridiculous athletic fee hike, which will benefit few, which fewer want, and which even fewer can afford.

But don't get me wrong, I think it's great you marched with us.

Matt Robinson

Get used to it

Editor:

When you take a scan tron test, fill out a questionnaire or register to vote etc. you are asked to put down your race. Most people don't really have a problem with this because they are either African American, Caucasian or Asian. But what if you are mixed. What do you fill out?

My mother is white and my father is black and Native American Indian. So what nationality does that leave me with? Some people may refer to me as a mulatto. For the most part that term is associated primarily with blacks. I disagree with that because I am not only black but I am white and Indian as well. I want a distinction of my own.

I am the product of an inter-racial relationship but I do not belong to a particular race. As far as the government is concerned I am non-existent. I am supposed to be either all white or all black. This is proof of society's backwardness. It seems people are trying to cover up an issue that they do not want to face. Well society get used to seeing people like me around! Inter-racial relationships are increasing and mixed children are dominating America's population!

Woodson to speak at FSU tonight

BY MATT GRIMISON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Poverty has become a huge industry in the United States, allowing many to profit off the country's poor while sinking the nation further into debt, says Robert Woodson, who will speak tonight at Florida State University.

"The greatest barrier isn't a lack of money but a lack of innovation," Woodson said Tuesday from his office in Washington D.C. "Poverty is a crisis of the spirit. It is a crisis of self-respect."

Woodson is the founder and president of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise, a research and demonstration organization that helps communities develop successful business enterprises.

The Institute for Conservative Studies, an FSU student government organization, is paying him $2,800 for tonight's lecture.

Woodson said he will discuss where the country has gone wrong in its public policy and what it should do to overcome its problems.

"Two trillion dollars have been spent in the last 25 to 30 years to aid the poor, yet conditions have gotten worse," he said.

According to Woodson, 70 cents of every welfare dollar once went to poor recipients, but now only 30 cents goes to the poor while the other 70 cents go to administrative costs.

"We have created a poverty industry where there are perverse incentives to remain in poverty," he said.

"A lot of the principles and policies that fuel the engines of our market economy should be applied in our social economy, where we ought to be awarding people for innovation and success rather than awarding failure and irresponsibility," Woodson added.

Instead of funneling more and more money into public programs for the poor, Woodson said, individuals within poor communities who have achieved success despite their conditions should be looked to for advice.

"Fifty percent of low income families are raising successful children in spite of poverty, but you don't read about them. We should be asking ourselves what is it that they do to insulate their children from the destructive natures of poverty," Woodson said.

"But there are powerful interests that oppose this because too many people profit from poverty," he said.

Woodson added, however, that people nowadays are more willing to listen to innovative solutions to poverty because of the nation's economic troubles, which so far have led to massive lay-offs, among other things.

Woodson is considered by many to be a national leader in the search for innovative solutions to problems with inner cities and poor minorities.

"Woodson has been widely published on the issues of race and poverty in publications such as the Wall Street Journal and the New York Times," said William Border of the James Madison Institute, a local conservative think tank co-sponsoring the event.

"He's definitely conservative-minded but I'm not sure whether the specific solutions will be in line with our views," said Scott Bohnsack, acting assistant director of ICS.

One reason Woodson, who is African American, was invited to speak at FSU tonight is the fact that this month is Black History Month, Bohnsack said.

Woodson will be the featured speaker during a forum discussion tonight at 7:30 in the Union Ballroom. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Psychology prof says Afrocentric education is key to Black crisis

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

African Americans are in a crisis—a crisis that can only be overcome by teaching children at an early age about their African heritage, according to Robert L. Williams, a nationally renowned psychology professor.

"When it gets unsafe for us to go on a golf course and walk the streets . . . we are in a crisis," Williams said Monday night in a lecture at Florida A&M University. "Indeed we are living in serious times."

The key to the whole problem, Williams stressed, is to teach children about their African heritage so they can develop a vital sense of self-respect.

"The Afrocentric program lets children know that they're not abnormal, that they're descendants of the great kingdoms of Africa," said Williams, who has published more than 60 articles and two books on the psychology of Black America.

"We have to teach our children to have a sense of self-respect in order for them to challenge the system," Williams told a crowd of more than 75 people in Perry-Page Auditorium.

The event was sponsored by FAMU's Minority Institutions Research Development Program.

By teaching African-American children love for one another, scholarship, respect, sound financial investment and leadership, they will develop a sense of heritage, Williams said.

"As we look back into Africa, we had great kingdoms . . . but we're off course," said Williams, a psychology and Afro-American studies professor at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

"We must become re-oriented and get back on track," he added. "We have the power to change our history. I believe that if we understand the fundamental nature of our problem in this society, we can do it."

In order to rebuild black communities, Williams said, energy should be derived from love within the communities.

"We have been caught up into deriving our energy from hating white people rather than loving ourselves," Williams said. "That energy is in the wrong place. We must derive our energy from loving ourselves."

Like all successful African Americans, Williams said he has a responsibility to pass something valuable on to the next generation.

Black History Month

"As an elder, I must build bridges for brothers and sisters, not ditches," Williams said. "Each generation must pass on something to the next generation. That's a responsibility. We have no right to take something from the African-American community and then put nothing back into it."

According to Williams, too little emphasis is placed on academics, especially at the secondary level of education.

"When I walk into high schools, what I see are athletic trophies," Williams said. "It's time to develop black scholars or black scholar/athletes."

But Williams said black students need to be challenged at an even earlier age. He added that if a generation of African Americans is indeed adequately educated, a world of change would undoubtedly result.

"If you plant an apple seed you are going to get an apple tree. If you plant a cherry seed you are going to get a cherry tree. It's a fact," Williams said. "So, we need to plant positive seeds into our children's minds."

Williams used an anecdote about a bull and matador to illustrate the need for African Americans to build their own institutions rather than wait to be integrated into those dominated by white males. Williams explained that in each bullfight, "eventually the bull is killed."

"We must understand that our Black legacy to our children must not just begin with a job on the man's plantation. You cannot leave a job to your children," Williams said. "We must buy land, businesses, corporations and the kinds of things that are structurally sound to establish institutions so that we can institutionalize ideas that we have."

wait to win the nomination. And I know that we will in November win a great victory against Pat Buchanan," Clinton said to roars and laughs from the crowd.

The one-two finish of Tsongas and Clinton was likely to keep alive the quest by some Democrats for another better known candidate to enter the race.

Those Democrats question whether Tsongas can gather any support outside of New England and whether Clinton can ever get his campaign away from questions about his past.

Nearly half of the state's voters turned out in an event every four years that takes on more importance than the mere size of the vote would indicate. This year the voters seemed to be fueled by discontent.

ABC-TV said its exit polling showed that far and away the issue on the voters' minds was the economy, which in New Hampshire is in deep recession. And the ABC exit poll also showed that a third of those questioned said they wish some other candidate was running.

Many of the candidates tried to take advantage of the voter discontent, saying their showings were a sign of changing times.

"People are taking back their democracy," Brown said in an interview on Cable News Network. "They are not just being influenced by the millions of dollars in commercials."

Brown has based his entire campaign on changing a system which he says is in the hands of special interest. But he said New Hampshire shows "Something's stirring out there."

Clinton, too, used that theme saying: "When you look to the results of this evening it will not have been a very good night for the status quo crowd in Washington."

Budget

She added UFF has filed grievances with the state claiming the Legislature has reneged on a collective bargaining agreement the union had with the state concerning the 3 percent pay raise.

"That's preparatory to taking it to court," Anderson said.

The grievance is going to an arbitrator, who could take as long as 45 days to make a decision, she said.

Board of Regents spokesperson Pat Riordan said the BOR is unable to pay the faculty salary increases unless they get the money from the Legislature. Without the money, there's nothing the BOR can do, he added.

"We're simply innocent bystanders," Riordan said.

Even though the BOR cannot officially support UFF's actions, Riordan added, it is sympathetic to the faculty's plight.

"The idea of the faculty not getting a pay increase is abominable," he said.

FSU President Dale Lick wholeheartedly agreed that faculty deserve some sort of raise.

"There was no raise this (academic) year at all and there's none in the budget for next year," Lick said.

"Our faculty are the most important part of our budget."

And the drop in services offered to students means the reality budget is a loser for students too, according to Tracy Newman, chief lobbyist for the Florida Students Association.

She said things don't look too bright for university students, other than the fact that tuitions are not being raised this time around.

"The students are getting walked all over," she said. "(But) there's not going to be a whole lot of action until something happens with the budget."

The situation has become so bad that six educational associations have bonded together for an advertising campaign that blasts the Legislature for not acting to help the state out of the current crisis.

"Appealing to them to do the right thing has not worked," said Ron Sachs, a spokesperson for the campaign. "We believe these (ads) will do a little jolting."

The commercials will run on radio and television stations and in newspapers in Tallahassee and several major Florida cities. One of the ads calls the Legislature the worst threat to Florida's future, among a choice of violent street crime, lack of affordable health care, environmental destruction and overcrowded public schools.

Seminoles pussyfoot and lose to Clemson

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
CLEMSON, S.C.—Chris Whitney drilled five 3-pointers and finished with 21 points and Sharone White scored five of his 13 points in the final four minutes Tuesday night, sending Clemson to a 68-67 upset of No. 17 Florida State.

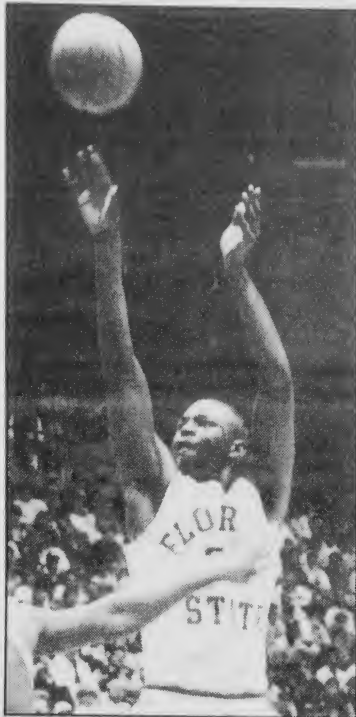

The Seminoles, 18-7 overall and 10-5 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, led only once in the second half and had a chance to tie the game in the final seconds.

After White missed the second of two free throws with 21.3 seconds remaining, the Seminoles, trailing 68-65, quickly pushed the ball up court.

Unable to get an open 3-pointer, FSU's Charlie Ward forced a 3-pointer with two seconds left, which Bob Sura tipped in before the buzzer sounded.

Clemson, 13-9 and 3-8, raced to 52-45 lead early in the second half on three 3-pointers by Whitney.

Sam Cassell led Florida State with 21 points, but his offensive effectiveness was limited after he picked up his fourth foul with 7:48 to play.

Doug Edwards couldn't help FSU

U.S. hockey team wins 4-1; closes in on medal

See Olympic Notebook, page 12

ALBERTVILLE, France—The unbeaten United States moved within one victory of its first Olympic hockey medal in a dozen years with a 4-1 decision over France to advance to the semifinals.

Having struggled through the first period and seemingly on their way to an embarrassing exit from medal contention, the Americans found a spark from Keith Tkachuk and Ted Donato. The spree came after U.S. coach Dave Peterson screamed at his players between the first and second periods.

"I thought we were a little lethargic and needed to get in the game," Peterson said. "You have to remember, I'm a little loud anyway."

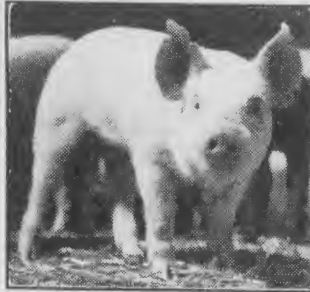

U.S. goalie Ray LeBlanc started his sixth straight game after making 45 saves Monday night. His defense kept the French at bay most of the game, but LeBlanc stood solid when tested. Instead of talking with LeBlanc before the game, Peterson left him alone.

"He's on a roll," Peterson said. "He doesn't need me to confuse him."

The game turned nasty in the final minutes and escalated to a melee afterward, but the victory put the United States into Friday's semifinals against the winner of Wednesday night's game between Finland and the Unified Team.

If the U.S. wins its next game it would be assured at least a silver medal and would play for the gold on the last day. If the Americans lose Friday, they would still have a shot at the bronze.

Jeanne Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Keep your mind on your work and you will chalk up one triumph after another. The financial picture looks brighter than ever this coming spring. Travel abroad is a real possibility in June. Family problems have a way of ironing themselves out next fall. Be on the lookout for a great career opportunity in November. A pet project finally gets the backing it needs from those in authority. Grab the ball and run with it!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE:

jazz great Stan Kenton, jockey Eddie Arcaro, actress Justine Bateman, Britain's Prince Andrew.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Youngsters blossom when you take a special interest in their development. A direct approach works best where a career vs. romance conflicts is concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your maturity is a tremendous asset now. A phone call brings both money and memories. An optimistic newcomer gives you fresh hope for the future. Go ahead and pool your ideas and talents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A quick reply to an offer or letter will get you special treatment. Curl up at home with a good book if you do not want to socialize tonight. Recharge your batteries.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An unusual coincidence brings about a much-desired meeting. Buying a few items for your wardrobe will boost your spirits and confidence. Good luck is yours where romance or finance is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel enjoys highly favorable influences. Loved ones are much more affectionate than in the recent past. A chance encounter could lead to an exhilarating romance.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept. 22): Discussing potential problems with an acquaintance will help you clarify your ideas. The two of you could decide to pool your resources. Get any financial promises in writing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do what your heart dictates, even if you must go against tradition or accepted mores. Find yourself of prejudices. Savvy investments will result in lasting financial security.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21) Legitimate enterprises over which you have full control give you the best chance for turning a profit. Pull any strings you can. Try to cut through the romantic haze tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22-Dec 21) Even the so-called experts can be wrong. Trust your instincts in business negotiations. A flexible approach will help you iron out a mutually beneficial agreement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your attitude toward money or employment may be partly to blame for deteriorating domestic harmony. Reflect on your partner's point of view before taking decisive action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A romance delights you. You can succeed where others have failed. A desire for change will soon be fulfilled. Trust your intuition when interviewing potential partners and employees.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take advantage of a constructive new trend. Thinking in positive terms will help you arrive at sound conclusions. Honest discussions about a family problem lead to a solution.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are creative, compassionate and precise. Their ability to size up people and situations quickly works to their advantage in both school and the board room. A vivid imagination makes these Pisces wonderful storytellers and writers. They are experts at putting into words what so many people have felt. Tidy and exact, they are uncomfortable working with associates who are sloppy or careless. They take good care of their homes and are very particular about their own personal appearance.

What was assumed to be an easy homestand finish after a grueling 16-game Atlantic Coast Conference schedule is now a challenge to the Lady Seminoles' basketball team which dropped a game Monday night to the league's only winless team—a reminder to take no opponent for granted.

Tonight's 7 o'clock game at Tully Gym gives Florida State a chance to redeem itself against Midwestern Collegiate Conference member Butler University. The 8-11 team from Indianapolis will meet FSU for the first time, and Seminole coach Marynell Meadors hopes her squad will use the opportunity to crank up a five-game win streak to finish out the regular season.

"We were looking at the last six games of our schedule as wins to get prepared for postseason play," Meadors said. "But after losing to Wake Forest, we learned we can't take any win for granted. We'll have to come out and play hard."

FSU has played hot and cold all season, knocking off ranked teams at home and on the road, then losing by considerable spreads to some of the nation's best and losing games to perhaps lesser squads.

The erratic behavior probably accounts for the Lady Seminoles' absence from the Top 25 poll, even after beating six ranked teams.

Meadors said earlier this season that her squad had yet to play as a cohesive unit, and following the embarrassing loss to Wake Forest, she wondered why the talented bunch couldn't keep it together, especially after coming off an exciting road win at North Carolina State.

"There are days when the team simply doesn't show up ready to play and I guess that's evident by (Monday's) loss," she said. "You can't coach intensity, you just have to hope a team will motivate itself to a certain extent."

S. Korea wins first medal, but Dan Jansen fails again

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

South Korea became the third country in these Olympics to win its first medal ever in a Winter Games, joining China and Luxemburg. Kim Yoon-Man took the silver in men's 1,000-meter speedskating, finishing one-hundredth of a second behind Germany's Olaf Zinke.

American Dan Jansen, desperate for a medal in a star-crossed Olympic career, had the best time of the day in the 1,000-meter speedskating through 600 meters but he ran out of steam in the final lap and finished well back.

Four years ago, Jansen, overshadowed by his sister's death, fell in both his Olympic races. This time he failed to win a medal because he simply wasn't fast enough.

Japan held off European powers Norway and Austria Tuesday to win the team nordic combined—its first gold medal at the Winter Olympics in 20 years.

The Japanese went into the cross-country section of the two-part event with a big lead of 2 minutes, 27 seconds after dominating the ski jumping Monday. Japan then held off the better cross-country racers from Europe to take the first gold medal for the Japanese since they swept the ski jumping at the 1972 Sapporo Games.

So far in these Games, the United States has six medals and the only remaining chances for others appear to be in hockey and women's figure skating, which begins tonight.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Sorority Racquetball

Sign-up for sorority racquetball begins Monday, February 24 and will end on Friday, February 28 at 4:30. Each sorority can enter two singles and one doubles team. A new, unopened can of Penn racquetballs must be turned in with each entry. Play will begin Monday, March 2 in the Dr. Bobby E. Leach Center.

Swimming

The annual IM Swimming Championships will be held in the Dr. Bobby E. Leach Aquatic Center on Tuesday and Wednesday March 10 and 11. Men and women will compete separately in nine events; only the fastest time for each will earn the winner the coveted "Cotton." Fraternities and sororities will dominate the events by their sheer numbers, but independents will provide the stiffest competition. Entry cards and programs will be available beginning Monday, February 24.

If you have any problems with your turns and strokes, you are encouraged to attend a series of clinics sponsored by the FSU Swim Team. The clinics will be held from 5 to 6 P.M. on March 2, 4, 6 & 9 in the Leach Center Pool. See you there!

Beach Volleyball Madness

Get a jump on spring break! Work on your tan while enjoying the thrill of beach volleyball and the generosity of our kind sponsors by signing up for The Third Annual "Spring Fling" Tournament to be held on March 7th and 8th. Entry fee is $10.00 per team. Each team member will receive a t-shirt donated by our sponsors: Island Water Sports, Club Sportswear, Shout Magazine and Little Caesar's Pizza. There will be many other prizes to be given away or won by the teams lucky enough to beat the entry deadline and the 16 team limit.

There will be two divisions, open four-man and co-rec triples. Sign-up will begin on Monday, February 24 and will end as soon as we have 16 teams in each division. Do not procrastinate! Stop by 136 Tully to sign-up or for more information.

If that is not enough, the IM office will be holding its own tournament on weekday evenings in March. In the men's division, fraternities and independents will play 2-man while independent women and sororities will play in teams of 4. Sign-up also begins on Monday, February 24. ## Budget cuts seem to have taken toll on students' writing abilities

BY CHE ODOM

STAFF WRITER

If mail to state lawmakers is any gauge, college students aren't off their duffs at all.

More than 3,000 Florida college students recently held a rally at the Capitol to protest education budget cuts. But many believe the message needs to be carried through in student letters to legislators. The problem is, not many students have written letters.

"We may have gotten 15 letters from students this year, but I don't think it was quite that high," Rep. Al Lawson said Tuesday. "The week of the rally we didn't receive any mail from students."

Lawson said he thinks college students should be more involved in government and that the topic of education cuts is one that greatly affects them. He didn't have a guess as to why students aren't mailing letters.

Florida State University Student Body President Brian Philpot said he wished students would write more letters to their legislators, noting that "the rally was effective. But mail, that's what really hits home."

But Florida Student Association Chief Lobbyist Tracy Newman doesn't think lack of ## FAMU law school could be again but for busted budget

BY DIANE PAYLOR

FLAMBEAU WRITER

Those who support the re-establishment of a law school under the auspices of Florida A&M University say even though the chances of that happening this year are virtually nil because of the state's financial mess, the idea isn't going to die any time soon.

The need for it, they say, is just too great.

"In this state, the most underrepresented group in the law profession is Blacks," FAMU President Frederick Humphries said recently. "I think the system has not had the willpower nor the commitment to solving the problem."

According to a report released last year by the Florida Supreme Court's Racial and Ethnic Bias Study Commission, the underrepresentation of minorities as attorneys and judges serves to perpetuate a system which is, through institutional policies or individual practices, unfair and insensitive to individuals of color.

Another report conducted by the Board of Regents, which oversees the State University System, pointed out only 4 to 7.6 percent of all lawyers in good standing with the Florida Bar are minorities.

In an effort to correct that, Humphries and others are hoping the state Legislature will make a sincere commitment to the Black community by helping to re-establish FAMU's law school, a proposal which is before the Legislature now.

But while many support the idea, getting the money is an uphill battle.

A little background

FAMU's law school was shut down in conjunction with the opening of Florida State University's School of Law in 1967—a time when schools were being forced to racially integrate.

Humphries said because FAMU's law school never got the support and encouragement to be first rate, it was "doomed to failure."

"Florida A&M University and all of its supporters have never been happy with the notion that we lost our law school," Humphries said. "It was created in a time when we had segregation . . . to keep Blacks out of white law schools."

Black History Month

But now things are different.

Last year, the BOR conducted a feasibility study of a new state-supported law school run by FAMU. The report estimated the total cost for constructing and operating a new law school, to be located in either central or southeastern Florida, would be approximately $36 million.

BOR spokesperson Pat Riordan said with the state's financial crisis, the chances of a new law school being approved by the Legislature this session are absolutely zero.

"The Legislature is cutting back everywhere," Riordan said. "We don't have a university budget that permits serious consideration of a law school . . . We can't buy library books or put roofs on top of buildings."

Local state Rep. Al Lawson, a FAMU graduate, reluctantly agreed. He said he believes FAMU should be given the opportunity to run a third state law school alongside FSU and the University of Florida, but there's some opposition to the idea because the state's fiscal crisis does not make it feasible.

"It's not something you can do anytime soon," he said. "We're expecting another (state revenue) shortfall."

Humphries said he's basically looking for a guarantee from the state saying that if they do decide to proceed with a third law school, it will go to FAMU.

"I hope they don't create a third law school and not give it to FAMU," he said. "That would

Duke to speak at Tiger Bay; FAMU protest is planned

Self-proclaimed ex-Ku Klux Klan member and presidential candidate David Duke will descend upon the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center Friday, and students from Florida A&M University plan on giving him anything but a warm welcome.

"I think I can speak for all of the students when I say we are adamantly opposed to everything David Duke stands for," Daryl Parks, FAMU Student Body President, said Wednesday.

He is organizing students for a rally at the civic center starting at 11:30 a.m., thirty minutes before Duke's expected arrival. Duke was invited by the Capital Tiger Bay Club, a group of local citizens who gather every so often to discuss political issues.

Other local student organizations vehemently opposed to Duke, such as Florida State University's Black Student Union and Jewish Student Union, said they will not protest his speech because it would only give the former KKK Grand Wizard more free exposure.

"We decided not to have a protest because

Lab productions closed to the public

See related story, page 5

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

The Florida State University School of Theatre's first show of the Spring '92 Workshop Production series is little more than two weeks away, but don't plan on getting to see it unless you're a theater student or approved guest.

Dan Carter, associate dean of the department, said Wednesday that workshop productions are new at FSU and policies for them are still evolving.

"I don't think we'll stay where we are. It's just where we are now," said Carter. Carter added that he hopes workshop productions will eventually be open to the public once again.

Last semester at FSU, a controversy arose over a workshop production of Sade by Sade by Sade, by the controversial 18th century author and playwright. The piece was cancelled by department dean Gil Lazier after a single class performance.

Lazier cited an unprepared cast and risqué subject matter as his reasons for pulling the production.

But Carter said the intent of the new policy is to allow greater freedom for the student-run productions while maintaining a distinction between School of Theatre productions, such as the Mainstage, Studio and Lab series.

"There's nothing like not even knowing what rules you're breaking to create new forms," he said. "This rule was put into effect to ensure continuance of workshop productions."

Carter admitted the new policy, which prohibits publicity of any kind, may cause some confusion since some publicity distributed under last semester's rules allowing open access had already promoted public performances of the workshops.

The February issue of Callboard, a newsletter produced by the theater school and sent to all Mainstage season ticket buyers, lists the eight workshop shows and says they are free to the public.

There was also a Jan. 31 memo from Carter with show dates and times of workshop performances posted on the department bulletin board.

Under the new rules, anyone not a theater student must be on a guest list submitted in advance for approval before being allowed entrance to the performances.

Carter said the department will be restricting attendance, although he said he isn't sure what would happen if a Mainstage patron came to see one of the workshops, expecting to be allowed in on the basis of earlier publicity.

Despite the restriction, the general public will have the opportunity to see at least one of the workshop shows.

Jerry Genochio, the student director of Pelvic Variations, said Wednesday he had contemplated cancelling his show because of the new rules. But he's found an alternative that satisfies both him and the theater school.

Genochio said he will stage several public performances off campus before and after the March 18 and 19 restricted performances at FSU's Studio Theatre.

Carter said performances off campus are not his concern as long as they don't use school equipment such as props or costumes.

Genochio said he believes the new rules are in response to the Sade by Sade by Sade controversy.

POLICY

In Brief is a free announcement service the Flambeau provides the Tallahassee community. Because of space constraints, announcements for afternoon and evening events will only be run the day of the event; announcements for morning events, the day before. The deadline for In Brief forms is noon the day before announcements should appear in the paper. Announcements not meeting this deadline will not run.

CLARIFICATION

One of the front-page headlines in Wednesday's Flambeau, the one referring to the New Hampshire primaries, was inaccurate and also inconsistent with information in the body of the story.

At one point late Tuesday evening—when the headline was written—returns showed presidential candidate Pat Buchanan had received 44 percent of the Republican vote. The body of the story—which was updated after the headline was written—said Buchanan received 41.5 percent. Final tallies showed him with 40 percent.

Local legislators (above) apparently haven't been getting much hate mail from FSU, FAMU and TCC students this legislative session, despite the drastic hits the education budget has taken over the past year.

student letters is a problem.

"I don't think this is significant," Newman said, adding that a letter writing campaign is just getting underway. "FSU has been a little late at getting the writing campaign started."

Newman said nearly 100 letters have been collected at FSU and more are on the way.

"We don't want to send them all off at once," she added. "It'll be more effective to send them a little at a time."

Newman said it has taken a while to inform students about the letter-writing campaign. She said legislators would "start getting a lot of mail soon."

Philpot blamed a lack of information for the anemic amount of mail sent to lawmakers so far.

"I wish that students had been sending more," he said. "But (students) feel that they don't know what the solutions are. Students feel so far removed that they don't participate."

State Rep. Hurley Rudd said he didn't have a clue as to how many student letters he has or has not received from students, but he added that it isn't "an inordinate amount."

Rudd said students understand the budget jam facing legislators.

"If you don't have a dime, you can't spend it," he said. "And I think (students) know that."

But he said that students need to become active and let lawmakers know where they stand.

"It is important that students take part in the process because they are affected by the process," Rudd said.

Neither the offices of state senators Sherry Walker or Pat Thomas would give an estimate of the amounts of letters they've received.

Mary Caldwell, an administrative assistant for the House Speaker's Office, called the volume of student mail low—less than 50 letters.

"I know I have more (from) high school students than college students," Caldwell said.

to speak. Tsongas spoke to the group last November.

Korst also said the club has sponsored speeches by several politically diverse former presidential candidates, including George Bush, Ronald Reagan, Walter Mondale and Jimmy Carter.

But Duke will certainly be the most controversial presidential candidate the group has brought to Tallahassee, Korst said. He will not be its first controversial speaker, however.

The club has also been addressed by the South African and Chinese ambassadors and Millard Farmer, a defense lawyer from Atlanta who wanted to defend serial killer Ted Bundy.

Korst said he expects some negative response from the public but added that the event is private. He said it is media coverage of Duke that has given the charged politician so much exposure.

"There will be negative response," Korst said. "But it's not us that's made Duke what he is."

Korst added that there has been some debate within the club concerning Duke's speech.

"Like any other controversial speaker, there are members who want to display their dissatisfaction," Korst said. "But there hasn't been more for Duke than for anyone else controversial."

Duke from page 1

that would just give him additional publicity," said Bernard Johnson, president of FSU's Black Student Union.

But Parks disagreed with that strategy.

"That's not smart. (Duke) needs to know that he's not welcome here at all," Parks said. "He's going to get attention anyway because he's an extreme radical. I just want him to see all of us."

Because of the low-key nature of Duke's appearance, however, the BSU is more concerned with educating people about the racism Duke's candidacy represents than with organizing a protest or march, Johnson said.

"We're going to sponsor a panel discussion with the Jewish Student Union after the weekend," Johnson said. "It'll be much more effective to ignore the event now and then try to educate people about his racism later."

Jennifer Becker, who serves as the FSU Jewish Student Union's secretary, agreed.

"We don't want to draw any more attention to David Duke," Becker said.

Buzz Korst, executive secretary of the Capital Tiger Bay Club, said the group's function is not to provide partisan support for any particular candidate. He added that Duke has not and will not receive an endorsement.

"We are a political interest club," Korst said. "We provide a forum. In no way do we support any candidate or particular political philosophy."

Duke, who founded the National Association of the Advancement of White People, will receive no money for his speech, only the travel expenses and board that Korst says all the club's speakers receive.

Korst said the club has invited all of this year's presidential candidates to address the group, and so far, only former Sen. Paul Tsongas and Duke agreed

FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH

Get ready, Pat: The Republicans are coming after you now

BY JACK MCCARTHY
MANAGING EDITOR

You knew Bush was in trouble when you tuned to C-Span and saw him giving shrill speeches in New Hampshire lambasting his critics for their negative thinking, their audacity for implying the country is in a shambles.

Bush sounded nothing if not like the proverbial true believer in faith healing who's suddenly hit with an attack of appendicitis. It was incredibly inept for him to implore voters in New Hampshire to ignore the naysayers because there was too much to be grateful for.

But alas, our true believer, his appendix out, has tempered his faith in positive thinking and now sees his political health problems a bit more realistically.

Otherwise, all I can say is Pat Buchanan might consider purchasing some protective headgear. For it's a sure bet that after his shellacking of Bush in New Hampshire Tuesday, the Bush campaign is going to go ballistic on him.

Almost as sure as Pat puts grease of some kind in his hair every morning, a concerted negative ad campaign against the cocky challenger will soon be unleashed. Unfortunately for Patrick J., the Bush reelection team has much material to work with.

Take the issue of the Vietnam draft which has caused Bill Clinton so much grief. If memory serves, Pat Buchanan is a charter member of the Chicken-Hawk Hall of Fame. In case you don't know, during the Vietnam war, opponents of that unpopular struggle were known as "doves," and supporters of the war, "hawks."

So what's a chicken hawk? A chicken-hawk refers to a war supporter who has the opportunity to get their gun and march off to war with the others, but instead avoids joining the fray by any means necessary.

Where was Pat?

One article I read about chicken-hawks said that war-hawk Buchanan was holed up in a graduate student carousel at Georgetown University during the great crusade against Communism in Southeast Asia.

Columnist Mike Royko once wrote a column lampooning Buchanan's draft dodging, and seemed also to imply that Buchanan cited physical disabilities—flat feet, I believe—to avoid fighting the Commies.

Of course with Royko, you don't really know if he was kidding or not. The point, however, is that in the militaristic South, I'd be surprised if Buchanan's chicken-hawk status isn't raised.

Flat feet or not, you can bet it will be. Contrasting draft dodger Pat with war hero George may be just the thing Bush needs to get out of the doldrums.

If they don't touch the draft issue, though, you can be sure the negative ad men will bring up Buchanan's opposition to the Persian Gulf war. Here Bush could have a field day. Buchanan isn't at all apologetic, and it's sure to raise judgments about his consistency. The war, after all, is one of the few things Americans seem to think Bush did right.

And then there's the anti-Semitism and racism matter. It should play well, at least in Miami, where Bush will probably take some heat over the administration's warning to anti-Castro Cubans to think twice before launching attacks on Cuba from U.S. soil.

The danger in all this for Bush is that Buchanan is a Republican Washington insider par-excellence, despite claims to being an outsider. Buchanan probably has a lot of knowledge about Bush's own dirty linen and will hit back if need be, which should gladden the hearts of Democrats so used to doing the same thing.

For a change they get to watch the Republicans pull themselves apart.

Frankly, I can't wait for the dirt to start flying. Like any self-respecting Irishman, I love the very sight of a grudge match. And the Bush-Buchanan bashing yet to come holds great promise.

Gentlemen, protect yourself at all times and come out swinging . . .

St. Paul of Mass.

Last Sunday's Democratic debate was a virtual love fest, except for Jerry Brown's hard-hitting attack on St. Paul Tsongas' support of nuclear power. Although the post-debate discussions all but ignored this exchange, it has me wondering if Tsongas' smaller-than-expected victory over Clinton had anything to do with this bashing of his pro-nuke position.

Otherwise, I was shocked the candidates let Tsongas, the self-professed "pro-business Democrat," off the hook with his claim that he isn't a "Santa Claus." Tsongas, who stands with the Republicans on capital gains, opposes a middle-class tax cut. Someone should have pointed out that Mr. Fudd might be seen as Santa Claus by his big-business supporters.

Ironically, the other Democrats seemed not to have noticed that Buchanan's most potent weapon was to hit Bush for failing to make middle-class tax relief part of his budget package.

All in all, the debate was a real yawner. Especially disappointing was Tom Harkin. For the umpteenth time he thanked the voters of New Hampshire for welcoming him and his family (zzzzzz).

The pitch was so contrived, so phony, that Bernard Shaw, inappropriately in my opinion, started to cut him off halfway into his mawkish pitch for the hearts and minds of the voters. Kerrey was his usual dud self. Clinton was competent, but no great shakes.

Brown was the most interesting, but still hung up on the 1-800 thing. He was at his best in recounting the innovative programs he implemented as governor of California. Unfortunately, Brown's adviser, consultant Pat Caddell, has Brown convinced that his $100-limit-on-donations gimmick should be the centerpiece of his campaign.

Well, they don't call him Gov. Moonbeam for nothin'.

Clarification

Editor:

I was generally pleased with your coverage of the article concerning Florida's "Drug Czar" that I co-wrote with Dr. Jim Bowman. I appreciate your efforts to understand the issues we raised and accurately report on our findings. There are, however, a few points I would like to clarify.

The article, although critical of Bob Martinez, should not be interpreted as a partisan document designed to embarrass the Republican Party. Rather, it seeks to identify appropriate criteria to the Florida experience, it is possible to illustrate how political considerations can compromise the effectiveness of the office. Thus, the chief executive's particular political affiliation is not the issue. At issue is the need to recognize the reality of the political process and control for its potentially adverse effects.

Second, I did not mean to imply that there was some correlation between "Drug Czars" and "... Republican politics, which place more emphasis on sending abusers to jail than treatment programs." Instead, this correlation was suggested by the reporter. I acknowledged that while he or others might reach this conclusion, I personally felt it somewhat far-fetched. I apologize if this was not adequately articulated.

Finally, the information you received from Mr. Martinez's office was essentially correct. The office Mr. Martinez occupies was created by Congress. I would point out, however, that the Florida office was created by executive order, not through statute.

'Ex-Klansman' is a misleading moniker, experts say

BY RAJU CHEBIUM
STAFF WRITER

Even though the mainstream media usually refers to Republican presidential candidate David Duke as a "former" leader of the Ku Klux Klan, many prominent Klan watchers say people should be careful not to assume—as some apparently have—that "former" means "reformed."

"It is correct to say he is a former Klansman, but to say he is a former Klansman implies that he has changed his ideas," Daniel Levitas, executive director of the Atlanta-based Center for Democratic Renewal, an organization that monitors hate crimes, said Wednesday. "That is not the case."

Levitas believes Duke, who won 40 percent of the vote in his bid last year to become governor of Louisiana, has in fact severed his ties with the white supremacist, terrorist organization. But Levitas was quick to add that severing the physical ties does not mean Duke has severed the ideological ties.

As recently as two years ago, Duke was caught selling copies of Mein Kampf, Adolf Hitler's autobiography, out of his office in Baton Rouge, La., where he was serving as a state representative.

Lance Hill, executive director of the Louisiana Coalition Against Nazism and Racism, a group based in New Orleans that has kept a close watch on Duke for several years, agreed with Levitas.

"I don't think Duke is a card-carrying member of the Klan, nor do I think he has changed his views one iota," Hill said. "You don't have to carry a membership card to be a bigot . . . That's what makes him dangerous, not that he ran around in a cowpatch and burned a few crosses."

According to University of Florida history Professor David Chalmers, a noted Klan expert, Duke joined the Klan and several neo-Nazi groups in the early '70s soon after he got his bachelor's degree in history from Louisiana State University.

In 1975, he took over the Knights of Ku Klux Klan—a "milquetoast operation" even during its heyday, according to Hill, who is also a doctoral student in history and regarded as one of the leading authorities on Duke and the Klan movement in Louisiana.

"Duke never really went for the ritual of the Klan," Hill said. "(He) kept just enough trappings of the Klan to attract a following."

Hill said Duke was eventually forced out of the Klan because he sold confidential member lists to a rival Klan faction. Duke, a former Klan leader, has since blamed his association with the group as "youthful indiscretion."

Although most Klan watchers seem to be in agreement that Duke is no longer a member of the Klan, there is at least one dissenting opinion.

According to Stetson Kennedy, a long-time Klan watcher who infiltrated several Klan factions in the 1940s and has authored such books as The Klan Unmasked, many Klan factions make their members sign written oaths of loyalty to the white race. And if the member should ever want out, Kennedy added, he would have to undergo a formal ritual during which the oath would be repudiated.

Kennedy said he did not know whether the Klan faction Duke led required any kind of written oath or whether it held formal rituals for those who choose to quit. But he said the burden of proof should be on Duke, especially since Duke is running for elected office.

Unless Duke can provide some kind of evidence that he is no longer with the KKK, Kennedy said, no one can say for sure Duke is a "former" Klansman.

"The fact is, in the Klan's view, there's no such thing as leaving the Klan," Kennedy said in a phone interview from his home in Jacksonville.

The only person who knows whether Duke still maintains clandestine ties to the Klan is Duke himself, Kennedy said.

Duke could not be reached for comment at his campaign headquarters in suburban New Orleans Tuesday, and a campaign spokesperson refused to answer questions about Duke's ties with the Klan.

Some Klan watch organizations admit they take Duke at his word when he says he is no longer a Klansman.

"If he says he is not in the Klan, he is not," said Angie Lowry, a researcher for Klanwatch, an organization in Montgomery, Ala., that keeps tabs on the Klan. "I have no idea whether he is or he is not. We take him at his word . . . Frankly, we don't know if he belonged to it. He says he did."

Kennedy said he did not know whether the Klan faction Duke led required any kind of written oath or whether it held formal rituals for those who choose to quit. But he said the burden of proof should be on Duke, especially since Duke is running for elected office. Unless Duke can provide some kind of evidence that he is no longer with the KKK, Kennedy said, no one can say for sure Duke is a "former" Klansman.

Despite Kennedy's allegations, a current Klansman agreed Duke's Klan days are behind him, adding that the Klan is none too happy about it.

John Baumgardner, grand dragon of the Florida faction of the Invisible Empire Knights of Ku Klux Klan, said Duke set out in the late '70s to be a national Klan leader, took an oath to advance whites' interests, decided he couldn't keep the oath and severed ties with the Klan.

"A lot of Klansmen feel that he sold out . . . I'm not interested in voting for David Duke," Baumgardner said in a telephone interview from Orlando. "I honestly believe that David Duke tried to make the Klan work, tried to make it a political action committee. I think his views and positions have changed."

Theatre students disagree on administration controversies

LISA SPRAGUE
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Students in the Florida State University School of Theatre are split over controversial decisions made recently by department administrators—some are angered and others are sympathetic to the establishment's point of view.

Robert Hatch, a student pursuing his master's in fine arts in the department, said Wednesday many undergraduate students think they have something to fear by speaking out.

"I'm not sure their fear is warranted, but I think there is a fear of not being cast for parts in shows or receiving recommendations from faculty," Hatch said.

Other students interviewed by the Flambeau were reluctant to comment about the school's atmosphere and refused to give their names.

Their reasons were attributed to a number of concerns, including fear of being isolated. Some, who are employed by the School of Theatre, feared losing their jobs within the school.

"Administration has been very negative toward students and I don't like a lot of things they've done," said one female student.

Associate Dean Dan Carter said the thought of theater students being afraid of the faculty makes him uncomfortable.

"I'm not someone who relishes the idea of people being afraid of me," Carter said.

A sophomore in the school, however, said theater students are publicly quiet about administrative decisions because they feel as if they are a separate entity from the rest of FSU—not because they are afraid they won't be cast for a part.

Whatever the reason for the lack of communication among theatre students, most are unhappy with the administration's recent decision to pre-select audiences for workshop performances.

"We do care about what goes on in theatre, but we are a close-knit group, and what the rest of FSU thinks doesn't concern us," she said.

But a student employee at the School of Theatre had a completely different opinion of why theater students are unwilling to discuss administrative policy.

"It is a fallacy to think that the faculty is that biased against students giving their opinions," he said. "I think they would take it as criticism."

Whatever the reason for the lack of communication among theater students, most are unhappy with the administration's recent decision to pre-select audiences for workshop performances.

According to one theater student's description, workshops are where students in the department learn the most, as well as have the greatest opportunity to perform in front of a varied audience.

"I'll probably never get to Mainstage, so workshops are where I can perform in a great atmosphere, in front of a real audience," the student said.

Another student agreed, saying now that workshop audiences will only consist of fellow theater students and approved guests, performers will not receive the same quality of audience feedback.

"We cannot learn and grow in a closed environment. People need to see what we do," the student said.

Although FSU theater students aren't shouting from the rooftops about the administration's latest move, they whisper anonymously about it in debate among themselves. Whether or not their fear of speaking out is warranted, Dan Carter summed things up this way:

"We tend to dramatize things," he said.

Volunteers hope to enfranchise Tallahassee's homeless

BY THOMAS AUSTEN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Tallahassee's growing homeless population has consistently been disenfranchised from local and state government, but Amy Gandell, a Florida State University social work major, says that's exactly what she's working to change.

"(The homeless) are a large population of constituents in Tallahassee that have no power to speak their voice," said Gandell, who is also coordinator of today's "Needs Day," in which organizers will help local homeless citizens register to vote, among other things.

Under new policy guidelines, the homeless can register using the post office's general delivery address, whereas before they needed to list a permanent address, Gandell said.

Social Security card agents will also be on hand today to issue duplicate cards.

"This way, their names can be put back into the computer to see if they slipped through the cracks, to see if they can get any disability or other supplemental income," Gandell said.

Along with food donated by local restaurants, there will be job referral and job placement counselors available.

A registered nurse and several social workers from Neighborhood

Health Services will offer free blood pressure and diabetes screening.

"We will also be trying to help folks access existing services for health care," said Louise Jones, spokesperson for NHS.

But the major focus of "Needs Day" will be voter registration, with the League of Women Voters on hand to register anyone who's qualified.

"Just because they don't have a home doesn't mean that they aren't entitled to the rights we all have as citizens of this country," Greg Mellowe, survey coordinator of the Tallahassee Coalition for the Homeless, said after conducting a poll of the homeless population

Wednesday.

The survey was carried out at local homeless shelters and soup kitchens by the homeless coalition.

Although results from the eight-county survey will not be tallied for three to four weeks, Mellowe said they expect a higher homeless count than last year's total of more than 350. He cited a poor economy and lack of affordable housing as contributions to the rise in the homeless population.

Mellowe said the city's homeless count will continue to grow as more people flock to Florida in search of jobs that do not exist.

Cynthia Welsh, acting director of Tallahassee Coalition for the Homeless, agreed.

"Construction jobs are a big one," Welsh said. "Because (Florida) is a growing state, and though construction is slow everywhere else, they don't think it is going to be slow here. But it's slow here, too."

The coalition's survey helps to assess the needs of the homeless in order to plan programs that would best assist them, according to Mellowe.

"And to also get a little idea demographically who the homeless are," he added.

"Needs Day" will take place today from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Cold Night Shelter on West Tennessee Street across from Popeye's.

'I hope they don't create a third law school and not give it to FAMU

—FAMU President Frederick Humphries

be a terrible thing because it means we really haven't made much progress in terms of how people think about Florida A&M and what our capabilities are."

FAMU has demonstrated it can get Black students into critical areas like engineering and architecture, Humphries said. He believes a law school will have a similar effect and produce more Black lawyers.

Bishop Holifield, FAMU's attorney and a Harvard law school graduate, said bringing back the FAMU law school would also help fill a void in the Black community by providing role models for its young.

"If one of those young Black folks that are in jail had decided to become a lawyer and had felt that he or she had a realistic chance of becoming one," then they might have been motivated not to do wrong, he said.

Thirty percent of all Black males between the ages of 18 and 34 will be incarcerated or under some form of state control, the study by the Racial and Ethnic Bias Commission reported.

Other solutions

Although supporters of FAMU's law school believe it would make an important contribution, Donald J. Weidner, dean of FSU's law school, said the other law schools in the state have to work more diligently at attracting minorities to their programs—with or without a law school at a predominantly black university.

"We have to continue to get better even if the FAMU law school is created," Weidner said. "I believe it is important to reach out to minorities way before the time to apply to law school."

The two state university law schools graduated 5,533 students through 1978-1988—four percent of which were African American, according to the BOR report.

Weidner said FSU's School of Law just approved a program that would introduce potential minority law students to the law school atmosphere.

"It gives people a more focused overview to the system and how it is to be a law student and the expectations of a first-year student," he said.

One of the best ways the law schools in the state can improve the numbers of minority applicants, FAMU's Holifield said, is by hiring more Black professors and deans.

"Some of the cultural shock that comes with law school could be dealt with better by having African-American professors, assistant deans and deans," he said.

Weidner agreed.

"I think part of the problem is that there aren't enough Black faculty and administrators. No doubt they have sensitivities and sensibilities that others just don't have," he said.

Only 7 percent of full-time law school faculty in Florida were minorities, reported the Racial and Ethnic Bias Study Commission. Four were African American.

Holifield said he suffered from the lack of Black faculty during his years at Harvard.

"That was part of the culture shock. At least the white students could see white professors there who had graduated from Harvard. They knew people that looked like them could make it through there," he said.

Holifield attended Harvard in the late '60s. But Leander J. Shaw, chief justice of the Florida Supreme Court and a former law professor at FAMU, said the same lack of Black members at Florida's law schools exists today.

"I go on these campuses pretty often and I don't see that many (Black faculty members)," Shaw said. "These type of role models would be natural feeders to the school."

Shaw said his alma mater, Howard University in Washington D.C., graduates more Black lawyers than any other school because the university is used as a feeder for its law school. Howard University, like FAMU, is a historically and predominantly Black university.

"We're all looking towards trying to encourage more Blacks to go to law school," Shaw said. "Certainly (a FAMU law school) would work in that direction."

ARTS

Ceremony honors Florida arts legends

BY ANDREW ARVESEN
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The Florida Artist's Hall of Fame has been around for five years, and Wednesday morning it finally drew a crowd. At the crack of dawn, super-sculptor Duane Hanson and living soul legend/cola promoter Ray Charles were inducted into Florida's official artist's hit parade.

An expansive crowd was crammed into an awkward nook outside the Secretary of State's office in the Capitol. While dozens of Ray Charles fans milled around impatiently, a jazz ensemble from Florida A&M University serenaded the huddled masses with Henry Mancini's "Baby Elephant Walk." All eyes stared enviously at those local celebs lucky enough to be within the Magic Circle, behind the velvet rope, where the CHAIRS were. Soon, however, the view of folks like Dot Inman-Crews and Florida State's own Dr. Dale Lick reclining in comfort was obscured by a mob of burly men with tripods and lights. By the time of the ceremony, the entire view consisted of the backs of TV cameramen.

Secretary of State Jim Smith stepped up to the invisible podium and waxed poetic about "Florida—State of the Arts." He then introduced Duane Hanson. Hanson is a world-famous sculptor, noted for his unnervingly lifelike fiberglass and vinyl human figures. Like other honorees, this master of "super-realistic" sculpture was given a foot tall abstract bronze statue by Enzo Torcoletti.

Hanson was clearly thrilled to be inducted. "If I could sing, I'd sing 'Florida On My Mind,'" he quipped, beaming.

Despite Mr. Hanson's excitement, the crowd was clearly there to see Ray Charles. It is fortunate they came to see him, because at this point the P.A. fizzled and the soul legend could not be heard at all. Charles, reading from Braille notes, told the mumbling crowd, "I just don't know how to put into words what I feel in my heart."

Charles grew up in the exceedingly rural town of Greenville, 42 miles west of Tallahassee, and his career began in the nightclubs of Jacksonville. "It's nice to come back to my stomping grounds, and have people give me such a warm feeling, and a nice reception. It's beautiful," he told reporters.

By 9 a.m. it was all over, thus giving Mr. Charles ample time to fly to Las Vegas, the reason for the earlybird timing of the event. The crowd slowly dissipated, asking "What did he say?"

It didn't matter. For most of the crowd, sharing breathing room with a living legend was enough.

Wayne's World offers excellent slice of pop culture pie

BY CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

Pop culture from Madonna to Terminator is America's most profitable product, a common denominator and lightning rod for the divergent cults, clubs and anguished cliques of American society. And Wayne's World serves up a veritable potpourri of pop culture, of artifacts Americana from Chia Pets to Terminator to Scooby Doo.

Wayne's World, for those unfamiliar with the Saturday Night Live skit, is the cable access show of Wayne Campbell (Mike Meyers) and Garth Algar (Dane Carvey), two loveable pinheads whose conversations revolve around babes, music, and ... and ... well, you get the idea. But as with most pop culture, content is less important than the way it's delivered, which in this case is through Wayne and Garth's amusing oft-imitated vernacular.

The script is more sophisticated than Pee Wee Herman, but not by much. Which is not to say that it isn't funny. Meyers and Carvey have recreated a pair of characters that are archetypes of American teens. If silly and juvenile, they are at least the exaggerated products of a culture that values babes, music, and, uh, music videos.

The plot, feeble though it is, revolves around a slimy TV exec (Rob Lowe) who plans to exploit Wayne's TV show for his own profit. Along the way, Wayne meets "bodacious babe" Cassandra (Tia Carrere), the lead singer of a hard rock band that has also been offered a big break, in this case a music video, by the aforementioned slime. What follows is predictable, but not fatal, for what really drives the film are the sublime, cartoonish characters of Wayne and Garth—a media age Fred and Barney.

As with the Airplane movies, the sum of the parts is greater than that of the whole, but still funnier than four out of five Hollywood comedies. Among the amusing bits are a Garth dance to Jimi Hendrix's "Foxy Lady," the two heroes lip synching "Bohemian Rhapsody" and a subtitled conversation in Cantonese about individual responsibility and zen, citing Kierkegaard.

You don't have to like SNL to enjoy the movie. Wayne's World is fun because it creates a montage of our culture, feeding it back to us out of context, with the addition of Wayne and Garth's personal dialect. They dilute the entertainment industry and reveal it for the weak prop it is, with the presence to realize that it is, ironically, their benefactor.

Wayne's World will undoubtedly be a forgotten pop culture phenomenon like "could it be ... SATAN?", "I must be mental", and "EX-CUUUUUSE ME!", but at least it temporarily gives everyone something to talk about.

Wayne's World is showing at the Parkway 5 and Miracle Theatres.

Artists let their hair down in 621 show

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

Pry your hungry eyes from the idiot box and give them some nourishment with a visit to the 621 Gallery. For the next two weeks, it'll be showing Wild Hair II, an exhibition by the Artists' League of the University Gallery, in which the members let it all hang down with new pieces different from their usual studio productions.

Showing 45 works ranging from found art sculpture to installations to oil painting, the exhibit is meant as an alternative to the pressure of a juried show. By presenting this show in 621, the Artist's League offered its members an opportunity to try something different and get it shown without having to worry about their ability to produce in a new medium, according to board member Allys Palladino-Craig.

"There are a number of risky pieces from an artist's point of view," said Palladino-Craig. "Often, you have a lot of control in one medium, but to move to another requires learning how the medium reacts, and how to work with it. . . . So, though some of the pieces may look traditional, they are actually a marked departure from the artists' usual productions."

Among the better pieces is Nat Nadler's amusing "Reunion," a homecoming for two spark-plug fingered lovers, fashioned from one of those coffee counter bar stools. Their faces are wonderful metal plates displaying the appropriate emotions, and metal bars are outstretched to greet each other. Also look for John Felton, who usually works in oils, but who has brought a starkly drawn self-portrait entitled "JMF." Wearing the work-a-day uniform with button-down collar and a neapolitan striped tie, the portrait sports a severe, deeply probing look, reminding the viewer of the dozens of different muscles in the human face.

Other notable pieces include Richard Drake's "Eulys," a large canvas oil of a black child with big green eyes, a bright yellow and red shirt, and purple-pink lips smeared in bold strokes, a conservative supply of sparkly sprinkles falling on his head. A personal favorite is Jan Wiley's "Scratch-?", a small, framed piece not more than a foot in length, with thick strokes and intriguing color, outlined in charcoal. There's a scene scratched into it with characters looking like something Terry Gilliam (Monty Python) might have drawn.

Gallery proprietor Vic Swan welcomed the show, noting that the Friday opening of Wild Hair II was the largest reception they've had.

"What we're doing is building the audience for good contemporary work," Swan said. "We feel like the community is our base of support, so a group show of regional artists is something we really like to do."

If you enjoy the show, there will be another one at the 621 Gallery starting March 6, featuring Steve Crow and Pete Williams with installation sculpture and painting. Also, the Artists' League will have its juried show at the University Gallery on the Florida State campus on May 15.

Wild Hair II runs until March 1. The 621 Gallery is open from 6-9 pm on Thursdays and Fridays, and 1-4 pm on Saturdays and Sundays. The gallery is located in Railroad Square, at 567 Industrial Drive.

Bikes 'n' chicks

Get revved up for Spring Thursday night when the Funky But Chic Boutique holds its Monster Mega Mondo Ten Ton Motorcycle Spring Fashion Exploding Extravaganza, baby. VRRROOOOM!!!

Shortly before midnight, the witching hour, a squad of ultra-deluxe fully customized Harley Davidson Gods will be piloted into the club by mad foaming immaculate Easy Rider huns, who will run donuts around the bar and then, breaking the rule of Whodini, park on the dance floor.

As the smoke clears, MC Ben Wilcox will introduce the hormone-blasting fashions. Martha, the boutique's proprietor, promises "biker chic for people who have to be seen in the most fab fashions." People like the lovely Shaula Chambliss, pictured here coiffed and clad in the latest styles.

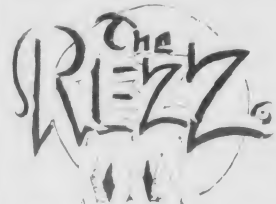

What does this mean? Black hot pants for men and Picasso print short (SHORT) skirts for the ladies. This sounds sexy indeed. But what of the rumors buzzing around town that Martha sprays the clothes at her store with pheromones, thereby making them irresistible magnets for the opposite sex?

"No comment," she replies, a mystical smile playing about her lips.

Perhaps the Rolling Thunder Motorcycle Guerillas will carry off the amazing models, riding off into the sunrise to breed a new race of Mickey Rourke demigods? Or perhaps not. But either way, boys and girls, I ain't missing this buffet of buffo gonzo serendipity and you shouldn't either.

The Bike and Chics Fashion Show will take place tonight, 'round midnight at the Late Night Library. It's $1 for ladies and $3 for men. Tunes will be provided by DJ Carols, hair styles by James and Wayne at Chameleon Hair Design, fashions and fashion choreography by Martha at Funky But Chic, and motorcycles by Tallahassee Motor Works. The bikes will be ridden by Roman and Dmitri, and the whole thing is organized by Evan Gerstein.

Oscar nominees (yawn) announced

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.—Bugsy, a fictionalized film biography of gangster Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel, led a close field of nominees for the 64 Annual Academy Awards with 10 nominations, including best picture.

The best picture nomination for Disney's animated Beauty and the Beast—the first animated feature ever included in that category—drew applause from news media and movie industry insiders who gathered for the pre-dawn announcement at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences.

John Singleton, 23, became the youngest nominee for best director for Boyz 'N the Hood and the first black director.

Runner up for most nominations was JFK, the controversial account suggesting a government conspiracy behind President Kennedy's assassination. It was nominated in eight categories, including best picture and best director for three-time Oscar winner Oliver Stone.

Rounding out the best picture category were thriller The Silence of the Lambs and psychological drama The Prince of Tides, with seven nominations each.

The 64th Annual Academy Awards will be presented March 30 in ceremonies broadcast live on ABC from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion.

Best actor nominations went to four-time nominee Warren Beatty for the title role in Bugsy, two-time Oscar winner Robert De Niro as the vengeful ex-convict Max Cady in Cape Fear, Anthony Hopkins as the sociopathic murder Hannibal Lecter in The Silence of the Lambs, Nick Nolte as Tom Wingo, the brother of a psychotherapy patient in The Prince of Tides, and Robin Williams, taking his fourth nomination as Parry, a medieval history professor on a modern-day search for the Holy Grail in The Fisher King.

The best actress category pitted Geena Davis against Susan Sarandon, both nominated for the unique female buddy movie, Thelma & Louise.

Also nominated were Laura Dern's title character in Rambling Rose, Golden Globe winner Jodie Foster as FBI agent Clarice Sterling in The Silence of the Lambs and Bette Midler as USO trouper Dixie Leonard in For the Boys.

Dern and Diane Ladd, nominated for best actress and best supporting actress, respectively, for their roles in Rambling Rose, became the first daughter and mother nominated in the same year.

Jack Palance, in the best supporting actor category for his role as the gruff trail boss in City Slickers, waited a record 39 years between Oscar nominations. His last recognition was in 1953 for Shane.

The best director category provided the biggest surprises, primarily in the shutout of Barbra Streisand's highly praised work on The Prince of Tides.

Ironically Streisand was nominated over Singleton by the Director's Guild of America, who awards will be presented March 14. The DGA film award is often considered a bellwether of the Oscar category.

Vying against Singleton, Stone and Barry Levinson for best director honors were Ridley Scott for Thelma & Louise and Jonathan Demme for The Silence of the Lambs.

Lady Seminoles stunned by Butler; NCAA bid in doubt

BY SUE MULLINS

STAFF WRITER

Florida State coach Marynell Meadors was so embarrassed by her team's 71-68 loss to visiting Butler Wednesday night that instead of meeting reporters for the post-game interview by herself, she sent all 13 of her Seminole players in to meet the press.

FSU now slides to a record of 13-10, which Meadors said practically voids her team's chances of being invited to the postseason NCAA Tournament. After trailing most the contest to the 9-11 team from Indianapolis, Meadors said she simply didn't have a clue as to the cause of her squad's poor play.

"I am totally embarrassed by our effort tonight. I'm totally numb as to why they played the way they did," Meadors said after emptying her team from the press room. "They're not thinking, they're not hustling, and they embarrassed me so much that I didn't want to face you guys."

Florida State never did quite get into the game, and after tying the Midwestern

'I'm totally embarrassed by our effort tonight. I'm totally numb as to why they played the way they did.'

—FSU coach Marynell Meadors

Collegiate Conference's second best team at the half, never put together more than six points in one run. The two teams traded baskets until Butler went on an eight-point run that included five straight freethrows with just under five minutes to play.

The Seminoles answered with six straight of their own when Christy Derlak hit a jumper in the paint, then two freethrows on the next play. FSU then pulled to within one point when freshman Allison Peercy nailed both freethrows in a one-and-one situation with nine seconds left.

But the Bulldogs' point guard, Mary Majewski, was sent to the foul line and prepared to seal the victory. Her shot tapped just off the rim, but Butler forward Julie VonDielingen, who finished with 25 points and seven rebounds, beat FSU to the rebound and was fouled on the putback. The 6-footer hit both charity baskets and the Seminoles couldn't get within scoring range again with only three seconds left.

"We just never seemed to get on track. I'd say we're definitely on a skid," said FSU guard Danielle Ryan, referring to the team's two upset losses this week. "We should be controlling these teams."

Butler coach Paulette Stein called the win "a huge victory" and said her team set out to play against FSU's strengths. While FSU led her team in rebounds and assists, she said the Bulldogs led in the two aspects that decided the game—freethrows and turnovers. FSU committed a season-low 16 turnovers, but sent Butler to the line 32 times, and fouled out three of their own starters.

"It was really pitiful, and I just can't put my finger on what went wrong for them," Meadors said. "It could've cost us an invitation to the NCAA (tournament). Unless we win the ACC tournament and win out the rest of the season, we won't be going to the NCAA's."

HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Handling a financial project with finesse can lead to a smashing success. A dramatic rise in profits is part of the picture. An infatuation could develop into the real thing. Your feelings for a member of the opposite sex will intensify the longer you know each other. A romantic commitment must be total or love will go right out the window. Protect your relationship from prying relatives or friends.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: auto racer Bobby Unser, actors
Peter Strauss and Sidney Poitier, singer Nancy Wilson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19):
Something terrific could happen today.
A new plan is perfect for you. Be certain you make the right choice. You and a longtime romantic partner can recapture the original magic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is time to turn idle talk into positive action. Do not be afraid to take the plunge! A romantic relationship changes for the better. Your ego could have caused problems. Admit past mistakes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance and good luck go hand-in-hand. You are never too old for love! Community work appeals to recently retired seniors.
If a project seems difficult, get your second wind and try again.

CANCER (June 21-July 22):
Emphasize your desire to do something constructive when talking with influential friends. A new job offer could come your way. Round out the day by showing off your culinary talents.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep up a steady pace at work. You may have to dig deep to get certain information. Stress your stamina and common sense.

Someone could signal you to stop. Keep an open mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid both extravagance and exaggeration today.
Showing enthusiasm for your work will help put this day in the success column.
Problems arise involving scheduling or logistics.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may have to cancel certain plans in order to deal with a private matter. Banish depressing thoughts before they get the better of you! Do not walk away from an incomplete task.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Steer clear of conflicts, but do not act stand-offish. You are moving up the career ladder and need to be at your best at all times. Romance soars to new heights tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Two of your allies may not like each other much. Try to keep the peace by suggesting certain concessions. Giving in to an emotional ultimatum would be a mistake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stay on your toes. Indecision or an other person's deception could make money slip through your hands. Romance is in the air tonight. Avoid rushing things.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A pact with someone at a distance could bring long-term benefits. The scales of justice swing your way. Past favors will be repaid.
Consult mate if you want to entertain at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Curb a tendency to get too wrapped up in your own affairs. Co-workers could turn resentful. Let your colleagues know that you are a team player.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are intelligent, intuitive and easily distracted. Born procrastinators, these Pisces tend to leave projects half-finished. Concerned parents can teach them to exercise more self-discipline. A reward system is an excellent way to begin. Breaking big projects into smaller assignments also works well. More intellectual than athletic, these children love to curl up with a good book. Their sympathies are easily aroused by people who need a helping hand.

Farmer needs players at practice

BY TY SIMPSON

STAFF WRITER

It's one of those days—Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays—where they're in class."

Those were the words of frustrated Florida A&M Rattlerette coach Claudette Farmer on Wednesday as she held practice with only four players taking the court.

Crowded classes and gym availability have made it very difficult for Farmer to hold a decent basketball practice. Three days a week, Rattlerettes' Hazel Jackson, Latraivia Green, and leading scorer Polly Innerarity are forced to miss practice because it conflicts with their classes.

Farmer said the classes the three are taking are not available at another time, but are needed to graduate. Add this to the injuries suffered to some key players and you have what was a promising season turned sour.

At 8-14, 27 in the Trans-America Athletic Conference, Farmer could easily become a manic depressive about the whole situation, but so far she has managed to keep a positive attitude about her team while looking ahead to the TAAC tournament March 5-7 in Statesboro, GA.

At the start of the season, Farmer was gunning for 20 wins, three more than last season. She could not have foreseen the unusual circumstances that her team would come under.

"With all the things that have happened so far this season, I'll be satisfied if we can get half that now," she said.

Injuries to Theodora Allen and Angela McPhaul, along with the other no-shows, have left Farmer acting as the fifth player at some practices and trying to fill the role of player/coach.

Tonight Farmer and the Rattlerettes play Stetson University (5-19, 3-7) at 7 p.m. in Gaither Gym.

Farmer

'(Stetson is) a real tough, feisty group. They realize they're small and they try and make quickness a thing they strive on.'

—FAMU Coach Claudette Farmer

"They are a real tough, feisty group," Farmer said. "They realize they're small and they try and make quickness a thing they strive on."

The Lady Hatters, facing adversity of their own, are without their top scorer Kristy Austell (18.5 ppg, 10 reb).

FAMU swept Stetson last season and knocked them off again this year at Deland (92-79) giving them a 21-5 series record against SU.

Senior center Polly Innerarity is closing in on the FAMU career scoring and rebounding records. She moved into third place in career scoring with her 17-point performance against Delaware State Monday. Innerarity now has 1,327 points, putting her 132 points behind all-time scorer Rosa Hudgins (1,459). She is also No. 2 all-time in career rebounds with 783, just 49 shy of all-time leader Esther Myrick (832).

Freshmen guards Natalie White and Monika Williams are getting valuable experience for next season. White is averaging 13 points per game and ranks fourth in the nation with five steals a game.

Walker shafted out of sled

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
LA PLANGE, France—Less than two days before the start of the four-man bobsled competition, American driver Randy Will kicked Minnesota Vikings running back Herschel Walker off his sled Wednesday.

Will said he felt experience was critical in the United States' bid to win a bobsled medal for the first time since 1956, so he called on veteran brakeman Chris Doleman to replace Walker.

After Will expressed his concerns to American bobsled officials, United States coach John Philbin agreed with Will's request.

"Herschel was more than capable of doing the job," Philbin said. "I think the decision was solely based on the driver's input and preference for Chris Doleman—mainly because they've been a team for the last two years."

Walker expressed disappointment, but said he was not bitter.

"I've always said that I'm a competitive person and that I think the best team should be out there no matter who it is," said Walker, who became enamored with the sport last year and used his raw athletic skills to win a place on the Olympic team.

The name has changed but the quality of hockey remains the same, if not better.

The two-time defending gold medalist Unified Team, formerly the Soviet Union, strolled into the semifinals of the Olympic hockey tournament Wednesday night with a 6-1 triumph over Finland.

The Unified Team, which appears undaunted by losing many top players to the National Hockey League since the last Olympics, will face the United States in the first semifinal Friday. The only loss for the former Soviet squad, 5-1, came against Czechoslovakia.

On a day of slips and spills for some of the world's top athletes, American skier Diann Roffe won an Olympic silver medal in the giant slalom Wednesday while two of her compatriots put on a dazzling show to open women's figure skating.

Americans Kristi Yamaguchi and Nancy Kerrigan stayed on their feet during the original program, and in doing so positioned themselves to battle for a gold medal.

Yamaguchi, the defending world champion, was judged No. 1 by all nine judges for a program that counts one-third of the final score. Kerrigan was second on all but one scorecard.

Proposal for tuition raise criticized by student reps

BY AMY ELLERSON

NEWS EDITOR

State Sen. Bob Johnson proposed a 3.2 percent tuition increase Thursday for Florida's nine universities next fall—a move student leaders are calling an ugly blow below the belt.

They say Johnson's proposal comes as a shock after more than a month of legislative activity in which tuition increases were never discussed.

Newman

The 3.2 percent tuition hike, if passed by the Senate and House, would be placed on top of a proposed $45 million reduction in the State University System's budget.

"Right now, students are being asked to pay 3 percent more without getting any benefits back. They will find themselves in classes twice as full and with absolutely no summer school whatsoever," said Scott Jenkins, executive director of the Florida Students Association, a student lobbying force.

"I don't know where the Senate is going with this. For them to look at tuition this year, that's really low," Jenkins added.

As of Thursday afternoon, House leaders were saying they would not support a tuition increase in light of recent and looming budget cuts. According to Jenkins, the matter will be decided this weekend, when either the Senate or House will be forced to bend.

Johnson was on a plane Thursday evening and could not be reached for comment. His staff assistant did not return a call to his office.

Last year, the Senate and House promised in-state students they would not have to pay more than 25 percent of their education costs. But if the proposed $45 million cuts go through this year, students would be paying nearly 27 percent of their costs. A tuition increase would up their share of the burden by an additional one-half percent.

"When no senator is willing to raise taxes next year, they're willing to put a tax on students," said Tracy Newman, FSA's chief lobbyist.

Johnson's proposed tuition increase, which is being considered in the Senate appropriations committee, would raise $11 million for the university system. Jenkins said the money would be used to fund university based financial aid and student services, such as financial aid

House bill would cut interest on student loans

BY DON BOWMER

Florida State University doctoral student Dean Neuman is closely watching a Democratic tax plan proposed last week in Congress that would give a break to students like him who have taken out mega loans just to get through school.

"I expect to finally get my doctorate degree next year, but it's taken almost $30,000 in student loans," Neuman said this week. "When I start working, I'm gonna have a lot of initial expenses, and in the beginning about 95 percent of my loan payments will be (going toward) nothing but interest."

That's exactly why Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois introduced a bill in the House of Representatives last Thursday that would allow students to deduct interest paid on college loans from their federal income tax.

The proposed tax deduction is part of a multifaceted tax relief plan and is expected to pass the Democratic-dominated House and Senate this spring. President Bush, however, has said he will veto the proposal.

According to FSU's Financial Aid Office, at least 20 percent of FSU students pay for their schooling with loans and would be affected by the bill.

The average undergraduate student on financial aid takes out approximately $10,000

Pacific Northwest to be discussed

BY CHE ODOM

STAFF WRITER

The last of the ancient forests in the Pacific Northwest are under the gun—or rather, chainsaw—and people here should be just as concerned about the problem.

That's the message Sharon Teague, a lobbyist with the Oregon-based West Ancient Forest Campaign, will bring to Tallahassee Saturday. Teague is currently touring the country giving slide presentations on the ancient forests of the Pacific Northwest, and could not be reached for comment Thursday.

But Mike Schoelen of Big Bend Earth First, an environmental group sponsoring Teague's visit, said Teague's slide show will be very interesting.

"She's very qualified," Schoelen said Thursday. "In her presentation she'll be discussing the impacts of logging, the future of the northern spotted owl."

Forests on the western coast of the country should be of great concern to Floridians, said Schoelen. He added the ancient forests of the west coast have great bio-diversity and pointed to the 300- to 900-year-old trees which can be more than 10 feet in diameter.

"We need to save what little native forest lands we have," said Schoelen.

More than 100,000 acres of the ancient forests in western Oregon are already under contract to be cut despite the listing of the northern spotted owl as a threatened species, said Rick Gwynnellen, who works with the West Ancient Forest Campaign.

Gwynnellen said environmentally concerned people in Oregon didn't have a voice in Congress until the West Ancient Forest Campaign was formed in early 1991. As a whole, he said, the Oregon congressional delegation is heavily subsidized by the timber industry and doesn't listen to the people. "They now have a direct voice in D.C.," Gwynnellen said.

Like Schoelen, Gwynnellen doesn't think west-coasters should be the only ones concerned and, in his words, Teague is "presenting a case for the ancient forest" to the entire country.

"The road show that (Teague) is involved with is our effort of going out to the country warning of the possible destruction," he said.

"These trees are in national forests," Gwynnellen said. "They belong to all of the citizens of this country, not just to Oregon residents. This is the last of it and that's why Floridians, everyone, should care. The beauty will be gone."

Teague's slide show and discussion will begin at 7:30 p.m. this Saturday at the Unitarian Church, 2810 N. Meridian Road. There will also be a question-answer period following the slide show and discussion. The event is free, but donations are welcome.

before receiving a diploma. A person paying back that much over a 10-year span at 8 percent interest would wind up having to pay more than $150 a month.

For graduate students, $35,000 is the average amount taken out in student loans. At the same rate, monthly loan payments would be more than $400.

Adding insult to injury, approximately 95 percent of the loan payments former students shell out in the first year go strictly toward paying interest accumulated on their loans.

George Oster, spokesperson for the Democratic Executive Committee in Tallahassee, said Rostenkowski's House bill would benefit the country, as well as the individual.

"This bill is an investment in the long-term success of our society," Oster said. "Students have really been hurt by 12 years of Republican policies."

But Ann Bass, associate director of FSU's Financial Aid Office, said the federal government should go one step further and treat student loans as business expenses.

"The cost of education should have been deductible all along as a business expense," she said.

"Although every tax break that has ever been made gives something, it takes away from somewhere else," Bass added.

Barnett Bank, one of the main holders of FSU student loans, voiced approval of a tax deduction for interest paid on student loans. But bank officials said Barnett would not benefit financially from the proposal.

"This would put more money into the pockets of student loan holders, giving them more money to pay all their debts," said Claude Collier, director of Barnett's higher education loan program.

Bob Lee of H&R Block explained student loan holders would not be able to deduct the entire amount of interest paid on their loans under the House proposal. It would depend on their tax bracket, he said.

"Most students would probably fall into the 15 percent to 28 percent bracket," Lee said.

"It was Ronald Reagan's Tax Reform Act of 1986 that took away the deduction of interest payments on most loans," he added.

office staff.

"That $11 million is not going to help students," Jenkins said. "University-based financial aid is fine. It wasn't cut last year."

Board of Regents spokesperson Pat Riordan, however, said the Senate proposal could be a good sign for universities.

"It might mean they're thinking of increasing our budget overall," Riordan said. "This is a time when it would be good to sit back and relax and see what happens."

He added that students should be more concerned about the $200 million the university system has lost in the last year than a 3 percent hike in their tuition.

"That is a pretty bitter pill for students to swallow ... but this is a time when students should be focused on raising the budget. If they're focused on losing a few dollars, they're fighting the wrong fight," Riordan said.

"We have not been advocating this (hike), but we're mindful that every dollar counts," he also said. "I sympathize with them, but we have to work together on the $200 million problem."

Jenkins, however, said the tuition hike proposal may prompt more students to protest the Legislature's refusal to adequately fund education.

"Hopefully, students will wake up and say more than 'Don't cut us.' Something broad needs to be done with the tax structure," Jenkins said.

Vote Meisburg

At best, former minister-turned-city commissioner Steve Meisburg, praised by his supporters for being the founding father of the Winter Festival and other worthy community projects, has been a mixed blessing.

Meisburg

At worst, he's been an uninspiring disaster.

Meisburg's many critics, us included, argue that despite his progressive rhetoric, the record is clear: Commissioner Meisburg sold out on too many issues, including the coal plant, pro-developer zoning votes, Tadiran, and enforcement of the anti-apartheid ordinance. We could go on.

Whether Meisburg is just an opportunist who uses a progressive facade for regressive ends, or whether, as some feel, Meisburg's temperament is that of someone who compulsively tries to please everyone, isn't the issue here.

The issue here is whether Meisburg is preferable to his opponent Dan McDaniel in next Tuesday's runoff for city commission.

We say yes, Meisburg, warts and all, is preferable to his opponent. Dan McDaniel is indeed, as a local columnist hilariously quipped, Tallahassee's very own Dan Quayle. We hope readers can agree with the proposition that with so many important issues on this city's agenda, the last thing Tallahassee needs is a Dan Quayle.

McDaniel, as the Flambeau learned from our interview with him, simply isn't fit to assume the responsibility for this vital position. He's a one-dimensional candidate with a political mantra of crime, crime, crime. We found his ads on crime to be demagogic. Although we don't care that much for Meisburg's performance, we don't think, as McDaniel implied, that Meisburg is in any way responsible for the murder rate in this city.

Thus, we have absolutely no interest in seeing McDaniel in a position of power, especially at this adolescent stage of his political development.

Meisburg says he's learned a lot about this city since the uproar over the coal plant. We hope he's serious and not just posturing. As we've done all along, we'll watch what Meisburg does, not what he says, and react accordingly.

For the moment, Meisburg's faithful supporters can only pray the former minister is telling the truth.

We hope Meisburg uses his experience and intelligence for progressive purposes instead of the narrow agenda of the Chamber of Commerce. We also hope he abandons the shoddy practice of making decisions first, behind closed doors, and asking what the community thinks later. A practice that Meisburg and several other commissioners have now become legendary for.

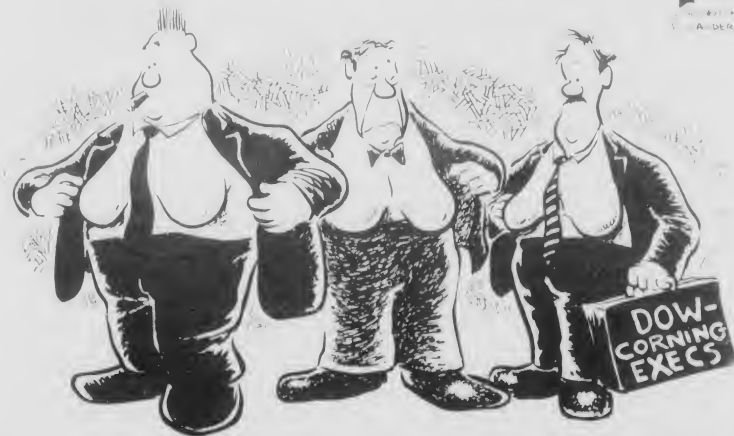

But in the final analysis, it's not faith—it's Dan McDaniel that compels us to urge you to:

Vote for Steve Meisburg for Seat 1 on Feb. 25.

DOW LETS YOU DO GREAT THINGS!

Errrnt! What we said was you could be doing a whole lot more

BY RON MATUS
EDITOR

People, you missed the point. And you're dead wrong besides.

If a slew of recent letters to the editor are any indication of the general mood out there, the Flambeau isn't too high on a lot of people's lists right now because of our criticism of the "Off Our Duffs" rally.

It seems the letters were all written by either current or former members of the Florida State University Seminole Party—one of the rally's main organizers—which suggests they were more a damage-control propaganda effort by an extremely vulnerable student body politico group than a spontaneous outpouring of pissed-off readers.

Regardless, they bring up a number of interesting charges—like how the Flambeau doesn't care about students; how the Flambeau doesn't understand the plight of the State University System; and how the Flambeau should be doing more to publicize the situation.

Hmmmmmmmm ...

Over the past year, the Flambeau has covered the State University System budget cuts better than any other daily newspaper in the state, both in terms of timing and comprehensiveness. We're talking more than 50 stories directly relating to the budget cuts in the past 12 months, most of them on the front page, many of them "bigger-picture" pieces.

Do you remember these headlines?

- "Hacking away: Universities holding ground despite budget cuts" (May 23, 1991)
- "University system budget cuts are in college students' faces" (Sept. 19, 1991)
- "Officials: Quality of teaching expected to drop with budget cuts" (Oct. 17, 1991)
- "Education debate will swing between taxin' and axin'" (Jan. 10, 1992)

In between these and other bigger pieces were smaller stories that either brought our readers the latest on the education cuts or detailed the effects of the cuts on everything from faculty pay raises to student athletes to summer school to the Florida A&M University swimming pool. There were also about a dozen editorials and commentaries condemning the cuts, lambasting government officials and urging students to take action.

If that's not saturation coverage, what is? Truth be told, college students in Tallahassee have had access to gobs of information about the education cuts and the direct, horrendous effects those cuts will have on them both now and in the future. Indeed, we have persistently tried to put that information in college students' faces. And for what?

Hmmmmmmmm ...

Florida Flambeau
commentary

If college students voted, they wouldn't have to beg state legislators not to butcher their futures: Several of them would be state legislators, do you know? do you know? do you know?

Could it be that's why we get frustrated when the best response students can muster to the education cuts is a big, goofy pep rally where they're told to be polite?

People, one of the main points behind the "Get a clue!" editorial we wrote and the staff commentaries we ran was not—as one letter writer suggested—that students should "sit down and shut up" because "you cannot make a difference." Anyone who culled such a message from our criticism has got to be, well, even more clueless than we thought.

No, one of the main points implied was that students can make a huge difference, that students potentially wield tremendous power, and that a big, goofy pep rally doesn't cut it.

There are almost 50,000 college students in this town alone. Come on! If college students voted, they wouldn't have to beg state legislators not to butcher their futures: Several of them would be state legislators, do you know? do you know? do you know?

But alas, it's a well-known fact that college students in this town—the state capital no less if you didn't know—don't vote. Or visit their reps. Or write their reps. Or even know their reps. Or even read their humble, little newspaper.

Hmmmmmmmm ...

Is pathetic not the right word to describe the situation? How about pathetic and downright obnoxious? How about pathetic, downright obnoxious and downright offensive? How about pathetic, downright obnoxious, downright offensive and just plain sorry?

From this corner, the Flambeau's coverage of higher education issues is looking more and more like a waste of precious, limited space and precious, limited resources and the precious, limited time of

Newspapers debate running pro-white student group's ad

BY JOSH MITCHELL
STAFF WRITER

Riding on the coattails of controversial presidential candidate David Duke, the Virginia-based Students For Equal Rights has been seeking ad space in college-oriented newspapers to get students involved in the group's racial agenda.

But before that can happen, their ad has to make it past ad departments, and several newspapers are still debating whether to run it.

Alongside a picture of the man himself, the ad reads: "David Duke ... Do you love the message but not necessarily the messenger?"

The ad then goes on to ask, "Are you fed up with institutionalized, anti-white racism in the form of quotas and reverse discrimination, white bashing and attempts to undermine our Western culture, Politically Correct witch hunts, or the massive, ongoing invasion and colonialization of America by illegal, Third World aliens?"

It also solicits $2 subscriptions to the group's propaganda sheet, the SER Newsletter.

"There's a growing awareness that conditions on college campuses, the political atmosphere, is becoming less than free," C.R. Knittle, the group's national co-chair, said Tuesday in a phone interview from SER headquarters in Alexandria, Va.

"There's a mindset which is often backed up by academic regulations."

SER was formed last November, and Knittle said the group is funded by a "benefactor" who he wouldn't name but said funds other conservative student organizations. Knittle would not reveal the supporter's name because of the group's "politically incorrect" stance on race relations.

Knittle said the recent political correctness surge in the country has a lot to do with his organization's existence.

"A good part of the impetus behind the PC movement comes from people whose message is explicitly anti-Western or anti-white," said Knittle, who is not a student. "Some of those people, if they don't personally express anti-white or anti-American views, they tend to jump on conservative college students who try to protect Western and American beliefs."

Knittle said the organization has only sent the ad to a limited number of college papers—about 26—and he wouldn't provide the names of those papers until the ads run. Knittle added he's received inquiries from 11 papers wanting more information and out-right rejections from three of the papers. Two newspapers said they would run the ad if the association with Duke is discontinued.

Knittle said the organization was already considering severing ties with Duke.

"We're thinking to somehow invoke Pat Buchanan's name if we can. Of course, we probably won't get as much free negative publicity," he said.

The Florida Flambeau found out about the ad when its own advertising department received it Feb. 12. And according to General Manager Dick Sublette, The Flambeau won't run it.

"I normally feel we should be open to unpopular opinions, but this one, I feel it would be hard to take money for the ad," he said. "And this (ad) is pretty disturbing."

Sublette added The Flambeau's ad department never received an insertion order from SER which would be needed to run the ad anyway. But Sublette still thinks the ad was effective to some extent.

"(SER) can get a lot of mileage out of this without even paying a dime. It's very clever," he said, referring to the attention the ad has drawn.

After calling the ad offices of approximately 25 college newspapers across the country, only five had received a copy of the ad.

Nicola Moore, student ad manager for The University of Georgia's Red and Black, predicted her paper would eventually run the ad.

"We're waiting to see. We're kind of holding off right now," Moore said. "But I think we're going to run it on the basis that students can choose for themselves."

Jim Barger, advertising manager for The University of Texas' Daily Texan, said his paper still has not decided whether to run the ad, either.

"We turned it down but it's subject to appeal by review committee," Barger said.

Barger added most of the people at the paper felt the ad should not be censored.

"The general consensus was to run it," he said. "There were more feelings that it should be allowed to run than not."

The advertising department at Georgetown University's The Hoya didn't waver when deciding to run the ad.

"We took it to the board of directors and decided that it was nothing horrible we couldn't run," said Jeff Staadt, the paper's advertising manager. "We decided to run it because it wasn't advocating anything."

The University of Mississippi's Daily Mississippian also ran the ad without a hitch.

"We just took it up to our ad manager and he said it was OK, so we're definitely running it," said Shannon Spears, a secretary for the paper.

The only paper contacted that had absolutely refused to run the ad was The University of Alabama's Crimson and White.

The only response given by Christin Sholund, retail sales manager for the paper, was "We did not run it." Sholund would not elaborate on why the paper didn't run the ad and refused further comment.

Florida State University was the only major Florida college to receive the ad.

KAFRA, Lebanon—Israeli tanks drove out of Israel's buffer zone and into Lebanon proper Thursday, crashing through United Nations barricades and fighting what Lebanese military sources described as fierce daylong battles with Muslim militiamen.

Israeli shelling reached the edges of the Syrian army-controlled Bekaa Valley in the east and Lebanese army positions in the south, the military sources said, threatening to draw Syria into the fighting.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa—South African President Frederik de Klerk, whose National Party Wednesday lost a key by-election, announced Thursday he will call a white referendum on reform and resign if he loses.

"If I lose that referendum I will resign and you can have an election," de Klerk told the white chamber of the South African parliament in Cape Town.

He spoke after the right-wing opposition Conservative Party won a parliamentary by-election in the provincial town of Potchefstroom Wednesday, ending 25 years of NP tenure.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—Serbian and Croatian forces Thursday exchanged accusations of cease-fire violations in the 7-month-old civil war in the newly independent republic of Croatia as the United Nations prepared to dispatch 13,500 peacekeeping troops to the disintegrating Yugoslav federation.

However, there were no serious breaches of the 15th truce, which went into effect on Jan. 3, and Serbian and Croatian officials reported only "sporadic" provocations overnight throughout war-ravaged Croatia.

No casualties were reported.

MOSCOW—Russian President Boris Yeltsin's top advisor on minorities said Thursday that Russia would be better off giving a measure of self-rule to its many ethnic minorities, thus marking a major shift in its nationalities policy.

Galina Starovoitova said that from now on Russia would encourage the ethnic regions in their pursuit of self-rule and would even help the many small nationalities in the northern Caucasus on Russia's southern flank gain greater independence.

WASHINGTON—Embarrassed by a news leak earlier this week of secret official war "scenarios" that included a replay of last year's Persian Gulf War and a Russian invasion of Lithuania, the Pentagon emphasized Thursday that they were just war games used for budget planning.

"These do not represent war plans," said Pentagon spokesman Bob Hall. "They are not contingency plans. They are not predictive of what's going to happen. They are generic scenarios ... designed to test most of our assumptions about a lot of things we might have to do."

WASHINGTON—The United States is holding up the entry of 230 Haitian boat people who may be eligible for political asylum because they are infected with the virus that causes the deadly AIDS disease, officials said Thursday.

The refugees, held at the U.S. Naval Base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, have been diagnosed as being infected with the HIV virus. They are among the 15,792 who fled Haiti following the military ouster of the nation's democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide last fall.

WASHINGTON—The United States urged all sides Thursday to "exercise maximum restraint" and end the fighting in southern Lebanon between Israeli and Muslim forces.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler declined to say whether the Israelis acted in self-defense in attacking Muslim guerrillas, who have fired rockets at Israeli villages.

But Tutwiler said that despite the renewed violence, all parties—Israel, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon and the Palestinians—have reaffirmed they will attend the next round of Middle East peace talks that are scheduled to begin in Washington Monday.

WASHINGTON—Patrick Buchanan Thursday welcomed President Bush's decision to "take off the gloves" in their Republican presidential campaign and immediately attacked one of the president's strongest point—Desert Storm.

Buchanan, the conservative commentator whose 37 percent showing cut deeply into Bush's victory margin in the New Hampshire primary Tuesday, mentioned a published report that Bush had a political television spot extolling his

TALLAHASSEE—Two Florida lawmakers Thursday outlined a plan to balance Florida's budget with revenue from a 5 percent personal income tax on people earning more than $100,000 per year.

Sen. Jack Gordon, D-Miami Beach, and Rep. Michael Friedman, D-Surfside, introduced their joint proposal at the Finance and Taxation Committee meeting.

Gordon said under the plan every 1 percent of tax collected would equate to $317 million and if the proposed 5 percent tax was implemented the measure could generate $1.1 billion.

TALLAHASSEE—The Florida Senate on Thursday passed a revised budget implementing bill to address vetoes made by Gov. Lawton Chiles in the first draft, which was designed to correct a predicted revenue shortfall in the fiscal 1991-1992 budget.

Senators voted 33-6 for the House version of the bill but Sen. Bud Gardner, D-Cocoa, said he expected Chiles to reject this plan as well.

Chiles vetoed part of a bill that cut $167.3 million from the current $27.8 billion 1991-1992 fiscal budget. He refused to accept cuts in the Healthy Start and Preservation 2000 programs.

MIAMI—Manuel Noriega ordered a drug pilot to stop trading on his name in 1986, the deposed dictator's military intelligence chief said in videotaped testimony Thursday.

Cleto Hernandez said Noriega sent him to deliver the message to Cesar Rodriguez, a pilot and one-time friend of Noriega's who had been linked to arms and drug flights.

Beaten bloody

Police found a bloody Tallahassee man lying in the street Thursday morning after he was beaten by a gang of eight to 10 men wielding wooden boards and broomsticks, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said.

The 23-year-old victim was attacked in the 3000 block of Fairview Drive at 2:25 a.m. Thursday. When police arrived, the man was bleeding heavily from facial and head lacerations. Witnesses say the gang of men kicked, punched and beat the victim.

The victim told police one of his attackers fired a gun at him but he was not struck. Officers did find a sawed-off shotgun, and several pieces of bloody broken broom handle in the area, but established no motive for the attack.

The suspects fled in several vehicles: A brown Ford Bronco, a red-and-white Chevy Cavalier convertible, a large black sedan and a large brown sedan. No one could provide descriptions of the suspects.

The victim was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center, treated and released Thursday afternoon, according to public relations director Ron Brafford.

Police are continuing their investigation.

special is gonna happen tonight. Yep. Could be the rapture. The bomb. The CIA sprinkling more folks with Agent Orange. Could be another murder in Frenchtown some eight blocks away over scamming for change to get a piece of Popeye's fried chicken or a pack of cigs or a Bud, some crack. Some way to get through the night. Special.

The inane judges choose 10 finalists, of which two look vaguely interesting. (The black woman didn't make the cut.) One finalist has the Morticia/Angelica Huston look, is into media performance. The other, the funky one who seems to really be doing this as satire, is an English major and percussionist. Is she here to undermine? She's dark—you know—Moorish looking, Italian? Greek?

One of the ex-queens (they all look alike, really) says this is her last night in Tally town, and would we just do one thing for her? That's right. The Seminole war chant. So vulgar and appropriate. No Native Americans on this stage.

The queenies keep thanking the KAs for their southern gentlemanliness. Kinda Rhett Butlerish, huh, before he took Scarlett upstairs and raped her?

The entertainment sucks. "Whoa my love my darlin, I hunger for your touch" is sung by a guy who could wail if he'd just hook up with a local blues band. But it's just campy retro-romantic cornball. Where are the Lawrence Welk bubbles? At least they could toss in a David Lynch edginess—knives or blown-off heads, tattoos, anything.

The swimsuit competition's a hoot. Ever seen 10 women with bullet boobs and high high heels? They walk like storks delivering KA boy babies too big for their diapers. I keep imagining a bathing beauty falling kerplunk on her face.

The talent part proves no better. There's opera, piano recitals, modern dance cowgirl style. One cool show by a batonist/gymnast. The Morticia lookalike acts the part of Beatrice in "Much Ado About Nothing." (Apropos title for this night.) She's good. Talks about how she wants a guy who's young but he's gotta be a man. If not, she'd rather be with (ahem) a woman. Good ole Shakespeare for a little depth.

The percussionist, a sophomore in her tuxedo, kicks ass on drums. Anybody forming a band ought to woo her to them. She's satiric, talented and plays a mean "Mary Had a Little Lamb" on the clackers. A minimalist Lori Anderson lighting plays behind her. Then she breaks out into rock and roll dance drum spazz-out. Bitchin boomin like a great poem. When she's done, she looks at the audience like SO WHAT? and throws her drumstick straight up into the air, hauls ass. What IS she doing up here? Does she know she's the only cool chiquita in a bowl of geeks?

The worst is the blue-sequined babe whose dress makes my eyes squint in pain as she sings a medley of "Oh, Say Can You See," "Amazing Grace" and "America, America, God Shed His Grace on Thee."

Where do these girls get the bucks for glitzy dresses?

After intermission, the MC asks if we're getting REAL excited yet. Right. Evening gown time. Each Barbie Doll waltzes down, gets asked one cosmic question, one nano-sec answer, rehearsed? Real el stupido answers.

Who's the most influential woman in politics now? Barbara Bush, one chickadee says. Oh, right. The wife of.

Is this contest exploitative to women? No, another says. The main emphasis is on scholarship, not swimsuits or evening gowns.

Why, then, aren't the questions stuff like: What do you think of Chaos theory? Can you compare Malcolm X's philosophy to Martin Luther King's? What can we do about the ozone layer depletion? How has synthetic techno-instrumentation changed music? These women, after all, pay money to be biology majors, music majors, English majors, criminology majors. Scholars all.

Lastly, all 20 Helens do an out-of-sync Ziegfeld-looking number to "Something Special is Gonna Happen Tonight."

Morticia comes in fourth. She gets a whopping $200. To pay for her evening gown? The percussionist doesn't even make the final cut. Of course.

The winner is WHITE WHITE WHITE. And I mean WHITE. Her hair's the blondest—white. Her skin really does look a lovely lily-death white. The dress—white. Yahoo. She's wiping tears away. Thank goodness she gets that $1000 to pay off the bathing suit, the talent gown, the evening gown. Maybe there'll even be a little left to pay for a semester of tuition for her International Finance degree.

The local sponsors should be proud to uphold such a Madonna-whore performance. Keeping alive a tradition of Disney theme park. The great white way of beauty, commodification, objectification of the female body. The silencing of her intelligence.

Good work, all. I hope Madam Percussionist makes her way out of there to resurrect. To speak. As her own Sheila E, Edie Brickell, The Bangles, Tina Turner, Patti Smith, Ricky Lee Jones, worthy of Helen-of-Troyism, Queen Nefertiti-ism. All hail the queen.

Have a Sugar Smack snack

BY MICK BUCANAN
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Members of the television generation will remember all those Saturday-morning breakfast cereal ads, especially those with the supercool Sugar Bear from Sugar Smacks Cereal. Tallahassee is in for a bit more substantive fare when the band of the same name rolls into town, specifically the Late Night Library, tonight.

Sugar Smack the band is led by ex-Fetchin' Bones vocalist Hope Nichols and features ex-Fetchin' Bones guitarist Aaron Pitkin. The two started the cereal nemesis band after Fetchin' Bones called it quits in 1990.

"The band had run its course artistically. It was a good point to make a break, and Aaron and I wanted to work with other people," Nichols says.

So she and Pitkin got together and formed a quintet: Chris Chandez on guitar, John Adamias on drums and Deanna Gonzalez on bass. The band's been together since August '91. Based on the four-song homemade cassette they've issued, Sugar Smack sounds like a hypertensive Funk & roll band.

Hope Nichols

Nichols says the band's been busy: they've been touring throughout the Southeast, and will make a stop at the South-By-

Southwest Music Conference in Austin in a few weeks. They'll also release a two-song EP soon. Oh, and there'll be T-Shirts for sale at the gig.

There's another reason to show up at Late Night tonight. As a prelude to the show, V89 will host a "Pledgathon Kick-off Party" live on the air from 6 p.m. tonight.

Why a Pledgathon? Power. V89 wants more of it. If they reach their $15,000 goal, they'll be able to increase their wattage tenfold, from 270 watts to 2700. That's so much power that if they reach their goal, you'll be able to hear V89 crystal clear from many, many miles away. So they'll be begging you and me for generous donations every day 24 hours a day for nine days.

So that's Sugar Smack tonight at the Late Night Library, doors open at 9:00, show's at 10:30, it's 18-plus, and it costs $5.00; and send lots of money to V89 starting tonight and continuing for nine days. Write that down.

Playwright looks homeward for his latest theatrical debut

BY CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

World premieres are not the sole domain of New York or MTV. Tonight at its Mainstage Theatre, Florida State presents the world premiere of FSU alum James Nicholson's . . . And Howl at the Moon.

While not unheard of, universi- ties are usually not the chosen venue for a play's stage premiere. One reason, Nicholson suggested, was that much of the risk lies with the school's theatre department. A poor show is as likely to reflect poorly on the school as on the playwright, plus it is difficult for actors to get involved with a piece they've never seen or heard anything about.

At the same time, as Florida State professor and director of . . . And Howl at the Moon Fred Chappell pointed out, it is exciting for the actors once they've begun, as they create roles and characters for the first time, really contributing to the making of a new play. This is even more the case when the playwright is there to work with them, explain his vision, his ideas of the characters, and to answer any questions they might have about the script.

For this reason, Florida State was very happy to have Nicholson come and help with the production of tonight's show. After the first two weeks of rehearsals, Nicholson flew in from his St. Louis home to work for four days with Chappell and the actors on rewriting and staging the show.

"It's one thing to write it out on paper and have a picture in your mind, it's a another thing to put it on stage," said Chappell.

Nicholson enjoyed the experience.

"It's been about twenty years since I've done a university opening," he said.

"Most writers enjoy being involved in the process," Nicholson added. "Theatre is almost completely collaboration. Everyone has something to contribute—things that I'd never thought of. Plus the more active the writer is, the more input he has on the production, which is important because in theatre, the writer usually

REVIEW

Disappointing Slacker's packed with flak

BY CLARK PERRY

STAFF WRITER

As a moviegoer, I usually prefer to see small, independently made films instead of the typical big-budget garbage churned forth from the Hollywood Movie Machine.

So I was all prepared to like Slacker, a widely praised effort about counter-culture life in Austin, Texas. Written and directed by young filmmaker Richard Linklater, Slacker is a homegrown movie that seeks to explore the life of those who ... well, slack.

"Slacking" is slang for "talking is easy," or maybe "not worrying too much about anything." This hip redefinition comes to us either from an infamous underground essay by Bob Black called "The Abolition of Work," or the Church of the SubGenius, a pretty tired in-joke built around the worship of a deity known as Bob—not Black, but another Bob.

Essayist Black, the SubGenii and lots of other counter-culture movements—including the Turkey City Writers Group, whose members produce some of today's best science fiction—all grew out of the Austin scene. But I doubt we'll be adding Linklater's name to this list anytime soon.

Slacker, in spite of all the hype that's carried it onto the alternative film circuit, is one amazingly vapid waste of time. This mind-numbing pseudo-documentary, shot in the rough style made popular by the works of Errol Morris and Les Blank, is too staged, smug and self-conscious for its own good.

Linklater's general concept probably looked pretty good on paper: he chooses to hop-skip-and-jump his way through the Austin area, staying with characters only a few minutes before dashing off with the latest slacker to enter the frame.

Perhaps he's chosen the wrong people to follow. From the opening scene, where Linklater himself appears (quite unconvincingly) as a rambling taxi passenger, Slacker never finds the focus it needs to make its statement about living the slack life.

In fact, that's the major problem with the film as a whole: Linklater, in seeking to show us what and who slackers are, falls prey to his subject matter. He's made a lazy, shallow little film that doesn't care whether it makes its point or not.

His episodic script does try, however, to parade as many strange characters across the screen as possible. There's a strung-out kid trying to sell what is allegedly Madonna's pap smear, a pudgy bookstore laker whose one-track mind has fallen into the crackling groove of JFK assassination theories, and an old anarchistic retiree who easily disarms a young robber and proceeds to charm the fellow with tall tales from a fictitious past.

Most of the characters, though, are college students, and Linklater shows them doing just about everything except going to class. They drink, smoke, thumb through newspapers and argue the finer points of life, like Saturday morning cartoons and lost lovers.

Strangely, the laughs are few and far between. This movie never connects with its subject matter the way it should, and ends up as the cinematic equivalent of warm, flat beer.

"I may live badly," admits one weirdo ex-con who's a dead ringer for Neil Young on a rough morning, "but at least I don't have to work for it."

The same could be said of writer/director Linklater, who doesn't even provide any innovative camerawork to carry us through this dreary comic strip. He does have a penchant for framing a scene so the tops of characters' heads are cut off, but that may be an artistic statement since there's not much in there, anyway.

Slacker is playing at the Cinema Twin.

to the Everglades to think out what he'll do next. There he meets Mary De Jesus, a saucy older woman, and Lolla Boyd, the matriarch with a shotgun who runs a sort of halfway house for Mary and two "retired" circus sideshow freaks. Add the villainous Deputy Sheriff involved in a drug ring, and you have the makings for a movie of the week, only that's not how it's played.

"The play's more about characters than plot," said Nicholson.

Chappell elaborated: "It's about people who feel they're outcasts, who come together and give each other strength. It's more about lives touching and the effect it has when we can find shelter in each other for a short time."

... And Howl at the Moon premieres tonight at 7:30 on FSU's Mainstage. It also runs Saturday night and February 25-29. For ticket information call 644-6500.

gets the blame."

Nicholson graduated from FSU in the early '70s and took his MFA thesis Down by the Gravois Under the Anheuser-Busch straight to the Milwaukee repertory after he opened it here at FSU, a major coup for a young writer.

Since then, he has kicked around the country, picking up grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, O'Neill Foundation, and Midwest Play Labs, while opening plays on three different continents. His current project is Proud Flesh, about a prototypical race riot in St. Louis in 1917.

Expect ... And Howl at the Moon to be just as exciting. Ostensibly, the story's about a major league pitcher who's burned out his arm, and has run away

More drivels for starving movie masses

BY C. ADOLPH MOORES

STAFF WRITER

Regarding Henry(1991) - "I'm Harrison Ford, dammit, and I've been shot in the head!" Such is the setup for the latest piece of Mike Nichols' mediocrity. A callous and immoral defense attorney (Ford) is shot in a local convenience store and must mentally and physically rehabilitate himself with the help of a hip therapist (Bill Nunn) and his neglected family (Annette Bening plays his wife). He inevitably finds out what a turd he was and becomes a decent guy. This feel-good weeper is the standard fare you've come to expect from a TV movie of the week.

Good performances give the story a little credibility, but overall it's the slush we've been seeing for years. We do learn three important things, however. If someone has a gun and asks for your wallet, give it to him. Secondly, we should shoot every greedy, asp-like lawyer in the head so they will turn out to be decent folk. And, most important of all, Mike Nichols should be banned from the directorial chair.

Hot Shots(1991) - As in most comedic projects from the Abraham/Zucker team, jokes fly at you with rapid speed and have the accuracy of a Charlie Hough knuckleball. The old 40-percent formula (tell a thousand gags and at least 400 will get laughs) is in full force for this parody of heroic Top Gun fly boys. Some of the jokes are gut-busting, some are downright stupid and insulting. Charlie Sheen plays it well, though, delivering silly lines with a serious melodramatic intensity. If anything, it simply shows how ridiculous the films that this movie spoofs actually are. Good, mindless fun.

Servants Of Twilight(1991) - Supernatural poop from Dean R. Koontz's novel about a young boy who is believed to be the son of Satan by a bunch of loony zealots. The majority of the story deals with the boy's flight from his would-be persecutors with the aid of his mother and a private investigator. The theme is so reflective of The Omen that its derivative nature and predictability make the rare moments of terror useless. And you know what? The kid really is the spawn of Satan! Holy plot twist! You'd have to be on thorazine to maintain the mystery in this dog.

Point Break(1991) - If there is one thing I love better than a nicely cured ham product, it's a good bankrobber/surfing movie. What? Yeah, well, that's the premise in director Kathryn Bigelow's latest stool sample of cinema, where the ever-untalented Patrick Swayze leads a band of surfers who rob banks. Keanu Reeves plays the like, totally hip FBI agent assigned to nail the thieves.

Let's get the pork on the table here. This is pure film pus. If you're interested in this, you're a jerk and need eternal chloroform treatments to keep you asleep. If you enjoy surfing, your punishment should Harrison Ford looks like he's regarding his future in movies after making Regarding Henry, and we think he might be nervous.

Florida Flambeau video vault

be much more severe. Get out of my life, you're ruining it.

Mobsters(1991) - The only thing we need less than another half-baked gangster film is a half-baked gangster film with a pretty-boy cast of young, talentless actors. Dig this ensemble: Christian Slater as "Lucky" Luciano, Patrick Dempsey as Meyer Lansky, Richard Greco as "Bugsy" Siegal and Costas Mandylor as Frank Costello. Tiger Beat's introduction to underworld crime, I suppose. What's next, Luke Perry as Dillinger? Gosh Cindy, I never knew '30s crime figures were sooo cute!

As for the film, it's ridiculous. Blatant ripoffs of Coppola's Godfather and Cotton Club will make you squirm while the emoting and alleged moments of intensity are riotously funny. It's Hollywood's cancer-ridden brain at full tilt again.

Disney's Fantasia has historic, fantastic past

BY ANDREW ARVESEN
STAFF WRITER

It is entirely appropriate that two days after Beauty and the Beast became the first cartoon nominated for the Best Picture Oscar, Moore Auditorium is showing the greatest animated film of all time: Walt Disney's Fantasia. This movie is not only Disney's greatest brainchild, it was in many ways his own Frankenstein monster and ended up being his Edsel.

Fantasia is a tremendous artistic and technical achievement; it's Citizen Kane starring Mickey Mouse. But this extravagant project had humble beginnings.

One day Disney bumped into the famous conductor Leopold Stokowski at a Hollywood eatery. Over lunch they decided to do a Mickey Mouse short based on Paul Dukas' tone poem "The Sorcerer's Apprentice." Disney was seized with his usual tidal wave enthusiasm and the animators jumped into the project with equal fervor. Soon, the intricate animation and the expense of recording Stokowski with a hundred piece orchestra had run up the cost of the cartoon to over $125,000. By way of comparison, a Daffy Duck cartoon made at Warner Brothers at the same time would cost under $10,000.

Roy Disney, the studio's accountant, complained that there was no way that such an expensive short would pay for itself. So Walt decided to make a full-length feature of musical sequences. A smorgasbord of musical styles were chosen and the studio's artists knocked themselves out developing new technology and techniques, producing a Pandora's Box of dazzling imagery. Bach's "Tocatta and Fugue in D Minor" featured groundbreaking abstract animation. Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring" showed the creation of the world, and Mussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain" starred the Devil Himself.

In these days of "T2" special effects circuses, the visual fireworks of Fantasia are still eye-boggling. At the time the technical obstacles seemed well-nigh insurmountable. For the "Rite of Spring" sequence, studio instructions advised animators to "Draw a 12-story building in perspective, then convert it into a dinosaur and animate it." Ugo D'Orsay spent weeks animating all of the water in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" because he was the only one who could make it look convincingly wet.

The biggest challenge was the final scene of the film, Schubert's "Ave Maria." Walt envisioned a panoramic shot of torchbearing monks marching through a Gothic forest to a spectacular hilltop sunrise. The special effects crew cringed at this plan. It would require the camera to move nearly 50 feet, the artwork would have to be painted on 4 foot-wide panes of glass, which would have to be supported somehow, and the supports would also have to move.

Furthermore the lighting would be incredibly difficult. But Walt closed off the soundstage and ordered a crew of two cameramen, three carpenters, a couple of inventors and an artist to get to work. Tracks were built on the floor, a camera stand was constructed on rubber wheels, and panes of glass with faint paintings soon straddled the tracks on carpenter's horses. The whole apparatus was held together with tape.

Filming began just three weeks before the movie's premiere in New York. The crew that jerry-rigged the setup stayed on hand for filming, in case anything broke down. They shot around the clock, the camera inching across the stage, resting from 7-10 p.m. when Walt played badminton in the adjoining studio. After six days, the shot was finished. When the film was developed, the shot was perfect, except that the wrong lens had been used and the entire stage, workers, wooden stands and all, was visible surrounding the artwork. With the premiere only days away, the crew began again. Three days into the second take, there was an earthquake. Starting over again, the crew finished less than a day before the premiere. The film was rushed to the lab and flown to New York, where it was spliced onto the end of the movie 4 hours before show time.

Disney believed that Fantasia would revolutionize motion pictures. "Fantasia merely makes our other pictures look immature," Disney told the press at the time, "and suggests what the future of this medium may well turn out to be."

Walt even planned an entire new "Fantasound" quasi-stereo sound system for theaters showing the movie. Unfortunately, World War II started just in time to deprive the film of lucrative European markets, materials for the sound system and the interest of American filmgoers. This bold flowering of experimental animation was nipped in the bud, and Disney wrote off his plans of updating the film with new sequences every year. The sea of red ink from Fantasia was barely recouped by Dumbo and Bambi combined.

Decades later the film was rediscovered by hippies looking for something "trippy" to watch while ripped out of their gourds on LSD, DMT, STP and other intoxicating acronyms. Art Babbit, who animated the famous dancing mushroom sequence, found questions such as "What drugs were you using when you drew that?" ironic. "We were using lots of Pepto-Bismal and coffee, some bourbon. We'd never heard of that other stuff," he replied in 1969. However, the hippie-inspired rediscovery led to a critical re-evaluation of the film which is now seen for the masterpiece it is.

Look, go see this movie. This is what happened before people got their MTV, before hallucinogens became like M&Ms, before The My Little Pony Movie. They used their imaginations.

FLORIDA STATE'S CHAMBER CHOIR, WHICH PERFORMED SO ADMIRABLY IN THE RECENT Clayton Krehbiehl Memorial Concert, vocalises tonight at 8 in Opperman Music Hall. Rodney Eichenberger conducts, assisted by graduate student Anita Davis-Hager. The program's selections are eclectic, to say the least, and include "Four Renaissance Madrigals," by Morten Lauridsen, a setting of torrid love texts by Renaissance poets. Tickets are $7 for general admission, $5 for senior citizens and non-FSU students, and free, free, free to FSU students with validated IDs. Call 644-6500 for more information.

IF HIP-HOP IS MORE YOUR STYLE, REESE ENTERPRISES PRESENTS A HIP-HOP GATHERIN' tonight at the Club Downunder. DJ Jay Skwarded Da Rhythm Chemist cranks it all up at 9, and the will surrender the mike to none other than P. Groove and Sleepy D. with K.O.B. and The Saw. And there's more, more, more hip-hop than you ever heard before. Are you down with that, sister-girl? You better be, 'cause it only costs $3 to get in and get down, unless you have a validated student ID, in which case it's, you guessed it, free. Yeah. Call 644-6710 for the dope on the show.

THE MIGHTY BIG BLUES BAND PLAYS SOME MIGHTY GOOD BLUES FOR A MIGHTY LONG TIME tonight at the Moon. This show is Mick Buchanan's pick of the weekend. According to the Mickster, MBBB will be recording tonight's performance for a live LP. Look for MBBB to take the stage at 10 and play for three hours non-stop! Opening will be blues guitarist Eric Glatz. Admission is $3. Call the Moon for more information.

NOW IT'S TIME FOR THE WEEKEND MUSIC ROUNDUP. HYAAAH, GET ALONG, LITTLE DOGGIES! At Bimini's tonight for Happy Hour, John Blue serenades. Work for Higher, one of the Tallahassee music scene's best kept secrets (and ain't that a damn shame!), packs the dance floor tonight and Saturday night. Sunday is "Dead Night," with Johari Window. Zombie Birdhouse will entertain the muffin-and-homebrew crowd at the Mill on the Parkway tonight and Saturday night. Bloodhound, formerly the Engines, funk it up at the Grand Finale tonight (yo, Superfreak yourself all over the place) and the Blue Monday Guys do their Blue Monday thing on Saturday night. At Club 506, Dead Men Rule, Felix Culpa (featuring the lovely Lisa), and Johari Window do the alternative thing like it should be done tonight. Get more bands for your musical buck! You already know what's going on at the Club Downunder tonight (see hip-hop entry above), but Saturday night, Mr. John "Dixie Dread" Heggen presents a reggae dance with B.S. Sound Systems. This is a RAS Production.

New paragraph, same roundup. You already know about the Mighty Big Blues Band at the Moon. The Hole in the Wall Pub hosts Jabberwocky tonight and Saturday night. The Bang blow up the Flamingo Cafe tonight and Saturday night; No Say No makes you wanna say yes, yes, yes at the Armadillo Cafe tonight and Saturday night; and, of course, Sugarsmack, featuring Hope and Aaron from Fetchin' Bones, help V-89 raise dinero tonight at the Late Night Library. Whew! That's a whole lotta shakin' goin' on this weekend!

THE TALLAHASSEE COMMUNITY FRIENDS OF OLD TIME DANCE HOLD A HOOTENANY SATURDAY NIGHT at the Miccosukee Land Co-op Community Center beginning at 8. Joe Nelson and the Fret Floggers, an old-time string band from Savannah, Ga., and caller Chris Hinkle of Gainesville will keep your feet a-tappin'. This dance is a charity fundraiser, and admission is $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12. Call 575-4115 for more information.

FSU to Duke it out with Devils

BY MARK NESSMITH

STAFF WRITER

Florida State's baseball team, hot off a 2-1 victory over the Florida Gators Wednesday night will play its first home series against an Atlantic Coast Conference member over the next three days. The Seminoles (7-1) face the Duke Blue Devils today at 3:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. in Dick Howser Stadium.

FSU coach Mike Martin said his club still needs to improve before facing ACC powerhouses like North Carolina State and Clemson. But he said the Florida game gave his team confidence heading into the Duke series.

"The ballclub is playing with a lot of confidence right now after the big win," Martin said Thursday. "We've still got a long way to go but last night was a big lift for this ball club."

Traditionally, the Blue Devils are one of the ACC's weaker teams. They were 24-27 last year and kept Maryland company in the conference cellar. But they're undefeated after two games this season.

"It's going to be a real challenge to us because Duke has an outstanding team," Martin said. "We know that from playing 'em last year." FSU won all three games the teams played last season.

Junior righthander Jim Rushworth (2-1) is scheduled to pitch for FSU today. Martin said John Wasdin and Chris Roberts will each get their first starts of the year over the next two games. Wasdin has a 1.17 ERA in three relief appearances and Roberts hasn't hurled yet this season.

"We just felt like it's Wasdin's turn to get a start," Martin said. "And Christopher (Roberts) has certainly got to pitch. He needs some innings."

Martin said the Duke pitching staff features a quick delivery to the plate. Duke coach Steve Traylor will undoubtedly count on that quickness to slow down the Seminoles on the basepaths.

"Duke is quick to the plate, as was Virginia Military Institute," Martin said. "It's going to be very difficult to steal on them. Very difficult. It means we may have to hit and run more."

Martin said he'll again start his "Florida High" infield with Nandy Serrano at third, Link Jarrett at shortstop, Allen Bevis at second and Kevin McCray covering first.

FSU and Chris Roberts play the Seminoles' first ACC baseball series this weekend.

"They're playing well. I'm just impressed with their work habits," Martin said.

Roberts, Ty Mueller and Chris Brock will patrol the outfield and look for Bob Armstrong to be Florida State's designated hitter.

Martin said his team is looking forward to welcoming their first ACC rival to Tallahassee and is expecting a large fan/student turnout.

"That's what it's all about! Our fans are what has made this program what it is today," Martin said. "With the basketball team being on the road and good weather forecasted, we need the students out here to help us."

FAMU shooting for conference title

BY PAUL SHIRER

STAFF WRITER

It's a rather simple equation for Florida A&M: Two wins equals the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference championship. But the simplicity lies in theory only.

The Rattlers first have to get by rival—and late surprise—Bethune-Cookman on Saturday and then always-tough North Carolina A&T on Monday.

Booker

"It's going to be interesting. It's going to come down to the wire," FAMU coach Willie Booker said.

The Rattlers, 13-12 overall, hold a share of the conference lead with Howard at 10-4. But North Carolina A&T is still in the running with the same number of losses at 9-4.

The good news for the Rattlers is that they win a tiebreaker with Howard—although they split with the Bison, they won their game by a larger margin. And since FAMU plays North Carolina A&T, it controls its own destiny.

But, really, Booker would say his team is only concentrating on Saturday night's 8 p.m. contest with the Wildcats. A game that's annually so big it's played at the Civic Center instead of Gaither Gym.

At a glance it seems the Rattlers can't lose to the Wildcats, who are just 3-21 overall and 3-11 in the MEAC. But, oddly, Bethune-Cookman is streaking of late, winning its last two conference games—one of them against Delaware State, which is 8-6 in the league.

"They're playing well right now,"

Booker said. "I don't know what to expect. They've got a couple of new people."

Actually, Wildcats coach Jack McClairn said he has one new player of importance, that being point guard Patrick Stevens, who came to the team in January straight out of the armed forces.

"It took him a little while to learn what we were doing," McClairn said. "He's the key to our success. Now we're playing good ball."

Bethune-Cookman had trouble protecting the ball early in the season. The Wildcats had a hard time handling a full-court press and were forced into making a lot of turnovers.

"We had trouble bringing the ball down the court before," McClairn said. "We needed a point guard real bad."

Sounds awfully familiar to FAMU faithful. The Rattlers also have had trouble protecting the ball, but freshman point guard Kevin Colson has shown signs of improvement in the last couple of games.

Rattlerettes top Lady Hatters

BY TY SIMPSON
STAFF WRITER

A well balanced attack helped Florida A&M (9-14, 4-7) to a 94-88 win over Stetson University (5-20, 3-8) Thursday night at Gaither Gym in a Trans-America Conference game.

Four Rattlerettes were in double figures. Sherrall Bass and Polly Innerarity led the way with 20 points each. Demetria McMillian contributed 17 while Natalie White added 15.

The Rattlerettes jumped out to an early 14-2 lead and held on 46-34 going into the locker room at the half.

When play resumed, it appeared the Rattlerettes were in complete control of the game, extending their lead 86-64 with 7:07 left in the game.

"Transition wise we had a lot of opportunities," coach Claudette Farmer said. "I would say we pretty much controlled the tempo up to the last 1:42."

FAMU almost gave the game away in the closing minutes. Down by 13 with just under two minutes remaining, the Lady Hatters began to chip away at what once seemed to be an insurmountable lead.

Stetson guard Kristen Follis hit two three-pointers on consecutive trips down the court cutting the lead down to five with :17 remaining in the game.

The Rattlerettes were able to hold on as White sank two freethrows in the final seconds to preserve the win.

FSU fullback Floyd arrested Thursday

BY JIM VERTUNO
SPORTS EDITOR

Florida State freshman fullback William Floyd was arrested Thursday for attempting to forge a driver's license.

The offense is a third-degree felony and carries a maximum sentence of $5,000 or five years in prison.

Tallahassee Police Department Lt. Mitch Miller said Floyd, 20, walked into the Florida Department of Motor Vehicles office on Apalachee Parkway and tried to obtain a license with the name Malcolm Bennett and claimed to be 21 years old.

Although the office worker suspected Floyd was giving false information, the license was processed as is regular procedure, according to Miller. Floyd left the license bureau and officials made a record of his car's license plate number.

Floyd was traced back to his dorm room at Burt Reynolds Hall and arrested at 11 a.m. Thursday. He was released on his own recognizance.

FAMU to face early tests

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The 1992 Florida A&M football schedule was released Wednesday, featuring a lineup of promotional games in Atlanta, Orlando and Tampa, as well as four home games and the regular complement of Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference games.

The Rattlers, who posted a 6-5 record in 1991, have hopes of improving on that record after their 1990 conference title run, but their schedule could be as demanding as any ever faced by a FAMU squad, especially early on in the campaign.

The 1992 lineup features NCAA Division I-AA national power Georgia Southern (Sept. 5) as a season opener on the road, followed by one of the early favorites in the 1992 MEAC title chase, South Carolina State.

The toughest game of the year has to be Set. 19 when the Rattlers travel to Miami to play the National Champion Hurricanes. It marks the first time FAMU has played Miami since the 1980 season when Miami beat the Rattlers 49-0. The series between the schools is tied 1-1. FAMU beat Miami in Tallahassee 16-13 in 1979.

The four home games slated for Bragg Stadium are S.C. State (Sept. 12), Howard (Oct. 3), Morgan State (Oct. 31, Homecoming) and Grambling State (Nov. 14).

1992 FAMU football schedule

U.S. hockey tries to repeat 'miracle' of Lake Placid

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

MERIBEL, France—The surprising United States hockey team, hoping to repeat its 1980 "Miracle on Ice," faces its toughest test of the Winter Games today, playing a retooled Unified Team in the first semifinal.

The only unbeaten team in the tournament at 5-0-1, the Americans have battled their way into the finals on hustle, physical strength and Ray LeBlanc's goaltending.

Canada, seeking its first gold medal since 1952 and first medal of any kind since 1968, will take on Czechoslovakia in the second semifinal. The winners advance to Sunday's final, with the losers battling Saturday for the bronze.

The Unified Team, 5-1, which lost a ton of talent to the NHL since the 1988 Games, has displayed a new look. It not only still skates circles around its opponents with beautiful passing, but also has adapted to the North American style of crashing the net and using the slapshot from the point.

"I heard they're a lot hungrier than they were in the past," U.S. forward Ted Donato said. "I also heard somebody say it wouldn't be an Olympics if the Americans didn't play the Russians."

In its 62-game pre-Olympic schedule, the U.S. team went 3-5-1 against various teams from the Commonwealth of Independent States. The last time the Americans beat the Soviets in Olympic hockey came at Lake Placid, the 4-3 "miracle" that vaulted them to the gold.

The American-Unified Team confrontation will likely be an extra-physical affair since the United States squad has infuriated most of its opponents during the Olympics with its rough style of play.

Unheralded Evgeni Redkin of the Unified Team, who didn't even expect to compete until two days ago, won the Olympic 20-kilometer biathlon race Thursday when Mark Kirchner of Germany missed three shots.

Kirchner, one of the toughest skiers in his sport, was seeking his third gold medal of these Games.

Moments earlier, World Cup leader Andreas Zingerle of Italy looked like he would be the winner, but he missed four shots in his final shooting stage and fell to 17th.

New Zealand, never known as a winter sports powerhouse, won its first medal in the history of the Winter Games Thursday in the person of Annelise Coberger—who claimed a silver in the slalom and passed an American cohort to do it. "I'm happy for New Zealand," said Coberger, a rising star on the World Cup skiing circuit. "I'm just one person, but I'm happy for an entire country."

Coberger had only the eighth fastest first run in the slalom race, but rallied to win the silver behind Austrian Petra Kronberger in one of five medal events on Thursday's schedule. American Julie Parisien had the fastest first run, but faded to fourth during the second trip down the hill.

Kristi Yamaguchi and Nancy Kerrigan, America's gold and bronze medalists from last year's world championships, will go into tonight's figure skating climax 1-2 ahead of France's Surya Bonaly and Japan's Midori Ito.

The Americans have not won a bobsledding medal since 1956. And they will be trying to change that early today when the first two runs of the four-man bobsled are contested.

The American bobsled effort was mired in controversy in the days leading up to the event because driver Randy Will kicked Minnesota Vikings running back Herschel Walker out of his sled in favor of old friend Chris Doleman.

During the first three days of practice, with Walker in the sled, the combined practice runs were no worse than sixth out of a field of 40 sleds. On Thursday's two runs, without Walker, Will's sled had the 12th best time.

It is customary for the top sleds in a competition not to go all out on the last practice runs, but Will will be under pressure to win a medal after his decision involving Walker.

With New Zealand and Spain winning medals Thursday, the total of countries with at least one medal in these Games rose to 19—equaling the record in that department set in 1980 at Lake Placid.

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A once-in-a-lifetime career or business opportunity is coming your way! The financial outlook should improve substantially by spring. Resist temptation in May and you will find the domestic happiness you seek. Joint savings grow over the summer. Your analytical skills and questioning mind make you an excellent investigator or researcher. Students should give serious thought to pursuing a career in science. Next fall is the best time attempt a reconciliation with a relative or former business partner. Focus on all the good times you once shared.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: columnist Erma Bombeck, actresses Tyne Daly and Rue McClanahan, director Sam Peckinpah.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A money niddle will soon be solved. Postpone travel. Family affairs promise to consume the afternoon. Evening is the best time for romantic interlude.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good money signs exist today. A shopping expedition is likely to turn up real bargains. Something you receive in the mail gives you new hope for the future. Go slow when making new investments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your fertile mind will give birth to an ingenious idea today. The employment ads offer ample leads. Be sure to say all the right things to an interviewer. Turn on the charm!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Haste makes waste today. Be certain your plans have substance. Check the details of recent financial transactions. Higher-ups may ask you to account for any irregularities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Brilliant ideas abound now! Guard against letting mounting pressures dictate your actions. A bright future hinges on your making informed choices. You find an ally when you need one most.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pushing too hard or fast could undermine all your recent hard work. Wise up and reduce your speed. A gala evening could await you. Introduce yourself to someone you would like to know.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New financial resources become available to you today. The key to forging a business alliance is to show how all parties can be winners. Watch your step if asked to mediate a family squabble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A travel invitation may signal that good things lie ahead. Take a calculated risk in business. Visualize yourself in a position of power. Look to the future, not the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be careful not to get your signals crossed in domestic affairs. Your daily duties should not confine you to home. Plunge into group activities at least one night a week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Evaluate a recent trend and decide whether to adopt the techniques that your competitors are using. Teamwork will improve the bottom line. Set the stage for romance tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The emphasis now is on doing your own research. Do not place too much trust in something you hear today. Messages have a way of getting twisted through repetition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Contradictory forces pull you in opposite directions. Work on simple jobs. In domestic matters, try not to sound emotional. A quiet tete-a-tete will accomplish more than angry criticism.

TODAY'S CHILDREN love colors and will spend many happy hours with their crayons or watercolors. Let these sensitive youngsters have a say in decorating their bedrooms. Cheerful and polite, these Pisces will nonetheless throw an occasional tantrum. They like to control their environment and can balk when their wishes are ignored. Wise parents will offer these children a choice whenever possible.

Mugs just don't cut it in the ACC

BY JIM VERTUNO
SPORTS EDITOR

Why the hell doesn't Florida State have banners for the Atlantic Coast Conference teams hanging from the rafters in the Civic Center? The other schools do.

It would have gone a lot further as a token of hospitality toward visiting teams if FSU could have unveiled a new banner with every new home conference opponent instead of that silly mug they give away to the other team's coach during pre-game ceremonies. Georgia Tech had the innovation to do so when FSU visited Atlanta. Maybe a spitoon would be more appropriate in the ACC. It is, after all, the home of Tobacco Road.

Call it picky, but it would have shown a little more class.

If FSU can win its last ACC game against North Carolina Feb. 27, coach Pat Kennedy will become the winningest first-year ACC coach in conference history. In FSU's first ACC season, Kennedy has 10 conference wins and is currently tied with former North Carolina State coach Press Maravich.

Florida State guard Sam Cassell was named Sports Illustrated's Player of the Week. While leading the Seminoles to three conference wins last week, Cassell scored 56 points and grabbed 25 rebounds.

FSU freshman guard Bob Sura was named the ACC's Rookie of the Week for the third time this season which should make him the frontrunner for the conference Freshman of the Year honors.

While Sura is turning heads, so is Georgia Tech freshman James Forrest. Forrest leads ACC freshmen with a 13.2 points per game average just slightly better than Sura's 12.8.

Duke (10-1), North Carolina (8-2), and FSU (10-5) are the only teams who have conference records better than .500. Only four of the nine league teams have 13 or more wins. A good year for FSU to be the new kid on the block, don't you think?

Maryland's Walt Williams, the guy who came here and thrashed FSU with 38 points Feb. 5, is leading the ACC in scoring with a 26.2 average. FSU top scorer Sam Cassell is seventh in the league, scoring 18.6 a game. Cassell is 10th in 3-point field goal shooting at 33 percent.

And please don't stop selling beer at the Civic Center for FSU home games. Does this mean they might stop selling alcohol in the Spirit Room before the game, too? Sometimes you need a swig when you watch those silly halftime promotions the sports marketing people manage to come up with. What was "Tourist Day" for Christ's sake? Some kind of sick joke?

FSU plays Depaul

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The 16th-ranked Florida State Seminoles (18-7) play the Depaul Blue Demons (16-6) in their last non-conference basketball game of the season Sunday in St. Petersburg's Suncoast Dome.

The game starts at 1:30 p.m. and will be televised nationally by ABC. FSU returns to Atlantic Coast Conference play Jan. 27 when it meets North Carolina in the season finale.

FSU lost on the road for only the second time this season when it lost at Clemson, 68-67, last Tuesday. Depaul has won 10 of its last 11 games. FSU is 2-1 at neutral sites this season and 1-2 on national TV.

play of power forward/center DeLon Turner is also a big reason for their success. Turner has led the team in points and rebounds three of the last five games.

It should be the Rattlers' biggest home crowd of the season Saturday, but which crowd is better: One that overflows the intimate confines of Gaither Gym or one that is unlikely to fill up the Civic Center?

"As long as we win it doesn't really matter," Booker said.

BCC from page 12

"He's playing well right now. (The media) is just putting too much pressure on him," Booker said. "I don't want to put the pressure on him."

Not coincidentally, the Rattlers have been hot of late, winning five of their last six. The returned strong

David Duke's Western, Christian message draws angry protesters

BY MARK NESSMITH

STAFF WRITER

Former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard and Republican presidential candidate David Duke spoke out against what he called an attack on America's Western/Christian values Friday at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center.

"Immigrants that are coming in are not from Europe," Duke said. "And they don't really share the same values that you might share."

"We are of overwhelmingly European descent. We're overwhelmingly Christian," Duke said. "And I believe if you lose those two elements in America, you lose America as we love it."

As Duke addressed more than 500 Capital Tiger Bay Club members and guests, approximately 75 protesters were gathered outside.

"He may try to hide in Louisiana but we're going to expose him in Florida," protest leader Daryl Parks said Friday.

Parks, Florida A&M University's student government president, had urged students to attend Duke's appearance earlier in the week. But several non-students said they came out because they too oppose Duke.

One protestor said he feared Duke's candidacy because of the similarity of today's economic climate to that of the 1930s, when Adolph Hitler came to power in Germany.

"(Duke) represents what started Nazi Germany," Lloyd Hager, who described himself only as a concerned Jewish citizen, said. "We were in a worldwide depression at the time. There was chaos throughout the world."

Most protesters interviewed for this story said they felt strongly that Florida Republican Party Chairman Van Poole should have let Duke on Florida's presidential primary ballot.

"I'd like to see him on the ballot," William Smith, a senior at FAMU, said. "Because then we'll be able to see what kind of attitude the nation has."

During a question-and-answer session with Tiger Bay members, Duke reiterated his repudiation of the KKK but stopped short of saying he was against everything the group stands for.

"I don't repudiate what (oath) I Turn to DUKE, page 6

That face, that face...

...that Cover Guy face. Duke was sitting and smiling pretty for the cameras Friday afternoon in the Civic Center, but about 75 protesters—including a contingent from Florida A&M University led by student body president Daryl Parks (below, right)—made it known the smile wasn't fooling them.

Buchanan concedes he could hurt party

See editorial, page 4

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—

Republican presidential candidate Patrick Buchanan said Sunday that his campaign is doing more than simply dividing his party—making it easier for Democrats to win back the White House after 12 years.

On the ABC news show "This Week with David Brinkley," Buchanan said he can win his party's nomination and the general election, but conceded that "down the road"—if his support wanes—it may become a valid point that his campaign is simply hurting President Bush's chances against the Democrats.

"I am trying to strip the nomination from a sitting

Another FSU parking fee increase is on the horizon

BY GLEN TORBERT

STAFF WRITER

An increase in the cost of parking permits at Florida State University is almost unavoidable and could take place by the end of the year, according to John Carnaghi, vice president for administrative affairs.

"If we're going to have a parking garage, you've got to pay for it some way," Carnaghi said last week.

The possibility was raised at a brainstorming session last Tuesday in which Carnaghi invited faculty and student leaders to discuss the ramifications of the proposed $8 million parking garage.

No decision was made on the issue at the Tuesday session.

At this time, the university is seeking approval from the Florida Legislature for FSU to issue revenue bonds, which would pay for the parking garage. But the banks will be looking for proof that FSU can pay off those bonds, Carnaghi said.

Whether the banks will accept the possibility of future revenue—from permits to be sold after the parking garage is built—or will want the money to be on hand, will be a determining factor.

"It depends on whether the banks are willing to gamble," Carnaghi said.

Other sources of funding are being looked at as well. FSU administration has requested legislative funding to pay for the structure, and private businesses and restaurants slated to be placed on the ground floor of the garage will also help offset costs.

The prospect of a parking permit increase before a parking garage is built made students at the meeting flinch.

"I oppose charging students before putting a parking garage there," Student Senate President Jennifer Tankersley said.

Brian Philpot, student body president, agreed.

"Jennifer and I would hate to see any kind of increase right now," he said Thursday.

Jeanne Belin, a student representative on the parking services advisory committee, wasn't invited to the brainstorming session, which was not a committee meeting. But when contacted Sunday she said she doesn't want to see an increase now or later.

"As a student representative, I wouldn't support any fee increase," Belin said. "Students don't have any more to give."

But Carnaghi said students don't have to buy the permits.

"It is optional," he said. "Less than one half of our students pay (for permits)."

Other issues discussed included where the best place to put the parking garage would be. Generally, placing the garage in the metered lot across the street from the Union beside Woodward Avenue is considered the most advantageous position, Anse Cates, associate

Commentary causes minor ruckus

BY KIM ADDONIZIO
FEATURES EDITOR

Members of the Florida State University community, many of them also members of fraternities or sororities, were so upset about a commentary in Friday's Flambeau they besieged the paper's offices with phone calls and classified advertisements.

The commentary, which ran under the headline "Same as it ever was with FSU's beauty pageant," angered some readers who felt the story cast an ugly light on last week's Miss FSU Pageant and was unfair to those involved.

Staff writer Mary Jane Ryals commented specifically on the lack of ethnicity represented in the pageant, among other things, and criticized the use of such programs to promote academia. Several more callers were angered over an erroneous caption that ran alongside the picture of pageant winner Carrie Pollack, which incorrectly identified her.

Tiffany Bell, an FSU student and Delta Delta Delta member, said she was mainly upset because the mistake didn't get Pollack the credit she deserved. She was also one of several who disagreed with Ryals' coverage of the issue.

"The writer abused everyone involved, even the audience," Bell said Sunday. "It was very unnecessary. As far as (Ryals') comments about ethnicity go, if she had actually done some background work, she would know that anyone could be in the pageant who desired to."

Bell also took offense at Ryals' assertion that contestants gave one "nano-sec answer, rehearsed," to questions designed to showcase their scholarship and talent. Bell said 30 percent of the contestants' scores were based on private interviews done before the actual pageant took place.

"That's where questions about ozone layers, and other political questions, were," Bell said. "(Ryals) was very ignorant of what the pageant consisted of."

Members of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority were among those who didn't like Ryals' commentary.

Bell said the story had angered some FSU administrators, specifically FSU Provost Robert Glidden. But when reached by phone Sunday, Glidden said he had not read the story and had no opinion on its coverage of the pageant.

The story did anger members of the Kappa Alpha Theta and Delta Delta Delta sororities, who hung up signs calling for a boycott of the Flambeau. No one could be reached at Kappa Alpha Theta or Delta Delta Delta Sunday afternoon for specific comment.

Attempts to reach pageant winner Pollack were also unsuccessful.

FSU student Pam Lloyd was also among those to call Flambeau offices Friday morning.

"(Ryals) made fun of the winner, saying she was WHITE, WHITE, WHITE and had blond hair," Lloyd said. "Is something wrong with having blond hair?"

Lloyd noted she had attended a conference this past

Sociology's Tolbert leaves for LSU

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

A rural sociologist at Florida State University is moving on to greener pastures—in part as a result of state university system budget cuts.

Charles Tolbert, director of the sociology department at FSU, plans to leave the university in July for a job at Louisiana State University in the fall, he said Saturday. Although he said the job was just right for him, the associate professor added the budget cuts the state universities have felt had an influence on his decision.

"There's just no way it couldn't," Tolbert said.

Tolbert is one of at least five FSU professors who have pointed to budget cuts as a reason for their departure from the university. For faculty who aren't full professors yet, the allure of other jobs may be too great, according to Tolbert.

"The mid-career people are sorely tempted to leave. And this could be just the tip of the iceberg," Tolbert said.

"The university has, in effect, invested in the faculty member's development," he said Sunday. "Now somebody else is going to benefit from that development."

Provost Bob Glidden said FSU doesn't have the money to compete with many other institutions, thanks to inadequate funding. And the lack of cash goes beyond just losing people, he added.

"If we have to live with the reality budget . . . we may not be able to replace him at all," Glidden said Sunday.

Glidden said he does not know of any other faculty making definite plans to leave the university.

At LSU, Tolbert will be doing research on the impact of manufacturing industries in rural sectors of the United States. The 39-year-old Texas native will see about a 20 percent pay increase at LSU and will be made a full professor.

weekend on women as leaders, where the Flambeau story was a big issue.

"Women are trying to advance, and why are they having so much trouble? Because they're constantly slamming each other," Lloyd said. "How are we supposed to get ahead if we're always stabbing each other in the back?"

Lloyd added the Flambeau should "stop slamming greeks and student government".

"We pay money to put ads in the personals, and they can't even get the greek letters right," she said.

When upset callers couldn't reach Ryals at the Flambeau offices Friday, they called her at home. Ryals says she didn't answer her phone, but received about 10 harassing messages that morning concerning the story. She said she also received several calls commending the article.

"I don't mind women being beautiful," Ryals said Sunday. "It's just that if they sponsor a program for scholarship, let it be for scholarship, not evening gowns."

"People get mad when they're about to learn something important, because everything they learned from TV, parents and culture says one thing, and when that's challenged, it scares them. Fear can be the beginning of education."

Stewart, a Tallahassee Community College student who wanted his name withheld for fear of the same negative reaction Ryals received, was the only reader to call Flambeau offices and call the story "the best thing I've ever read."

"I thought it was excellent and thought-provoking. All my friends loved it," he said. "It forced the issue that college students should be learning academics and not be worried about their outward appearance and status. I think the negative reaction to the story is an indication that this whole fraternity/sorority thing needs to change."

Stewart added he's "a non-supporter of pageants in general. They're not about beauty, they're about wealth."

FSU student senator Jeanne Belin gave another point of view, saying she thought the commentary was funny, but may have gone too far.

"A woman shouldn't be criticized for entering a beauty pageant. It's an opportunity for her to showcase her beauty and talent," Belin said. "I don't see it as degrading to the women, I see it as honoring them."

In Belin's opinion the commentary did nothing to foster an intellectual debate about pageants.

"It uses dangerous stereotypes, which are wrong whether they're positive or negative," she said. "If someone gave me a free ticket I wouldn't go to the pageant because I don't support it. But don't criticize those who want to go or to participate. It's their choice, and that's what's important."

The Florida Flambeau is published by the Florida Flambeau Foundation, Inc., an independent, non-profit corporation which is solely responsible for the contents of the paper.

Florida Flambeau Foundation, Inc., Newsroom, 505 S. Woodward Ave., phone 681-6695; mailing address, P.O. Box 20287, Tallahassee FL 32316.

Dear Pat . . .

Today Tallahassee gets a first-hand glimpse of the notorious Patrick J. Buchanan, former Nixon and Reagan speech writer, co-host of CNN's Crossfire, arch-conservative extraordinaire and now prickly presidential candidate challenging his own Republican Party's incumbent president, George Herbert Walker Bush.

Arriving fresh from a relatively successful showing in last week's New Hampshire primary, where he garnered 37 percent of the vote to Bush's 53 percent, Buchanan will speak today at 9 a.m. on the steps of the old Capitol.

Buchanan's visit also comes just days after New York Times columnist A.M. Rosenthal, who finds Buchanan about as palatable as sour milk at the breakfast table, hurled a damning charge at the American media. The media, Rosenthal wrote last Friday, has given Buchanan a "free ride."

Rosenthal means that Buchanan has not been confronted in a meaningful way about his many offensive utterances, most of them directed at gays, Blacks and Jews.

Rosenthal has a point. Compared to fellow Republican David Duke, it's been a cakewalk for the lace-curtain Irishman, whose disdain for those below his class, especially for those un-pale of skin, is obvious to anyone who cares to know.

Why has Buchanan been spared the feeding-frenzy atmospherics that commonly develop when someone with his Neanderthal views enter the public eye? Most likely it's because Buchanan, a journalist by trade, has many friends in the media reluctant to criticize a colleague.

Regardless, Rosenthal is right to challenge this reality. Truth be told, Buchanan's rise is worrisome. He's a sober Joe McCarthy, a red-baiting bigot. But like George Bush, Buchanan has managed to wrap his odious views in neutral-sounding language that, upon close inspection, is riddled with demagogic hatred.

A look at Buchanan's stand can tell you right away who he is and where he stands. For example, prior to his candidacy, he once declared that David Duke's positions are nearly all compatible with American conservatism. True enough. But why should Buchanan, unlike Duke, be taken at his word that he's not a dangerous extremist? Indeed, David Duke, at his Tiger Bay Club appearance in Tallahassee, endorsed Buchanan. Of course, today Buchanan disowns Duke.

In fairness to Buchanan, it should be pointed out that Rosenthal's animus toward Buchanan was originally focused on the candidate's perfectly reasonable criticism of Israel. In fact, it could easily be argued that Rosenthal has given a "free ride" to that country. None of which, however, nullifies his point about the media's kid-glove treatment of Buchanan.

Here are a few questions reporters might ask Buchanan in order to avoid the charge that he was given a free ride when he came to Tallahassee:

Question: Mr. Buchanan, why do you oppose, on principle, the prosecution of Nazi war criminals, yet continue to cast aspersions on the character of Martin Luther King, Jr.?

Question: Mr. Buchanan, although you like to talk about urban crime, i.e., Black criminals, how about your own defense of the high crimes, misdemeanors and felonies that occurred during the two administrations in which you served—Bush and Reagan?

Question: In fact Mr. Buchanan, and despite your present rantings that the United States should disengage from the world now that the Cold War is over, you supported the arms-for-the-Ayatollah deals, did you not? You also defended Watergate unindicted co-conspirator Richard Nixon. What makes you any better than the urban "criminal class" you profess to abhor?

Question: Mr. Buchanan, you recently referred to China's Premier Deng as a "chain-smoking dwarf." What's more important to U.S. foreign policy, Deng's size or his smoking habit? And speaking of smoking, what is your position on tobacco subsidies?

Question: Mr. Buchanan, why did you oppose the extension of unemployment benefits before your candidacy, but support them afterward? Did New Hampshire's high unemployment rate have anything to do with it?

Inquiring minds want to know, Pat. The free ride is over.

Don't wank

Editor:

I am writing in response to an incorrect message presented in your article on masturbation in your Valentine's Day issue. I feel moved by the Spirit in me to write to fellow Christians and encourage them to walk in the Spirit.

The article conveys the message that masturbation is good for you. On the physical level who could find fault in it? Unfortunately, this is the level the Deceiver tries to keep us thinking on. But God makes it clear in His Word to stay ourselves from lustful thoughts. God's desires for us have been so perverted by the world that we believe we can live in sin and not hurt ourselves spiritually. As college age people the greatest weapon Satan has against us may be the lust of the flesh. Christians must choose to be mad at the sins of the world and not lust after the physical world. Christ is crucified daily for our sins, so we must persevere and run the race before us. Let us not be deceived—we've been bought and paid for and Satan has no authority over our spital walk.

Deliver justice

Editor:

We, the members of the Florida State University Caribbean Students Association, wish to express our disgust with the university's unjustified removal of Dr. Daniel Georges-Abeyie from his post as associate dean of the School of Criminology. Dr. Abeyie was removed without the proper notice and due process that a tenured professor deserves. The late Dr. Gus Turnbull described Dr. Abeyie as a man "... with sound and constructive leadership and with the ability to handle the many administrative details of the position with care and his steady hand at the operational helm of the school." We believe such a man deserved the dignity of due process.

Dr. Abeyie's claim of ethnic, religious, and cultural harassment is very credible given the past history of the school of criminology. The university has admitted that the school has had problems in the past concerning racial intolerance.

Racial intolerance creates an atmosphere that is hostile and not conducive to carrying out one's job. Dr. Cora Mae Mann, a prominent African-American criminology professor, left the school of criminology for this very reason. Dr. Abeyie does not want to return to this hostile environment. One might as well walk into a minefield and suffer its fatal consequences.

Dr. Abeyie and the Caribbean Students Association demand the university take the necessary steps for removing the disease of racial and cultural intolerance that exists in the school of criminology. We demand a formal investigation be made into the allegations of racial and cultural harassment and that these findings be made public. Finally, we demand the removal of the perpetrators of this disease of intolerance. It is only when these individuals are removed that we can then move toward a system of fairness and equity.

We, the members of the Florida State University Caribbean Students Association, stand in firm support of our countryman, Dr. Daniel Georges-Abeyie, and look forward to the university's expeditious and diligent delivery of justice.

The FSU Caribbean Students Association

Valuable asset

Editor:

The Feb. 4 issue of the Flambeau made known that Dr. George-Abeyie was transferred from his position of associate dean of Criminology at FSU. The article also mentioned that Dr. Georges-Abeyie felt he was ridiculed by his colleagues and the administration's decision was based on his race, religion and nationality.

We the members of the FSU Baha'i Club would like to clear up any misconceptions about the principles and purpose of the Baha'i Faith. The Faith strives to uphold the central teachings of unity and the oneness of mankind. The club is an advocate for such social issues as the equality of men and women, the need for a universal language, the elimination of prejudice, and the inevitable establishment of world peace.

Dr. Georges-Abeyie is the advisor of the Baha'i Club and the members would like to thank him for his guidance and support. Thus, to lose Dr. Abeyie due to such unfortunate circumstances would be a great loss to the students as well as the university itself. We hope that the administration recognizes what a valuable asset Dr. Abeyie is to the university and that this issue can be resolved in a fair and just manner.

The FSU Baha'i Club

Jones, still fighting racism, wins distinguished black educator award

BY THOMAS AUSTIN

STAFF WRITER

As a teenager in the 1940s, Florida State University religion professor Bill Jones preached biblical prophecies and idolized Billy Graham. But not any longer.

"I'm on the other side of the theological spectrum now," said Jones, who last week received Florida's Ida S. Baker Distinguished Black Educator award.

"I'm a humanist," Jones said in a phone interview Friday from New Smyrna Beach, where the self-described workaholic was attending a conference.

"At one point, some of my colleagues in Black theology argued that if you were a Black humanist, rather than Black and Christian, it meant that some white person had messed over your mind," Jones said.

But it's Jones who has been doing the messing ever since he was in junior high school.

Living in Louisville, Ky. in the 1940s, Jones went to "for-whites-only" parks and played tennis until forced by police to leave. When he skipped class, he could be found at City Hall protesting the poor conditions of his all-Black school.

Jones said he escaped the athletic trap so many Blacks fall into because of his small size during high school—he weighed 140 pounds.

Focusing on academics took him East to earn a philosophy degree from Howard University in 1955, and a graduate degree in 1958 from Harvard University's Divinity School.

A short term as minister of an all-white church in Rhode Island—which he described as a "rich, white church"—prompted him to leave the ministry. He then attended Brown University where he received a Ph.D. in religious studies.

The father of two sons, Jones grew up in a strict family in which his grandfather, a fundamentalist minister, forbade him to go to movies and preached that dancing was a "vertical expression of a horizontal desire."

Since then, Jones, director of FSU's Black Studies Department, has compiled a lengthy and prestigious list of awards and honors, including the 1986 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Distinguished Scholar Award.

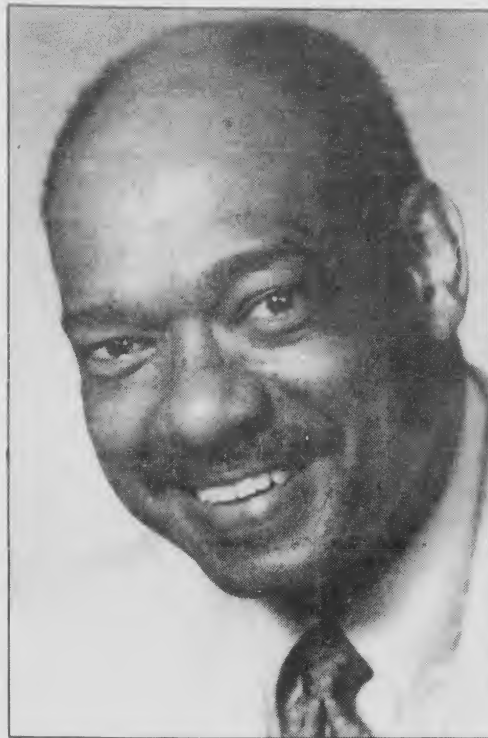

"I have arrived at the conclusion that there are basically two forms of education," Jones said, referring to those of liberation and those of oppression.

"I try to teach how oppression, racism operates," he added.

From the beginning of the entire structure of American culture, African-Americans have systematically been oppressed, a situation that hasn't changed, Jones said.

"The problem is not me calling you honky and you calling me nigger. That's racism, not racist," Jones said.

Racism surfaces when one group accumulates an overwhelming surplus of power which it uses to set up institutions reflecting the biases and prejudices of that particular group, according to Jones. Because of the surplus of power, other groups are forced to live under its rules, he added.

By showing white America that maintaining oppressive institutions jeopardizes its survival and well-being, Jones hopes to bring about a more equitable distribution of power.

Among his many accomplishments, Jones highlights his successful lobbying for a multicultural course requirement for FSU's liberal studies program.

Duke from page 1

took when I joined the Klan. There was nothing about any sort of repression of anybody. It was a very positive oath," Duke said. "I do repudiate the Klan. I do not agree with what the Klan is doing."

He added that the particular KKK group he was involved with used a fraternal-type oath stressing Christianity and defense of the U.S. Constitution.

"It's the same type of oath people take in the Kiwanis club," Duke said. "I'm not joking."

Duke said his former involvement with the KKK should be perceived by voters in a positive light.

"My past is a way for people to trust me because they see an individual who did things by what he believed to be right and not by popularity," Duke said. "You don't wear any Klan robes at debutante parties."

"Some things I still believe in that I believed as a young man, some things I don't. I'm still proud of my heritage."

Duke attacked Poole and the Florida Republican Party for denying his request to be included on Florida's presidential primary. He compared Poole's tactics to those of the former Soviet Union.

"I think it's the Communist Party of old in the Soviet Union that would keep people off the ballot because they didn't like their political leanings," Duke said.

Duke also aimed criticism at his party on the national level.

"I truly believe the Republican Party is not going to survive if George Bush is renominated. I don't think it can win," Duke said. He added that in states where he will not be on the ballot he supports right-wing political commentator Pat Buchanan.

Welfare reform, according to Duke, is one of the biggest issues facing the country.

"Thirty years of the liberal social welfare system in this country have produced more poverty and more human misery than it's purported to solve," Duke said. "The liberal programs have taken away responsibility . . . and encouraged illegitimacy in the broken family. They're the ones who have harmed this nation."

Duke also noted that Bush's recent welfare reform program looks remarkably like his own.

"I had a copy of my welfare reform program on my desk . . . that was stolen," Duke joked. "And then I saw the State of the Union address and I realized the White House got it."

Duke, emphasizing his belief in "the values,

'Movements are advancing to de-emphasize Western civilization in our schools, to vulcanize this republic, and turn us into a secular, ramshackle Tower of Babel.'

—David Duke

principles and traditions decreed to us by the founding fathers," said the multicultural movement in American education is an attack on those values.

"Movements are advancing to de-emphasize Western civilization in our schools, to vulcanize this republic and turn us into a secular, ramshackle Tower of Babel," Duke said.

"(Multiculturalism) is fueled by a left-wing ideology that hates America . . . and hopes to start the (decline) of Western/Christian culture in American life," Duke said.

Reaction to Duke's speech was mostly complacent. He drew his largest positive response when he said the government needs "to require able-bodied welfare recipients to do work for their welfare checks."

"I think an awful lot that he said was really good," Tiger Bay member Tom Humphreys said. "He's got a lot of what America needs."

Several Duke protestors said they resent the fact that the Tiger Bay Club gave Duke a forum.

"Groups such as the Tiger Bay Club should not provide a forum for a hate-monger," local attorney Jimmy Lohman said. Lohman also occasionally shouted, "Klan robes are available inside" at Tiger Bay members entering the Civic Center.

James Van Matre, attending the speech as a guest, defended the club.

"It's a First Amendment-(oriented), totally American organization," said Van Matre, a professor at FAMU.

Tiger Bay member Charles Billings said he opposes Duke but he also defended the club's right to have him speak.

"You have to be able to have these folks out in the open. It's worse to have them underground," said Billings, a political science professor at Florida State University. "In one sense, he's a very clever fellow who can manipulate facts. As far as I'm concerned, he's a professional politician and propagandist."

the vote and won the majority of the vote among union members and veterans.

Also, Buchanan said his campaign shifted from the initial strategy of presenting him as a protest vote to one where his positions on the issues were the primary focus.

Buchanan said his next strong primary showing may come in Georgia; like New Hampshire, it is another state that has a tradition of being tough on incumbents in its primary.

"We punched a hole in the blimp, if we punch another one in Georgia, then we have a chance of the whole thing going up," Buchanan said.

practical way around building a garage.

"I think the students would support my position that cars are a part of the student life," he said. "I have difficulties if somebody says, 'We don't need a parking garage.'"

Belin said she wanted students to call administrators and tell them how they feel.

Carnaghi said, "I'm willing to listen."

president" . . . and convert the Republican Party into a middle-class party, Buchanan said.

Last Tuesday, Buchanan surprised many by winning 37 percent of the vote in the New Hampshire Republican primary, at the very least giving the appearance that Bush does not have the broad-based support of his own party.

And Buchanan discounted the idea that he is merely disrupting the president's bid for a second term. Buchanan pointed out that he won a large portion of

REVIEW

Moon rises and shines

BY CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

Florida State alumnus James Nicholson's... And Howl at the Moon is a tasty bit of Southern home-cooking that sizzles like early morning bacon and reminds you what you get up for every morning.

This smoothly paced play is charming, amusing, and occasionally profound, from the opening gunshot to the final curtain. Nicholson and director Dick Chappell trimmed five scenes from pre-production length for the stage debut of the play in this production by FSU's Mainstage Theatre.

The majestic Everglades set, inflected backwoods dialects of characters spinning homespun wisdom, and choice intermission bayou blues music combine to transport the audience to a different world within the environs of the Dick Fallon Theatre.

The set, designed by Tom Milewski, is both perfectly naturalistic and eerily surreal. Spanish moss, the moon behind a blue scrim that looks like bayou sky, and the dilapidated home of protagonist Lallar Boyd (played by Brenda Hamlin Gibbs) add presence to Faulknerian characterizations that never let you leave thier rustic realm.

The plot concerns Marty Stidham (Jeffrey Feldman), a baseball pitcher in need of rotator cuff surgery, who has run off into Everglades to meet a friend working on a drug deal involving the almost obligatory bad cop. However, the genre gets muddled when Marty stumbles onto Lallar's property, home to two sideshow freaks on the lam from the law, and a six-time divorcee/widow named Mary De Jesus (Laura-Leigh Walsh).

The way the audience gets to know each of the characters, and they each other, informs the balance of the play. More nostalgic than stickily sentimental, each character (particularly Lallar Boyd) spends time reminiscing, which offers enjoyable insight to their personalities, and only occasionally becomes tiresome.

The first act ending is a bang-bang cliffhanger. It's very exciting, and the audience doesn't see it coming. The play finishes without a Hollywood happy ending, which works nicely to underscore the bitterseet nostalgia of a life with the knowledge of time's motion. If the play ends a bit anticlimactically, it is nonetheless more fitting than a denouement at the emotional crux of the play.

There are more than a few Florida insider jokes involving Immokalee (wino junction) and East Coast condos among others. The play has been workshopped a number of times, and it shows in the zinging one liners and sharp repartee.

Give the credit to Nicholson for bringing five different characters to life without excess explication. The actors and actresses also deserve praise for solid all-around performances. Special mention goes to Gibbs, who does a wonderful job with the rich character of Lallar Boyd, and John Gregorio, who plays the crusty, sideshow veteran Stoney.

... And Howl at the Moon shows February 25-29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Richard G. Fallon Theatre at Florida State. For ticket information call 644-6500.

Women's Film Series opens

BY KATI KAIRIES
ARTS EDITOR

The exploitation of women has greased the wheels of the Hollywood movie machine since the first silent film amazed and enthralled audiences at the turn of the century. Ironically, that very exploitation has spawned a fertile and growing sub-genre in film—movies for and about women, produced and directed entirely by women. And while some of these films have built up critical and cult followings, most are shamefully well-kept secrets from the movie-going public.

The Center for Participant Education's Women's Film Series, which screens the first of seven offerings tonight, should remedy that. Each of the films featured in the series gives unique insight into issues that directly affect women (and men) today. And they are anything but the stereotypical humorless feminist rants the term "women's films" conjures up (what threatened male ego was behind the genesis of that perception, anyway?).

Tonight's film is a case in point. On Guard is about four lesbians, ranging from an aerobics instructor to a disillusioned nurse, who combine efforts to sabotage UTERO, a reproductive facility, and who try to get the word out about a Brave New World bioreproduction line—hardly your standard feminist polemic!

The other films in the series treat such subjects as sexist imagery, rape, and society's ideas of beauty with humor and compassion. All films in the series will be shown twice each night, at 7:30 and 9:30, in Moore Auditorium. There is no admission charge.

"Chicks in Flicks: A Women's Film Series" will screen the following films on the following dates:

Monday, Feb. 24: On Guard—Four lesbians unite to expose a bioreproduction conspiracy.

Monday, March 16: Rate It X—An unflinching, sometimes hilarious look at sexism in America.

Tuesday, March 17: The Orientation Express and Hair Piece: A Film for Nappy Headed People—Two animated pieces, the first a montage of cut-outs spanning three decades of Life magazine's version of the feminine mystique, and the second a satire on the question of self image for Black women living in a society dominated by white ideals of beauty.

Tuesday, March 17: Waking Up To Rape—A powerful film examining the personal and societal issues surrounding rape.

Monday, March 30: In The Best Interest of the Children—A groundbreaking film on lesbian mothering that focuses on the diversity of experience, race and class among eight lesbian mothers and their children.

Monday, March 30: Mirror Mirror—A provocative exploration of the relationship between a women's body image and the quest for the idealized female form that intersperses women's comments on how they view their own bodies with footage depicting beauty contests in the 1930's.

Seminoles fall to DePaul 85-75

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
ST. PETERSBURG—Senior center Stephen Howard scored a season-high 20 points Sunday to lead DePaul to an 85-75 win over No. 16 Florida State.

DePaul improved to 18-6, while the Seminoles fell to 18-8. It was the second straight loss for FSU.

After DePaul lost leading scorer David Booth, who had 18 points, with an ankle injury five minutes into the second half, Howard picked up the scoring slack with 20 points in the half.

Terry Davis also chipped in with 23 points in leading the Blue Demons to their 12th win in their last 13 outings.

Florida State's leading scorer, junior Sam Cassell, was held to nine points as DePaul used excellent defense and went 6 for 6 from the free throw line down the stretch to preserve the victory.

The Seminoles were led by Doug Edwards' career-high 34 points, which included 19 in the second half. His free throw with just over two minutes remaining brought Florida State to within 79-75 before DePaul clinched the game at the free throw line.

FSU closes out its Atlantic Coast Conference and regular season against the fourth-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels in the Civic Center Thursday night.

FSU's leading scorer, junior Sam Cassell, was held to nine points as DePaul used excellent defense

North Carolina, 18-5, 8-4 ACC, lost to North Carolina State 99-94 Saturday in Chapel Hill, N.C. With the Tar Heels' loss, FSU moved into second place in the ACC.

FAMU travels to unruly A&T in title quest

BY PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

To Willie Booker, a visit to North Carolina A&T doesn't exactly warm his heart with anticipated hospitality. After all, this Greensboro, N.C. college ropes out its basketball fans (yes, a rope around the court) to help prevent them from fighting with the team benches.

"I'd have to say they have one of the more unruly crowds," Booker said. "I hate to even play there. They've had a couple of fights in the past not with the players but with the trainer or the scorekeeper."

Yet the Rattlers have a showdown with the Aggies tonight at 7:30 at Greensboro, a game that could decide who will be the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference regular season champs.

"We have to forget about their crowd and we're going to go in there and try to win it," Booker said.

A FAMU win means a FAMU title. The Rattlers, at 14-12 overall and 11-4 in the conference, have the same number of league losses as both Howard and North Carolina A&T but they win any tiebreaker.

However, if FAMU loses this game—its season finale—it'll wait to see if Howard or North Carolina A&T flubs in their remaining conference games—Howard still plays Delaware State and A&T still plays Coppin State.

Roberts pitches FSU past Duke

FROM STAFF REPORTS

In his first time on the mound this season, Florida State's Chris Roberts pitched a four-hit complete game to lead the Seminoles to a 1-0 win over the Duke Blue Devils Sunday afternoon before 1,002 fans at Dick Howser Stadium.

Sunday's win was the second for the Seminoles in their first Atlantic Coast Conference series. The fifth-ranked Seminoles (9-2, 2-1) beat the Blue Devils (3-2, 1-2) 13-1 Friday and lost 5-4 Saturday.

Roberts, 1-0, struck out six and walked two.

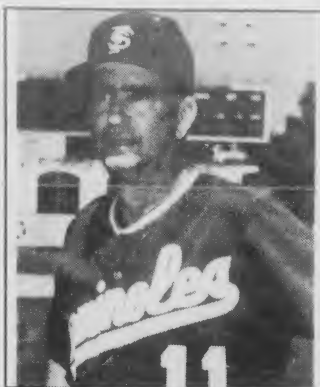

"(Roberts) was changing speeds extremely well and that's what pitching is all about," said Duke coach Steve Traylor. "The purpose of pitching is to keep the guys off balance and I just think he did a great job of that."

The Duke pitching staff kept the Seminole bats in check as well, giving up only four hits on the afternoon, three of which were bunts. The only score of the game came in the first inning when Grady Jordan stole home on a double steal.

"Give (FSU coach Mike Martin) the credit for having the foresight to know that a first inning steal of home would win it," Traylor said.

Martin said he was pleased with his team's first conference effort as a whole but said that tough times could lie ahead for the Seminoles in the ACC.

"I was very pleased with the way we played (Sunday)," Martin said. "We got good pitching from Chris Roberts and made some good plays defensively. (But) Duke was last season's seventh-place team in the ACC last year and if this is any indication of how good the seventh-place team is to the rest of the conference, we could be facing some tough games."

Martin

Graf sets mark in FSU sweep

BY DAVID BOEHM
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Florida State softball coach JoAnne Graf reached a milestone in her career Sunday picking up her 600th win in a sweep of the University of West Florida Argonauts at Lady Seminole field.

The Seminoles won both games of the soggy double header by identical scores of 2-0 behind solid pitching by starters Toni Gutierrez and Rebecca Aase.

The first game saw the Seminoles scoring first in the second inning when Argonaut starter Cindy Weibert walked FSU's Leslie Barton, then threw a wild pitch sending Barton to second. A sacrifice fly down the third base line by Cindy Gordon scored Barton on the next play.

The game's only other run came in the third when Weibert walked Seminole right fielder Susan Buttery who scored when shortstop Penny Squeiros singled. "We came out a little sluggish," Graf said, "I think it may have been the dreary weather. Our bats were quiet but Toni Gutierrez pitched well for us."

Gutierrez got in a groove early giving up only one hit while striking out 12 Argonaut batters. The Seminole defense held up in the light drizzle that lasted for the first three innings.

In the second game Seminole starter Rebecca Aase struggled early.

"Rebecca was trying to work on some pitches and wound up walking a few batters," Graf said.

Fortunately for FSU, the Argonauts could not capitalize once they reached base. In the fifth, Argonaut shortstop Sandy Bezold walked on four pitches and then stole second. Aase then followed with a wild pitch sending Bezold to third. After gaining her composure, Aase struck out Kristen Warren and Seminole shortstop Penny Siqueros made a diving grab in the hole to rob Cheryl Malik of a base hit stopping the Argonaut rally.

FSU's two runs came in the first and fifth innings off Argonaut starter Denelle Harvey.

"I was glad to get the 600th win at home and early in the season. It is a tribute to the success of the whole Seminole sports program"

Ronkin's New LSAT Premium Program: The Best Way To Prepare For The LSAT

If you're one of the nation's 95,000 applicants determined to get into an accredited law school, you know the competition is tough. Since there are only 44,000 openings, a high score on the LSAT is crucial.

That's why Ronkin created the LSAT Premium Program, which offers a choice of three varied levels of assistance.

• LSAT Preparation Course

Using the most recently updated curriculum, our 40-hour course stresses critical thinking, argument analysis and logical reasoning. Besides classroom time, our comprehensive LSAT course provides live tutorials, three diagnostic exams, three practice exams, a computer-based tutorial program, homework materials that include release LSATs, and a toll-free Dial-A-Teacher line. Two-day clinics, which are included in Ronkin's LSAT Gold and Platinum Packages are also available for an additional fee.

• LSAT Gold Package

In addition to the 40-hour LSAT course, Ronkin's LSAT Gold Package includes our two-day LSAT Intensive Study Clinics offered immediately prior to LSAT examination date. These clinics concentrate on Logical Reasoning and Logic Games. The Gold Package also includes our Law School Success Program, which covers law school exam preparation, legal writing, legal research, and career planning.

• LSAT Platinum Package

This plan provides everything you'll need to get into law school and to be a success. Enroll and you'll receive our LSAT Preparation Course, LSAT Intensive Study Clinics, Law School Success Program, plus our Law School Selection and Application Assistance Programs.

So if you're looking for the best in LSAT and law school preparation programs, call The Ronkin Educational Group.

SPORTS BRIEFS

FAMU and FSU go head-to-head tonight in women's basketball in the Civic Center at 7 p.m. Both teams were winners Saturday as the Rattlerettes beat Bethune-Cookman 71-61 led by Polly Innerarity's 19 points. FSU rolled past Northern Illinois 99-74. The Lady Seminoles were led by Tia Paschal's 23 points. FAMU is 10-14 on the season, FSU is 14-10.

Sign-up for sorority racquetball begins today and ends Friday at 4:30 p.m. Play begins Monday, March 2.

The annual IM Swimming Championships will be held in the Leach Aquatic Center on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 10 and 11. Sign-up for both men and women begins today. The IM office will also be offering a series of swimming clinics sponsored by the FSU Swim Team. Clinics will be held from 5 to 6 p.m. March 2, 4, 6, and 9 in the Leach Center Pool.

The Third Annual Spring Fling volleyball tournament will be held March 7-8. Sign-up for this popular event begins today and there is a $10 entry fee per team. There will be an open four-man division and a co-rec triples division. Sign-up for the regular IM tournament also begins today. Two-man divisions for men, fraternities and independents and four-player teams for women and sororities will be offered.

The place to sign up for any of these events is room 136 Tully Gym. For more information on any of these activities, call the intramural office at 644-2430.

The conference winner gets the No. 1 seed in the MEAC tournament, which will be held March 5-7. Since a loss tonight could mean a seeding as low as No. 3 for FAMU, Booker re-iterates the game's importance.

"It definitely makes a difference. If we're No. 1 we play the No. 8 team. If we're No. 3 we play the No. 6 team," Booker said.

Saturday, the Rattlers easily got by rival Bethune-Cookman at the Civic Center with a 94-81 win. FAMU, winner of six of its last seven, showed its increasing seriousness about winning. It went almost solely to big guns Reggie Finney, DeLon Turner and Kelvin Daniels, who scored 69 combined points. Guard Darrell Williams added 19 for the Rattlers.

HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will finally get the praise and financial rewards you deserve. Be on the lookout for exciting new business opportunities between now and early May. Family ties grow stronger throughout the spring. Handle practical matters with dispatch in June. Being independent will bring you wonderful benefits next August. Personal research pays off big where an employment search is concerned. A promotion or raise is possible in October. A family reunion leads to an overdue reconciliation as Christmas approaches.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: newscaster Paula Zahn, actors Barry Bostwick and Edward James Olmos, baseball star Eddie Murray.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get down to brass tacks in business negotiations. Handle routine affairs carefully to avoid making costly mistakes. Your interest in mystical matters balances your shrewd, meticulous style.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stormy weather is possible at work. Keep a low profile in all employment affairs. Even minor errors could lead to major complications. Let sleeping dogs lie.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Innovative ideas abound. The trick is turning them to practical use! Seek new clues to a loved one's recent behavior. You may be overlooking something vital.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refuse to let someone ruffle your feathers this morning. A measured response is essential even if your patience is running short. Afternoon is the best time for negotiating and signing contracts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The travelers among you will delight in finding interesting places to visit now. Listen to your inner voice if uncertain what to do about romance. A newcomer makes your heart skip a beat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Continue to cultivate the ambition that has been growing within you. Now is the ideal time to intensify your studies. Seek family members' cooperation before revising a budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for making new business connections and expanding your social horizons. Do not be shy about describing your talents or an exciting opportunity could pass you by.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your inventive streak helps you turn a job site into a smooth-running operation now. Be very careful if tempted to start an office romance; there is more at stake than you realize.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Clinging to fixed ways could create problems at work or home. Give yourself room to grow. A new business venture could be touch and go for a while. Skip the long-distance calls.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A day when pent-up energy could get the best of you. An exercise class or brisk walk will do you a world of good! The evening looks festive and romantic. Dress up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your popularity is on the rise at work. Your good humor and common sense win accolades from associates of the opposite sex. Good vibrations are centered at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You bask in the spotlight at a business meeting or social event. The eyes of love are also upon you. Secret negotiations could lead to new career success. Use your shrewd insights.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are independent thinkers who pride themselves on being tolerant. They firmly believe in "live and let live." Parents may worry that these open-minded children will be influenced by their less well-behaved companions. It is much more likely that these considerate Pisces will persuade their pals to shape up! Strong intellectual curiosity makes them top flight scholars.

University students have an excellent shot at avoiding a tuition increase if budget cuts are imposed this year, but if legislators come up with more money for universities, a small hike in their tuition may be the trade-off.

House Appropriations chair Rep. Ron Saunders and Senate Appropriations chair Sen. Winston "Bud" Gardner Jr. met Monday and decided not to place a 3.2 percent tuition increase in their final conference report, according to Rep. Buzz Ritchie, House Appropriations

Buchanan continues battle with Bush on steps of the Capitol

BY MARK NESSMITH

Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan greeted approximately 250 people Friday at the steps of the Old Capitol building by declaring "the Buchanan Brigades have arrived."

Buchanan is the second presidential candidate to visit Tallahassee in the past week. And like David Duke, who spoke Friday, Buchanan was met head-on, in part, by his opponents.

For Buchanan, however, the opposition was from a bit closer to home, namely members of Leon County's Bush/Quayle '92 Primary Committee.

Referring to nearly 30 Bush/Quayle sign-toters who had gathered near Monroe street, Buchanan announced that he was in town to "do battle with the folks back there."

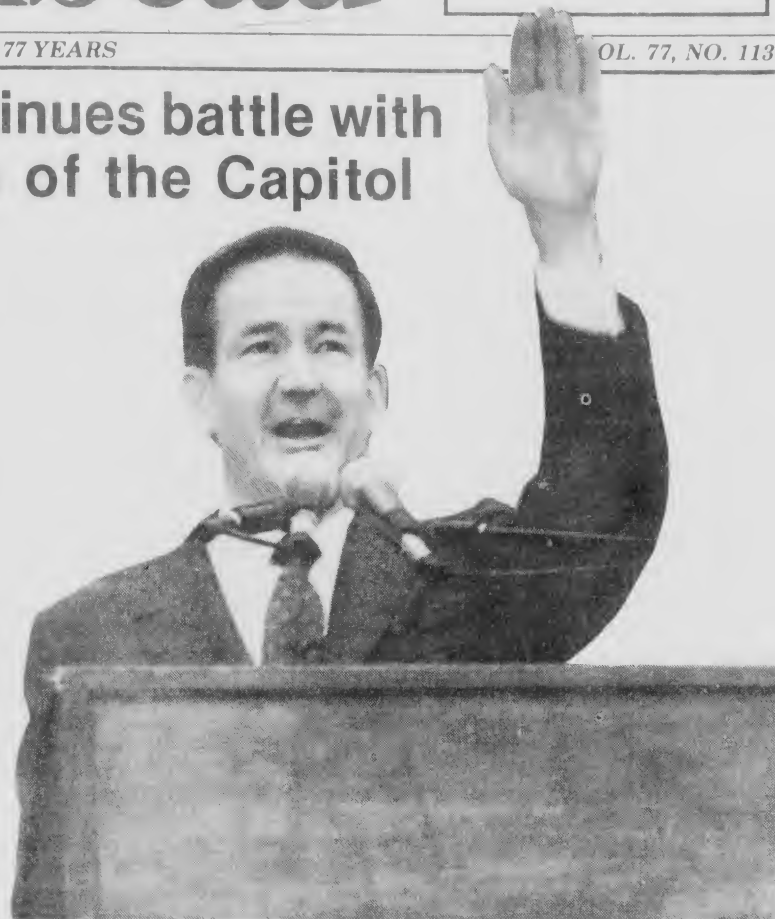

Buchanan's speech centered around his campaign theme of positioning himself as a conservative Washington outsider and labeling George Bush a liberal Republican.

"Old King George up there in Washington promised us he would do one thing on taxes and he turned around and raised them," Buchanan said in a speech that lasted nearly 15 minutes.

"He promised he would stand up against a quota bill . . . and he turned around and caved in on us. And (federal spending) has exploded at the domestic level twice as fast as it did under Jimmy Carter," said Buchanan, campaigning for the upcoming Florida primaries March 10.

Ken Connor, chair of the local Bush/Quayle committee, said he had called several Bush supporters asking them to show up at the rally.

"Sure, I called a few Bush/Quayle friends and asked them to come out and show their support," Connor said. "I think it represents a strong showing for the president, plain and simple."

Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan bashed Bush in front of 250 people on the steps of the old Capitol Monday.

He also offered an explanation for the support Buchanan has received from Republicans recently.

"Those folks who support Pat Buchanan . . . are folks who are reflecting a misdirected anger," Connor said. "I think their real beef is with the Congress."

Various political analysts have said that in order to avoid creating additional party dissension, Bush has avoided criticizing Buchanan by name. That responsibility, they say, has been delegated to Vice President Dan Quayle.

Buchanan, apparently aware of Bush's strategy, fired back at Quayle and Bush, referring to Quayle as "young Dan" three times in the brief speech.

"I noticed something young Dan said on TV yesterday," Buchanan recalled. "George Bush didn't break that tax pledge, the Congress made him do it." It's the old Flip Wilson defense, the devil made me do it."

Like Duke, who has been kept off several state primary ballots, Buchanan had some criticism of his party's hierarchy. Buchanan complained he's had

Davis, who lobbies Florida lawmakers on behalf of Florida A&M University, does political battle with the Legislature mainly to get more money for the university—an especially messy

FAMU stands to lose close to $2 million under the current budget plan expected to pass both houses of the Legislature.

Bush budget could hurt AIDS research

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

WASHINGTON—Work toward a successful anti-AIDS vaccine and treatments for the fatal disease could be slowed by the administration's proposed research budget, the government's top AIDS researcher told a congressional panel Monday.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease, said the $873 million in President Bush's budget for National Institutes of Health AIDS research leaves up to 25 percent of valid studies unfunded.

However, Fauci stood by his earlier projection that an effective AIDS vaccine would be developed by the end of this decade.

Testifying before the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, Fauci said, "We will not be able to do everything that I think would be scientifically justified."

"It will not have the impact where we won't be able to do something, but we may have to delay it or it may take a longer period of time rather than being able to do it as expeditiously as we would scientifically like to," Fauci said.

As an example, Fauci said, limited funding for the AIDS Clinical Trial Group program, which supports study of experimental drugs at centers nationwide, means cutting four sites from the 32 proposed. Some centers whose grants were being renewed face budget cuts up to 40 percent.

"So the impact ... would be slowing down things that need to be accelerated, such as the vaccine development, the drug development, the clinical trials," Fauci said.

"(If) it's something you might project you can get done in a few years, three or four years, (it) may take two or three years longer," he said.

Ronkin's New LSAT Premium Program: The Best Way To Prepare For The LSAT

If you're one of the nation's 95,000 applicants determined to get into an accredited law school, you know the competition is tough. Since there are only 44,000 openings, a high score on the LSAT is crucial.

That's why Ronkin created the LSAT Premium Program which offers a choice of three varied levels of assistance.

• LSAT Preparation Course

Using the most recently updated curriculum, our 40-hour course stresses critical thinking, argument analysis and logical reasoning. Besides classroom time, our comprehensive LSAT course provides live tutorials, three diagnostic exams, three practice exams, a computer-based tutorial program, homework materials that include released LSATs, and a toll-free Dial-A-Teacher line. Two-day clinics, which are included in Ronkin's LSAT Gold and Platinum Packages, are also available for an additional fee.

• LSAT Gold Package

In addition to the 40-hour LSAT course, Ronkin's LSAT Gold Package includes our two-day LSAT Intensive-Study Clinics offered immediately prior to LSAT examination dates. These clinics concentrate on Logical Reasoning and Logic Games. The Gold Package also includes our Law School Success Program which covers law school exam preparation, legal writing, legal research, and career planning.

• LSAT Platinum Package

This plan provides everything you need to get into law school and to be successful. Enroll and you'll receive our LSAT Preparation Course, LSAT Intensive-Study Clinics, Law School Success Program, plus our Law School Selection and Application Assistance Program.

So if you're looking for the best LSAT and law school preparation programs, call The Ronkin Educational Group.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—President Frederik de Klerk set March 17 for a "momentous" whites-only referendum on whether to continue his reform policies that eventually would bring full citizenship to the nation's blacks.

At a news conference in Cape Town, de Klerk explained that he regarded the referendum, which has drawn widespread criticism for its racial nature, as the last test of white opinion separate from the rest of South Africans. Blacks are not yet permitted to vote.

JERUSALEM—A masked Arab assailant Monday fatally shot an Israeli security guard who was riding along with a gasoline truck in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, officials said.

The attack occurred at a filling station on the southern outskirts of the city of Jenin, 55 miles north of Jerusalem.

Jewish settlers promptly said they would establish a new outpost on the West Bank as an answer to the violence.

ST. CATHARINES, Ontario—Dubbing the day "Black Monday," workers and residents glumly accepted the morning news that ailing General Motors plans to eliminate 2,415 local jobs, about a third of its work force, by 1995.

"There's a lot of shocked people out there," said Gabe McNally, vice president of Canadian Autoworkers local number 199.

"People are very glum, they're calling it a real 'Black Monday.' It really blew people away," McNally said.

MOSCOW—Russia said Monday that if Armenia and Azerbaijan cannot stop the killing in the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh enclave, then they should at least agree to call in United Nations peacekeeping troops.

"We believe that both sides should turn to the assistance of the international community," Russian Foreign Ministry spokesman Vitaly Churkin said.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina—Peruvian and Argentine diplomats disagreed Monday over an embarrassing outbreak of cholera aboard an international airline flight that killed one passenger and sickened dozens more.

In London, Argentine Foreign Minister Guido Di Tella said he did not agree with his Peruvian counterpart, Augusto Blacker, that an Argentine passenger boarded the Feb. 14 Aerolineas Argentinas flight already sick with cholera and caused the infection of at least 75 other passengers.

WASHINGTON—President Bush, still wounded by a poor showing in the New Hampshire primary last week, picked on his favorite whipping group Monday, giving Congress a failing grade for its work on his budget.

Marking the midway point of his self-decreed 52-day deadline for lawmakers to pass a portion of his budget, Bush said, "The stark and sorry fact is that Congress so far deserves an F. They deserve a failing grade," he told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court Monday for the first time allowed the conviction of a recreational drug user for conspiracy to distribute cocaine despite the government's acknowledgement that the suspect never sold drugs for profit.

The court, without comment, let stand the conspiracy conviction under a new government initiative targeting users who routinely make drugs available to friends at parties.

ATLANTA—Robert Lee Bennett, the alleged "Handcuff Man" who preyed on Atlanta gay hustlers for 20 years, pleaded guilty to two assault charges under a plea bargain arrangement in Fulton County Superior Court Monday and drew two 17-year prison sentences.

The sentences will be served concurrently with the 17-year term he received Feb. 13 for a similar assault in Tampa, Fla.

Bennett, 44, a former Atlanta attorney believed by police to be the man who handcuffed and burned several homosexuals in a number of bizarre attacks over the years, was charged with attacking Michael Jordan, 21, last year and Max Shrader, 26, in 1985.

YPSILANTI, Mich.—Workers at General Motors Corp.'s Willow Run assembly plant were stunned and outraged Monday by the company's decision to close the plant next year.

GM Chairman Robert Stempel said operations at the Willow Run plant will be phased out by the summer of 1993 and consolidated at a sister plant in Arlington, Texas, at a cost of some 4,000 blue- and white-collar jobs.

"I think it sucks," said Al Schuttsfield, trustee for United Auto Workers Local 1776, which represents more than 3,300 blue-collar workers at the plant.

WASHINGTON—Secretary of State James Baker said Monday Israel should halt the building of settlements in occupied territories if it wants U.S. loan guarantees, but denied any effort to force territorial concessions.

MIAMI—One of Manual Noriega's aides suggested the Medellin cartel kill the general after his soldiers seized a cocaine processing lab the drug lords had paid to protect, a former Panamanian police chief testified Monday.

Videotaped testimony from Nivaldo Madrinan, director of Panama's equivalent of the FBI, suggested that Col. Julian Melo arranged the bribery scheme to get rid of his boss.

MIAMI—Advocates for Haitian refugees soon to be taken back to their homeland under a Supreme Court decision Monday said they will turn their attention to a bill in Congress intended to protect the boat people.

The court gave the Bush administration permission to finish forcibly returning to Haiti thousands of refugees held at a temporary U.S. facility at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

TALLAHASSEE—State-chartered banks and their officers would be limited to $100 contributions to campaigns of those running for state comptroller under a bill advanced Monday by the House Elections and Ethics Committee.

The committee included the amendment by Rep. Miguel De Grandy, R-Miami, in a bill revising the state's banking regulations.

The bill would limit state chartered-banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, international banking corporations, their officers and directors, and their political action committees, from contributing more than $100 each to a candidate for comptroller.

Skewed priorities

Editor:

With John Sheffield in charge, I'm surprised anyone got their seats at the FSU/Duke basketball game. When a friend and I arrived at the game, we had first-row seats behind one of the baskets. Unfortunately, the football team had been allowed (by Sheffield and his cros) to literally take over that section of seating. I have since been informed that athletes get to attend all sports for free, though I haven't been able to confirm this. The truly amazing and frustrating part is that the ushers and their bosses admitted they couldn't or wouldn't remove the football players so we could have our seats. As we complained, we were eventually bumped up the chain of command (or incompetence in this case) to John Sheffield, assistant to the athletic director. His original solution was fine, he gave us tickets for different seats. The problem was, he also promised the same seats to a bunch of high school coaches who were being stroked so they would send their best prospects to FSU. When these people refused to yield their seats, who lost out? You guessed it. The really ironic part is the seats he gave us tickets to but then wouldn't let us have were in the disabled section! I guess that shows where Sheffield's priorities truly lie. Eventually we were given inferior seats, not together, in the team's family member section. I'll give Sheffield this: He doesn't discriminate. I know of at least one state legislator that got the exact same treatment we did. So let's see, that makes the football players No. 1 on his priority list; high school coaches No. 2, and state legislators and ticket holders somewhere below that. Oh yeah, I almost forgot the disabled ticket holders, but then, we know where they ended up.

Check out attorney

Editor:

Six-and-a-half years. That's the amount of time that has passed since the office of City Attorney Jim English has been audited. During this period, city commissioners have had no idea whether or not conflicts of interest have existed regarding English and the clients of English's private law firm.

A comprehensive audit of the firm of Henry, Buchanan, Mick and English would show that at least one of their corporate clients paid into the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce inspired bond fund used to entice General Dynamics and Tadiran to locate in Tallahassee. Furthermore, this client, Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center, Inc., will undoubtedly benefit from the presence of General Dynamics and Tadiran in this community. There may be other such clients yet to be discovered.

It is, therefore, not surprising that English has argued that Tadiran is in compliance with the city's anti-apartheid ordinance despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary. English has even allowed Tadiran to alter the anti-apartheid affidavit to its own liking prior to signing it. Consequently, all references to Tadiran's parent (Koor) were deleted.

English's bizarre, irrational support of Tadiran is now understandable. The city should move immediately to prohibit English from rendering additional opinions concerning Tadiran until the issue of conflict or even the appearance of conflict has been resolved.

Finally, the city commission should initiate two specific measures to eliminate even the possibility of conflict involving the city attorney. First, the client list of the English law firm should be made public. Second, English should be required to resign from his private law firm if he wants to continue to represent the city. The result would be a staff of "in house" attorneys whose sole responsibility would be the legal representation of the citizens of Tallahassee.

Smear tactics

Editor:

I am writing to tell the students of FSU about a very serious coup that occurred while we weren't looking. Someone came along and appointed The Flambeau as the judge and jury of all that is good at our university. The Flambeau has always had a certain bias, but recently it has degenerated to a self-righteous, propaganda magazine. As head of the Seminole Party, I worked very hard on the Feb. 4 March on the Capitol, because I believe those cuts will do irreparable damage to our education system. I also opposed the athletic fee. With both issues I engaged in the democratic process. I listened, I learned, I debated, and hopefully, I taught. At no time, however, did I say that anyone who disagreed was less of a person.

Yes, Brian Philpot did speak on behalf of the athletic fee to the Board of Regents. He did so against the opposition of myself, personally, many members of our Party, and some of his closest advisers and friends. Yet he did so because he believed FSU's long-term best interest was being served. That doesn't make him less of a student. I may not agree with his decision, but I respect his courage for making it.

I also respect The Flambeau's right to disagree. What disturbs me is their interest is not in the event or issue but rather the person behind it. They dismiss the rally because student government organized it, and mainstream students were involved, but they laud the anti-athletic fee committee for using great grass roots techniques. The athletic fee, unfortunately, was inevitable the moment Dr. Lick recommended it to the Board of Regents. The budget cuts, however, were not. The governor's veto threat to the Legislature opened a door thereby enabling us to get our message across. Most students however, thanks to the articles written, believe it to be the other way around. From your portrayal it seems the cuts can't be stopped, but the fee could.

Editorials are a part of any paper, but I think editorial is too journalistic a word for what is nothing more than political smear tactics. A free and open press is necessary as a check on any democratic institution. It is too bad free doesn't necessarily mean fair, and open doesn't necessarily mean responsible.

Hypocrite." The Flambeau continues to maintain high standards of journalistic integrity.

Of course, we need a Canadian-style health care system! Even more than a few doctors say that. Who doesn't want it? Try the insurance companies.

During my rehabilitation internship, I found that an insurance adjuster (who had had a "rigorous" 6-month course, no doubt), had refused to honor a doctor's orders for lumbar splints to correct a patient's limited lung capacity, saying they were "cosmetic," and not "medically necessary." Your life's breath is "cosmetic" and not "medically necessary"??!!

Then look to the pharmaceutical companies. They market poisonous drugs, they play God, and no one does anything. Unfortunately for us, Dr. Frances Kelsey, who single-handedly resisted the drug companies' pressure to market Thalidomide, which prenatally deformed thousands of European babies, has retired from the FDA. (I'm sure that Dan Quayle's pharmaceutical-company executive father is happy about that!)

So thousands of people are poisoned by their sleeping pills and tranquilizers, and worse yet, hundreds of American children, who were born perfect, are crippled by the DPT vaccine that the drug companies and HRS foists on the public. (There has been a safer, cheaper oral vaccine in use in Japan for over a decade.)

Who is to hold these arrogant, money-grubbing, sociopathic criminals responsible? If you don't continue to do it, then nobody else will.

Make a difference

Editor:

Two years ago I was in a situation similar to many graduating seniors. I was interviewing with half a dozen banks, retail stores, and insurance companies. I started to realize that type of job was not for me.

I wanted to work in a field I cared deeply about that would put my skills to good use. Just when I was about to give up on the career center to find a compatible job, Florida PIRG started interviewing candidates for full-time positions.

I've been working with the PIRG's for the past two years and it's been one of the most challenging, exciting, and rewarding experiences I've ever had. From lobbying in Washington, D.C. on issues like permanent protection for Florida's coastline from oil drilling or strengthening the Clean Water Act to working with students from across the state on developing skills as better leaders, PIRG has been a place to have a tremendous impact.

Just watching the evening news reinforces my decision daily. It is a time of great need in our country. Our environment and quality of life are threatened. Pollution poisons our air, water and land. Elected officials respond to special interest rather than to the citizenry that elected them.

The Public Interest Research Groups are making a difference on problems that effect us today by promoting solutions that will insure tomorrow. If you want to work to protect public health, our environment, and the American consumer, contact the career placement center or come to our information session Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. in 320 new Union. Hope to see you there!

Protesting pedestrian is sticking to his path

BY DON BOWMER

Tim O'Donald is tired of walking around cars illegally parked on campus sidewalks, and just to prove his point he's decided to stick to the straight and narrow path, no matter what the obstacles are.

The Florida State University doctoral student waged what he calls a sidewalk campaign last month against car owners who park on sidewalks on the south side of FSU's campus. His protests include calling the Tallahassee Police Department, confronting sorority and fraternity house residents and walking over the tops of cars blocking sidewalks.

"Pedestrians are tired of being walked on," the English student said last week. "We live in an age where we should be encouraging people to walk. It is an age of pedestrians."

But according to Sgt. Charles Garner of TPD, O'Donald could be charged with mischievous conduct and a second-degree misdemeanor for walking over people's cars.

O'Donald, however, isn't waivering.

"It is the sororities and fraternities who are the main violators," said O'Donald, a 130-pound off-campus resident. "Chi Omega House is one of the principle violators. When I asked two Chi Omega sisters to move their car they told me 'Yeah, sure' and went inside."

Chi Omega chapter President Hayley Byrd said the sorority's parking problems are a result of ongoing construction along Jefferson Street, where its house is located.

"We have lost two parking lots since the construction began," Byrd said, referring in part to a new apartment complex that's being built next to Chi Omega.

"We discourage our girls from parking illegally, but there just isn't enough space," she added.

O'Donald said he was prompted to action in late January when he saw an elderly woman who was carrying two bags of groceries step out onto Jefferson Street because there was a car blocking her path.

"I guess I just really hate cars," O'Donald said. "I don't like seeing them in the road, let alone where people are supposed to walk."

But FSU's major lack of parking space is a real dilemma for everyone, said Garner of TPD's special operations.

"We want to be fair to everyone," Garner said. "If the situation is dangerous or hazardous, we will have the automobile towed. We don't want people to have to walk out into the road to get around a car."

There is a $5 fine for parking on sidewalks, and a $17.50 charge if an automobile is towed by the city.

"There are parking lots around town that charge more than five dollars to park all day. These rich kids don't care about five dollars," O'Donald said. "If the penalties for breaking the law are not substantial as a deterrent, then there's no point in having laws."

O'Donald won an award last December from the local American Civil Liberties Union for an essay he wrote regarding the deterioration of the Bill of Rights. As a self-proclaimed civil libertarian, O'Donald urges others to follow in his footsteps.

"I always encourage people to walk where people were meant to walk," he said.

"I plan to step up my sidewalk campaign in the coming months," O'Donald added.

Demonstration for a bigger slice of the state budget, coupled with our determination to pay taxes only for police and prisons, amount to nothing but more of what has already gotten us into this mess. Instead of asking for pennies to help those who are scrambling for an ever-higher rung on the ladder, it is time to invest dollars on behalf of future benefits shared by all.

That may well be a liberal vision. The demise of feudalism was liberal; the end of mercantilism was liberal; abolition of slavery was liberal; allowing women to vote was liberal; providing public universities was liberal; protecting our environment is liberal. Can it really be—is it really practical to believe—that the only good liberalism is dead liberalism? Does it make any sense to think that the philosophy that got us this far can take us no farther?

Today's students and faculty, like our legislators, are products of our system. If we want future ones asking, "How can I help?" instead of chanting, "Gimme!" we had best start changing the education of today's pre-schoolers.

A 26-year-old man was attacked while walking near the Florida State University music school early Monday morning, FSU police spokesperson Jack Handley said.

The victim left Bullwinkle's Saloon on West Tennessee Street around 1:30 a.m., crossed the old Hardee's parking lot toward campus and was passing the music school when he was attacked.

Four assailants approached the victim and grabbed his wallet, containing various identification and $10. The victim was not injured and did not require medical attention. The FSU police department is continuing the investigation.

Too much to carry

An inept burglar was caught early Monday morning after he dropped a heavy stolen safe in the middle of Monroe Street right in front of a Tallahassee Police officer.

Daniel Nelson Baker, 26, of 1206 N. Martin Luther King, Jr. Boulevard, used a knife to pry open the back door of The Hole In The Wall Pub on Sixth Avenue, according to TPD spokesperson Annette Garrett. Baker broke into the business's cash register and left with the store's 100-pound safe.

Baker was running away from the area when he crossed the path of the police officer. Baker dropped the safe and continued westbound. A K-9 unit tracked the suspect to the inside of a dumpster behind N. Monroe St.

The Pub's owner identified the suspect as one of the bar's regulars. Baker was charged with armed burglary, carrying a concealed weapon, possession of burglary tools, grand theft and criminal mischief. He is being held at the Leon County jail on $3,000 bond.

Mother suspected in baby burning

Paramedics and police were called Sunday afternoon to the home of a 9-and-one-half month old baby boy who had been severely scalded while allegedly bathing in a tub, Kiracofe said Monday.

The boy's mother called paramedics to report that her son had accidentally turned on the hot water while he was in the tub. She told paramedics and police she had gone to get a diaper from another room and left the child in the tub after draining his bath water.

When she returned to the bathroom she found the boy had turned on the hot water and sat down in the scalding water. Paramedics found the skin from the child's buttocks blistered and peeled off. He was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center for treatment.

An examination by emergency personnel showed the child's feet and legs were not injured, typically indicating the child was held and lowered into scalding water, said Kiracofe.

The 20-year-old mother was charged with culpable negligence resulting in great bodily harm and taken to jail. The mother's name is not being released to protect the child.

"We must all help each other," said Michele Edwards, secretary of the FSU chapter of the NAACP. "This has not been done before and we hope this makes Blacks feel more comfortable on campus.

"We make up seven percent of the (student body) and we need to show we're united," she added.

Edwards and others are calling on Blacks on campus to wear all black to show unity among the race. An inspirational message will also be circulated around campus to all of those wearing black.

"There will be a card or maybe three cards sent around with a message on it," said Edwards, adding that she does not yet know what the exact message will be.

Eubanks said participants are supposed to initial the card and pass it on to someone they don't know wearing black. The last person to sign the card is supposed to bring it to an NAACP meeting scheduled for Wednesday afternoon.

"The idea came up last semester and we'd planned to do it then," Eubanks said. "It was really a coincidence that this happened when it did ... during Black history month."

Black on Black: A Statement of Unity will be this Wednesday and organizers encourage Blacks to wear black. There will also be a NAACP meeting at 4:30 Wednesday and everyone wearing black is invited.

SG Prez election slated for March

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

The race for the highest office in Florida State University student government is just around the corner, and the process will be over and done with in only seven days.

Elections for Florida State University student body president and vice president will be held March 11. The dates to file as a candidate are next Monday and Tuesday at the Elections Office in 316 FSU Union.

SG Elections supervisor Tren Hopkins said Monday he was not concerned that SG statutes limit candidates to a week-long campaign.

"I don't think people need (campaign workers) bothering them for longer than that," he said Monday. "A week's time is more than ample for campaigning."

But Hopkins later acknowledged that such a short election process does favor established parties over new entries into the political fray.

Noting that SG senate enacts the election laws, and the elections of office only carries them out, Hopkins said the length of the campaign should be reassessed in the future.

Possible candidates are reluctant to speak on the record because SG election statutes prohibit campaigning before the end of filing next week. But it is likely there will be candidates from the established Seminole and Monarchy parties, as well as other candidates brought by new parties or independents. There will also be an as yet unknown resolution concerning the recently approved athletic fee increases.

Statutes require the elections of office to organize a public forum for all candidates before the election, and Hopkins said this years debate will be in Moore Auditorium on March 9 from 3:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

New elections supervisor arouses concern

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

With the approach of student body presidential elections at Florida State University, it may be deja vu all over again as fears of Seminole Party influence in the student government Elections Supervisor's office have been raised by several independent and Monarchy party senators.

"It's a tradition of the Seminole Party to have an elections office with someone well connected to them," independent senator Jeanne Belin said Monday.

Belin was one of several candidates criticizing last spring's presidential elections, in which special treatment was given to the Seminole Party and current President Brian Philpot, she said.

Newly-appointed elections supervisor Tren Hopkins was confirmed by the SG senate Jan. 29 with an 18-13 vote after 40 minutes of often-heated debate.

Most executive appointments get less than five minutes of debate, and most are confirmed by easy margins, often without any votes against them.

Hopkins is a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, and so is Philpot, the person who appointed him. Trey Traviesa, the previous president, is also a member of the same fraternity.

Independent senator Ben Crump said during Hopkin's confirmation debate last month that the elections supervisor's job is not that complex, "... the issue becomes who's the most unbiased, and (Hopkins') connection with the fraternity is troubling."

The debate also touched on concerns over Hopkins' participation in Philpot's and Traviesa's election efforts.

Hopkins said then, and reiterated again Monday, that he has never been a Seminole Party member, although he did admit to helping in Philpot's campaign last year.

"(Yes), if you consider putting up campaign posters in your classroom for a fraternity brother actively campaigning," he said.

"But I wasn't out talking to people," he added.

Hopkins said he had not had any problems yet, nor did he foresee any problems over his alleged Seminole ties.

Philpot said Monday that, "I have no question that (Hopkins) is going to be impartial." And he added that just because two people are in the same fraternity doesn't necessarily mean there's been a close relationship.

But Monarchy senator David Badagnani said Monday he had concerns that Hopkins was a last-minute substitution.

Badagnani said Hopkins' application showed he had originally sought appointment to a vacant senate seat, not the elections office.

"Every year there are problems with the way the election is run," he said.

And because Hopkins' background at least has the appearance of ties to the Seminole party, Badagnani was afraid that, "This isn't going to make students any more confident in student government."

Among the complaints Belin and other student leaders had over last spring's elections were some involving original Seminole nominee Pete Collins, who was forced to remove his name from the ballot because his GPA failed to meet the minimum statute requirement. Tanya Fair, elections supervisor at the time, certified Philpot as a replacement candidate even though the filing deadline had passed.

A suit brought by the Monarchy party over the decision, as well as over alleged errors on election day, was decided by the SG supreme court in Fair's favor, and upheld on appeal by University Vice President Jon Dalton.

Things aren't so great

But remember, you live in America, land of the free and the brave and the capitalist. You could have ended up in Thatcher's Britain, where people float about in the doldrums of a welfare state. Think about it. Better yet, go see High Hopes tonight in FSU's Moore Auditorium. This widely acclaimed social satire was given raves by Vincent Canby of the New York Times and is brought to you by the Center for Participant Education, the people who think enough of you to bring you free or almost free movies, classes, speakers and more, all semester long. So bring your FSU I.D. or $2 if you're not a student to either the 7:30 or 9:30 showing tonight, and thank a CPE member if you see one.

Nothing in common and no orgasms

BY DARRYL DOCKSTADER

FLAMBEAU WRITER

The readers at tonight's Finale's poetry readings might be somewhat reminiscent of the mid-'80s pairing of Jackie Gleason and Tom Hanks. Recall that rather unmemorable film, Nothing in Common? Well, Bruce Bohrer and Russ Franklin's works seem to have just that: nothing in common; although they are certain to be much more memorable.

Franklin is currently working on his M.A. in creative writing at Florida State. He specializes in poetry, but tonight he will read a short story entitled, "I Killed a Dear and Probably Walker Percy, Too."

Franklin received his B.S. from Mercer in mathematics and physics. He spent one semester at Florida State studying meteorology before pursuing graduate work in writing. Reading literature, however, was always a favorite leisure activity of his.

"I always tested well in math and science and was pushed to go into those areas," Franklin said, "but when I looked at the M.A. reading list and saw I'd read half the works, I decided to make the transition."

Now Franklin considers science a favorite pastime. Not that strange coming from a man who considers one of the unique aspects of his life as having a spot "in both camps."

A native of Georgia (he's from a town "a six-pack southeast of Macon"), he is caught between the good old boy camaraderie of his Georgia friends and his academic pursuits in the sciences and writing. "Here, I'm considered hicksville."

It is, however, his Georgia roots that contributed to his interest in writing saying that he's "one of the best liars you'll ever meet." He attributes this ability to the tradition of his "clashed Southern storyteller."

"When I was a kid, all the other kids would say, 'No, no, no. Let Russ tell what happened.'"

The single point of convergence between tonight's writers seems to be they both attribute local writers as having a significant influence on them.

Bohrer cites Florida State writers David Kirby and Jerome Stern as being helpful in his poetry writing. In his five years at Florida State, he fondly says that he's always felt the support of these and other local writers.

Bohrer claims formal interests (that is, poetic form) as being of primary interest and "content (as being) subsidiary." However, he avoids talking too much about his poetry.

Bohrer's other interests include "unlandscaping," or restoring land to its more primitive aspect (much to the consternation of his neighbors), and raising South American parrots and torturing them. "Actually, they abuse my wife and me."

It's true, I saw the scars.

Witness the madness of falsehoods and orgasms this evening for free at the Grand Finale. Don't worry, beer will be available at low cost.

Presented by Steve Douglass, a popular author and speaker on leadership, management and personal development from a Christian perspective. He is executive vice president of a multinational organization employing approximately 16,000. He is a graduate of MIT and has an M.B.A. from Harvard, where he graduated in the top 2 percent of his class.

Buchanan from page 1

difficulty getting on the ballot in New York, Rhode Island and South Dakota, among others.

"Why have they kept me off the ballot in Kentucky? Why will they not let Pat Buchanan even speak to the Southern Republican Leadership Council in Charleston? What are they afraid of?" Buchanan asked. "They're afraid of the truth about big King George's record up there in Washington, D.C."

Buchanan also challenged the Bush administration on foreign policy.

"Are the people in Washington so caught up in their globalist new world order or are they going to be pushed aside by American patriots who want to begin to put America first," Buchanan said.

Buchanan's opposition has labeled the former political-commentator an economic isolationist. One Buchanan supporter who attended the rally agreed but added that Buchanan still has his vote.

"There's a few issues that I disagree with him on, like free trade—he's somewhat of a protectionist," said Eric Rittberg, a Libertarian Party supporter. "But I can look beyond that. I think the evil of all evils is George Bush and we need to get him out of office."

Rittberg also serves as a campaign volunteer for city commission candidate Dan McDaniel, who was present at the rally.

David Harris, a freshman at Florida State University who carried one of the Bush/Quayle signs, said he came out not to oppose Buchanan but to show his support for Bush.

"I think (Buchanan) is for the Republican cause, he's putting America first," Harris said. "I feel like Bush is the more qualified leader, whereas Pat Buchanan has just been a journalist."

But at least one participant supported neither Buchanan nor Bush.

"(Buchanan's) a bigot," said Sue Gambill, a local activist. "He doesn't like women, people of color, anyone from outside the United States or gays or lesbians. My opinion hasn't changed."

Buchanan concluded by saying he appreciates the support he's received from "folks who really wanted a new government . . . that really was in touch with the country and cared about the concerns of the people right here in the United States, rather than our relations with Singapore, Sidney, Australia—or something like that."

its ever-increasing student body.

Davis said the university wants state funds to hire a consultant to draw up the blueprints and hire a construction firm to do the work. The university also needs money to build a science research center, Davis said, reading from the long list of budgetary requests.

Davis doesn't get paid to be a lobbyist. He is the executive assistant to FAMU President Frederick Humphries, and lobbying is only part of his job description.

"I do whatever the president says," Davis said with a laugh. "You're not a vice president who has a specific charge for a defined function. You're there to carry out . . . activities that the president assigns you or requests that you do."

Accordingly, Humphries has asked Davis to be FAMU's liaison with the Legislature. After all, Davis seems to have the credentials to fit the bill.

Davis has been a mover and shaker of sorts in the state's Department of Education for close to 22 years. During that time, he has held a variety of jobs including stints as chief of the Bureau of Planning and Budgeting and state director of cooperative education.

"He has a very deep familiarity with the law which is a tremendous advantage when you're trying to change the law," Riordan said.

Three years ago, Davis was offered the position of assistant to the president at FAMU and has been the university's lobbyist since then.

Davis admits he schmoozes with lawmakers even outside the Capitol, a role he says he enjoys.

"That's a part of lobbying," Davis said while taking a bite out of his mullet. "If the governor wants to go to a game, you're going to get him there . . . not only is it a lobbying issue, it's a relationship issue."

That's the rationale behind the occasional hunting trips for lawmakers that Davis arranges on his private land in Georgia. He was quick to add that he does not take money from the university for such trips.

To maintain cordial ties with lawmakers—in the hope of advancing FAMU's interests—Davis said he also gives money from his personal funds to lawmakers' campaign funds. He said he has donated money to Hurley Rudd and Al Lawson, both Tallahassee representatives.

"If the person you think is the best needs to get (elected), you support him," he said.

In lobbying for FAMU, Davis is lobbying for a university with which he has maintained a relationship that goes back to the 1950s. Davis is a FAMU alumnus. In 1956, he got a bachelor's degree in education and earned a master's in educational administration in 1959.

Leo P. Sam Jr., FAMU's vice president of university relations, said Davis is very good at what he does.

"He's a very dedicated man," Sam said.

"He's very loyal to his institution. He was a student, he's an alumnus, now he lobbies for his institution. That gives him an edge. People are loyal to their alma mater," Sam said.

"(FAMU) was the only school I could attend," Davis added. "I wasn't allowed into other institutions . . . because I was an American of color."

Davis, who's been married for 32 years, has four children.

The tuition increase was proposed Thursday by state Sen. Bob Johnson. It would have increased tuition by 3.2 percent for in-state students at the public universities, bringing in $11 million for the university system.

But the House had no such increase in its "reality" budget, which attempts to pay for state expenses without an increase in revenue.

"Many of us feel that it's inappropriate, maybe even unfair, to ask students to pay more when we're funding the (university system) less per student," Ritchie said Monday.

If legislators fail to generate more funding for education and pass a $45 million cut in the university system, students will find themselves paying close to 27 percent of their education costs, 2 percent more than they are supposed to.

The entire conference report, including the tuition proposal, will now go back to the conference committee, which must vote on the House-Senate compromise.

Johnson and several other appropriation committee members did not return phone calls to their offices Monday.

Things are looking up for students after last week's tuition scare, but the rise in tuition hasn't been killed yet, according to Tracy Newman, chief lobbyist for the Florida Student Association.

"We're 95 percent positive that this is a dead issue," she said.

Even if it does die, the issue could be resurrected into a more fearsome form, and come back to haunt students during a statewide financial crunch.

"What is still up in the air is the fact that if we come in with a supplemental budget ... then you might very well see the issue of a tuition raise on the level of 3 to 5 percent," Ritchie said.

The supplemental budget would be somewhat like Gov. Lawton Chiles' investment budget, which would increase funding levels for state agencies by implementing new taxes and fees.

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You have a chance to try something that has always intrigued you. Be bold! Putting your wonderful imagination to good use will boost your career. A direct approach will bring terrific results when dealing with prominent people next fall. Focus on romance and travel in October. A year-end vacation could lead to your adopting a healthier lifestyle. Family support makes a dream come true.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: nutritionist Adele Davis, Beatle George Harrison, tennis star Bobby Riggs, TV host Sally Jessy Raphael.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A stroke of luck awaits in the domestic or employment arena. New challenges or responsibilities may be involved. Hold the line on spending. Breathe life into romance by being more ardent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not sit idly at home today. Channeling your energy into community work or athletic games helps you brush up on your skills. You will feel exhilarated by how much you accomplish!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A highly productive day lies ahead. You can make big gains at your job by focusing on good public relations. Someone you thought gone forever makes a dramatic reappearance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Once you set your mind to something, your plans will fall into place. You feel drawn to someone who is very different from you. A lasting relationship will be difficult but not impossible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work tasks provide a wonderful outlet for your creativity today. Look sharp on the job.

you are in for a run of good luck! Giving someone a helping hand lets you mend some fences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Confidential chats could lead to a financial boon. A secret partnership may be part of the picture. Cultivate good relations with your co-workers. Stick to elegant simplicity when decorating.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Acting on impulse could land you in hot water today. Postpone making major financial decisions. Make sure your expectations about romance are realistic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An important work project can be easily advanced or completed now. A romantic lunch provides a nice midday break. Be more creative in your dealings with a stubborn relative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Curb a tendency to clash openly with people in power if it could jeopardize your reputation for good sense. Seek out people who share your concerns and plot a common strategy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day for career discussions and financial decisions. A joint venture may be signed, sealed and delivered. Influential people will stand behind you. Salute them!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You seem to know all the right things to say now. Why not vocalize your ideas and concerns to VIPs? Rave reviews and increased power could be yours before you know it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A business venture is given the green light, helping to solidify a new partnership. Show your strong support for a loved one's efforts. Take a friend to dinner and talk candidly.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are affectionate, loyal and inclined to daydream. They treasure their friends and may be more susceptible to peer pressure than their parents would like. Set firm but fair guidelines for these youngsters and they will do just fine. Unusually talented in the arts, they make good writers and musicians. Reserved and modest, these Pisces will probably be happiest if self-employed. They are more interested in cooperation than competition.

SPORTS

Just basketball as FSU rolls

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Without resorting to fisticuffs, or even considering them, the Florida State women's basketball team used a 22-0 scoring run that carried through halftime Monday night to spark a 100-71 victory over crosstown rival Florida A&M.

The lopsided final score didn't reveal the entire story of the hard-fought contest, as the Rattlerettes dominated play up until the last two minutes of the first half, holding a 40-33 lead before the Seminoles went on their monster run to gain control of the game.

"We played the last two minutes of the first half and the first two minutes of the last half like I've wanted them to play all year," said FSU coach Marynell Meadors, whose team climbs to 15-10 on the season. "I'm proud of the way we came out in the second half and totally dominated. We just turned it up a notch and played super defense."

FAMU was the team to find the basket first, with center Polly Innerarity leading the way, knocking down 14 of her 24 points, mostly on inside buckets and putbacks. The Rattlerettes grabbed 16 rebounds—mostly offensive—and used their stong inside game to keep FSU at bay almost until halftime.

It wasn't until FAMU started wearing down—with only two players on the bench to give the starters a rest—that FSU made the run that made the difference.

"Fatigue definitely plays a part in a game like this, but more importantly, we stayed with the game plan in the first half, then let it go in the second," said FAMU coach Claudette Farmer. "We came out flat in the second half and FSU turned on the heat, which caused us to make a lot of turnovers."

Tia Paschal was again the Seminole player to spark her team, stealing the ball five times and hustling down court to hit 10 of 16 shots. The 6-foot-1 junior grabbed eight rebounds and dished off five assists to lead FSU with 22 points.

"Tia's an awesome player. She's the one that sparked us and hustle is contagious. Enthusiasm is contagious too, and once it caught on, the team played with confidence," Meadors said.

For FAMU, whose Marching 100 won the battle of the bands in the Civic Center hands down, the exciting first-half effort may serve as a rallying point for the upcoming Trans-America Athletic Conference tournament.

Innerarity's 24 points earned her second place on the career scoring record with 1,390 points, and teammate Demetria McMillan turned the nets as well, hitting for 17 points, including three 3-pointers.

"We know we can play with these teams, especially if we stick to our game," Farmer said. "Hopefully playing some of these top teams will elevate our play when we go to the (TAAC) tournament."

FAMU, at 10-15, will have a shot at another top team when they host Georgia Wednesday night at Gaither Gym, and FSU will move back over to Tully for a 7 p.m. contest with Florida Atlantic on the same night.

Two Seminoles earn honors

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Florida State's Chris Roberts, who excelled at both the plate and on the mound this past week, has been named the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball Player of the Week.

Roberts started the week by driving in both runs in the fifth-ranked Seminoles' 2-1 win over then third-ranked Florida Feb. 19. In FSU's ACC opener against North Carolina Feb. 21, Roberts, a junior, doubled and tripled and drove in two runs in a 13-1 win over the Blue Devils. Roberts also threw a four-hit complete game for a 1-0 win over Duke Sunday. He struck out six and walked four.

Also for FSU, junior pitcher Roger Bailey walked two and struck out a career-high 12 batters in earning the win over Florida and was named the ACC's Co-Pitcher of the Week. Bailey shared the honor with North Carolina State reliever Jamie Wolkosky. Wolkosky earned three saves last week as the Wolfpack swept a three-game series from Western Carolina.

The right to choose

Self-help feminist Downer to speak at FSU tonight

BY AMY ELLERSON
NEWS EDITOR

Women are being taught to perform abortions on themselves using mason jars, syringes and flexible glass tubes to prepare for a possible Supreme Court decision this year outlawing abortion.

One of the women teaching the home procedure is Carol Downer, who helped develop the practice in 1971, two years before the monumental Roe v. Wade ruling that legalized abortion nationwide. The procedure, which can also be used to terminate menstruation, entails inserting a tube into a woman's uterus and sucking out the contents with a syringe.

"It's picking up where we left off. We think it's essential for women to take direct control of their bodies," said Downer, who will speak tonight at the Florida State University College of Law.

The well-known self-help feminist produced a how-to video in 1989, when the Supreme Court gave states great leeway to restrict abortion. Although some women experience temporary pain, Downer said, the procedure is very positive and enabling.

"It's just going to make them a lot stronger," she said. "It's just wonderful to be able to extract your menstrual period and either not have to fool with it, or if you thought you might have been pregnant, make sure you weren't."

Downer and other advocates of the home procedure, however, will be forced to hide from the law if Roe v. Wade is overturned.

"... It's going to be just as illegal as a doctor performing it will be," the Los Angeles attorney said Tuesday. "So we are going to have to go underground and operate just as any other underground operation would—whether it's paying off the police or going off in a boat 12 miles off shore."

But Downer said she does not think the conservative Supreme Court will outlaw abortion, per se.

"I think they are going to very cynically and very diabolically leave the shell of Roe v. Wade," Downer said. "Abortions will become a lot less available to women across the board, even in the good states. And in some states, abortion will be inaccessible for all practical purposes.

"It's going to be a mess," she added.

According to Downer, most women will not choose to perform abortions on themselves if and when abortion is outlawed in many states—instead they'll look to other means. But an emphasis on the self-help procedure is important because it sends a message that no matter what the government decides, women will maintain control over their bodies, she said.

"It's going to be a repeat of the Prohibition Era where it just proved that some laws are unworkable or unenforceable. Abortion is one of these and it always has been," said Downer, founder and executive director of the non-profit Federation of Feminist Women's Health Centers.

Downer also had a few choice words to say about anti-abortionists, who she said are constantly seeking to prevent the federation's 20 women's health centers around the country from performing abortions, whether by picketing, making bomb threats or barricading themselves around the buildings.

"Anti-abortionists just want to see us suffer. That's their goal. They're not going to save any babies and they know it, too," Downer said.

"If a woman has to have an abortion for whatever reason, that reason doesn't go away. She will find a way to get one," she added.

To prove her point, Downer told the story of a teenage girl in Chicago who shot herself in the stomach to terminate her pregnancy.

"That's just how desperate the situation gets," she said. "Women will have sex with their abortionist. They'll spend horrendous sums of money. They'll travel to wherever they need to go to get one. And if you're talking teenagers, they're going to throw themselves down the stairs or drink horrible substances."

It's these types of extreme measures that Downer and other self-help feminists want to

Although city commission incumbent Steve Meisburg said he was prepared to lose, he nonetheless won in all but 7 of 36 precincts in Tuesday's runoff election, giving him a solid victory over challenger Dan McDaniel to return for a second full term.

The final results in the seat 1 race showed Meisburg getting 56 percent of the votes cast to McDaniel's 44 percent.

"Let me first thank those who supported me," Meisburg said shortly after McDaniel had conceded the race.

"Let me say to the people who did not vote for me. I've heard what they had to say and I'm ready to listen," he added. "I'll sit down with anyone who wants to talk."

Reagan's worried Bush could lose

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL.

SAN FRANCISCO—President Bush rode his bumpy campaign to California Tuesday, dogged by a report that Ronald Reagan is among those worried that Bush may lose the state this fall, and with it, the election.

Concerned about his lagging campaign, Bush operatives stepped up attacks against challenger Patrick Buchanan in Georgia, a critical state for both candidates.

On Tuesday, the Washington Post quoted unidentified sources who said Reagan told friends that Bush is in deep trouble in recession-weary California, and faces difficulties because "he doesn't seem to stand for anything."

"I don't believe" Reagan said that, Bush told reporters while en route to California for fund-raising events in San Francisco and Los Angeles that were expected to raise $2 million.

Reagan did not plan to attend the fund-raiser in Los Angeles, but the campaign announced, following the Post report that Bush would meet with Reagan at his home in Bel Air later in the day.

"He's quite supportive," Bush said of his former boss. "He's already endorsed me enthusiastically."

Bush blamed his troubles in California on the economy, but said "I think we'll be all right."

The Washington Post quoted unidentified sources who said Reagan told friends that Bush is in deep trouble in recession-weary California.

California holds 54 electoral votes, about one-fifth of the total needed to win the presidential election. The state has joined the Republican column in nine of the last 10 presidential contests.

"It's going to be very difficult for Bush to carry California this time," Stuart Spencer, a key adviser to Reagan in the 1980 and 1984 campaigns was quoted by the Post as saying.

Buchanan, who worked for Reagan, has accused Bush of betraying Reagan's conservative philosophy, and he also has denounced him for raising taxes and signing civil rights legislation that he claims is a "quota bill."

Bush said he hasn't decided whether to ask Reagan to campaign for him against his rebellious challenger.

FSU bowl trip cost nearly $1 million

BY MATT GRIMISON
FLAMBEAU WRITER

While $800,000 may seem like an impressive donation for the Florida State University Athletic Department to give academics this year, it pales in comparison to the $925,000 the department spent on one football game last season.

The school spent just under $1 million in January for the football team's trip to Dallas for the Cotton Bowl. The expenditure is only $75,000 less than FSU received for taking part in the game.

But Bob Goin, FSU athletic director, defended the amount of money spent on the game.

"It was a celebration," Goin said Monday. "We had to take the football team and their families, and we got a lot of publicity and money from the game. I think we earned it."

FSU paid not only for the football team and members' families to make the trip, but also picked up the tab for a 114-member entourage consisting of President Dale Lick, various staff members and their relatives, students, faculty, alumni and community leaders.

Goin said the total number of people the university paid for was approximately 400, counting the team, the Marching Chiefs band and the athletic department staff. The figure of 114 was counting only members of the aforementioned "official party."

"They earned it. The team earned it. The coaches earned it," Lick said Tuesday.

According to Lick, the size of the entourage was nothing out of the ordinary. He said the only reason the bowl expenditures have come up this year is due to the fact the state and university are in a tight budget crunch.

"You have to put it in perspective. You could spend less, but the bowls have expectations of you," Lick said. "They expect you to have a sizeable group of people from the community, and they set up special events for these people to attend. You could cut back the number of people, or could even cut back a day, but they might not invite you back."

When asked for the names of a few of the members of the entourage, Goin referred the Flambeau to FSU Assistant Athletic Director Charles Hurst. But Hurst referred the question to Lick, who would not give any names when reached Tuesday evening.

In comparison to FSU's bowl trip, the University of Florida sent an "official party" of about 60 to the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans this year. Had FSU taken a party similar to UF's, the university could have saved more than $130,000.

According to Lick, the amount of money the athletic department donates to academics each year depends on its profits from the football team's bowl game.

Charles Hurst, assistant athletic director at FSU, declined to comment on whether the department would have saved more than $100,000 if it had cut its entourage in half. He added that any comparison between UF and FSU is inappropriate.

"UF's athletic department is a private company. They are not public like we are," Hurst said. "I think they even have their own plane."

According to Hurst, the athletic department decided who the university would take to Dallas for a week-long stay.

"The athletic director selects the people. It's not a rigid rule who goes," he said.

The athletic department donated the $800,000 to academics at FSU in December, with $400,000 earmarked for Stroz Library and the other half for summer school.

Goin said there is not a set amount the department donates to academics each year. But according to Lick, it usually gives between $300,000 and $400,000.

"(The amount) is a joint decision by the university president and the athletic director," Goin said. "We go by what we can afford and what the school needs. We don't give $800,000 every year."

According to Lick, the amount the athletic department donated to academics was fairly generous.

"We had a fair amount of discussion and decided it should be a sizeable donation," he said. "Goin understood the needs of the school and since they had a good year in athletics, they could afford to give more."

FSU only kept a third of its $3 million earnings from the bowl because it gave $2 million to the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Membership provides that money from bowls goes to the conference," said Goin.

In the past the school has pocketed all bowl earnings because it was not affiliated with a conference.

Goin said conference membership would be beneficial in the long run.

"On the other side of the coin, money from the other schools comes to us. Membership in the ACC is an improvement over any independent status as far as money is concerned," he said.

Downer from page 1

keep women from taking. By giving women the option of performing abortions on themselves within a group setting, Downer hopes the days of back-alley and coathanger abortions will not return, even if abortion is outlawed in many states.

"Right now, our highest priority is to keep women from going to unsafe extremes," she said. "We really think knowledge about abortion should be part of every woman's information about the world."

But Kate Ruddon, spokeswoman for the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, said she is opposed to Downer's do-it-yourself method.

"We believe abortions should be performed by trained physicians. There are potential risks involved when the person is not trained," said Ruddon, who supports a woman's right to an abortion.

"It's the same principle as home birth," she added.

Ruddon, however, would not comment on whether it would be better for women to undergo Downer's home abortion procedure than resort to unsafer measures.

"Maybe, maybe not. I can't comment on that," she said. "We believe it's something that should remain inside the medical profession and health care setting."

But Downer said that for many women, abortion isn't an option—it's a must. And if abortion is outlawed in some states, many women without private physicians or enough money to travel to states that do allow abortions will have no other choice but to perform the procedure themselves.

"Abortion is not a decision a lot of women would make if they had more support from their relationship or society. But abortion is the only means many of them have to keep from being plunged into total poverty," she said. "It's vital that women have this stop-gap measure."

To make abortions accessible to women on low incomes, the Feminist Women's Health Centers around the country, including the one in Tallahassee, allow women to pay a sliding-scale fee based on how much they can afford.

'... we are going to have to go underground just as any other underground operation—whether it's paying off the police or going off in a boat 12 miles off shore.'

—Carol Downer

The centers are pretty safe for now from constitutional attacks on abortion rights, Downer said, because most are located in states where abortion is fairly well protected. But that doesn't mean they're not in jeopardy, especially from anti-abortionist attacks and a worsening economy.

According to Downer, the centers have been hurt by the national recession, in which prices of their equipment have gone up while costs of abortions have remained steady.

More significant, however, are the unrelenting attacks by anti-abortionists, such as Operation Rescue, which have taken a heavy toll on many volunteers at the centers.

"It's very costly to stay in business and very wary," Downer said. "We can't go on the way it is. People are just stretched to the max."

She added that because the centers are having to spend so much time fighting off anti-abortionists and working to protect states' abortion rights, they haven't been able to focus attention on other women's concerns. Among those concerns are breast cancer and prenatal care, especially for women who are drug users.

"Right now, abortion has overshadowed everything because it's the main issue, and it kind of makes us mad," Downer said. "We're just literally pinned to the front door of our clinics to keep them open."

Downer will speak tonight at the FSU College of Law at 7:30 p.m. on "Abortion: the law and alternative strategies." For more info, call the Feminist Women's Health Center at 224-9600.

WHEREAS: Students are becoming more in tune with their cultural beliefs and value systems, and

WHEREAS: Diversity and understanding is vital to personal as well as value growth for every student, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE FORTY FOURTH STUDENT SENATE THAT: An advisory board be created to explore these different value systems and provide recommendations to the Student Senate, for improvement to the University Community. PASSED BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

Resolution 59 - Sponsored by Senator Hiipakka.

WHEREAS: The Tallahassee Bridge to History Project is a humanitarian effort to aid the former Soviet Union in their transition to democracy, and

WHEREAS: The worthwhile project will provide the people of these republics support in their long awaited endeavor of freedom of the contribution of food and medical assistance to help them get on their feet, and

WHEREAS: The funding for this project has already been set aside by the State Government and all they need are hardworking and dedicated people, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE FORTY FOURTH STUDENT SENATE THAT: We offer our complete and full support to this unprecedented project here in Tallahassee. PASSED.

PIRG bill set back yet again

BY JOEL ARNOLD
STAFF WRITER

Attempts to eliminate the current funding procedure for the Florida Public Interest Research Group, an environmental and consumer advocacy group at several Florida universities, suffered another setback in the Florida Legislature Monday.

The Senate Education Committee, meeting this week for the last time this legislative session, did not hear bills sponsored by Sen. Winston "Bud" Gardner (D-Titusville), chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Fred Dudley (R-Fort Myers) that would have changed the waivable $2.50 FPIRG fee assessed to students at tuition payment each semester.

Because the bills were not heard

Monday, the legislation is effectively dead in the education committee. The bills could be heard in another committee, or the Senate could vote on them directly or allow them to be heard in a special education committee meeting.

Neither Gardner or Dudley returned calls to their offices Tuesday for comment.

Chris Robertson, a Florida State University FPIRG staffer, said the group, which lobbies the Legislature on controversial issues such as offshore oil drilling, is "obviously very pleased" with the education committee's action.

But he added FPIRG is still cautious in light of the senators' efforts last week to add the legislation to the Senate implementing bill, a companion to the budget bill. The Senate defeated the motion by a 20 to 18 vote.

"It's proven already that ... they'll try to sneak it by us," Robertson said. "There's still plenty of room for it to be tacked on as an amendment onto just about anything."

Gardner's proposed bill would not allow any fees to be assessed at tuition payment that are not authorized by law, such as the recently increased athletic fee, while Dudley's bill would change the FPIRG fee to an optional donation.

Lisa Rice, Gardner's legislative assistant, said she doesn't know if Gardner will continue action on his bill, but added the senator will focus on getting Dudley's bill passed.

"At this point we're just waiting for Senator Dudley to do something with his bill," Rice said.

'Reality budget' to keep top salaries

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

TALLAHASSEE—House and Senate budget chairmen Tuesday decided against cutting salaries of the state's highest-paid employees and legislators by 3 percent.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Winston "Bud" Gardner, D-Titusville, and House Appropriations chief Ron Saunders, D-Key West, agreed on several sticking points in the $29 billion "reality budget" for the fiscal year starting July 1.

They also "bumped up" a few other points to House Speaker T.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach, and Senate President Gwen Margolis, D-North Miami Beach, for final resolution that would send the budget package back to the full House and Senate.

Gov. Lawton Chiles has said he will veto the no new taxes budget since he and legislators in both chambers concede it does not meet the needs of a fast-growing state in education, prisons, social services or environmental protection.

Chiles has been campaigning for reorganization of the executive agencies and a $1.3 billion package of new revenues, derived from repealing some sales tax exemptions and levying new fees on some services.

The new budget does not contain pay raises for state employees, who just lost a 3 percent hike when this year's budget was reduced. A state employee's union has filed suit in Tallahassee, seeking to make Chiles reinstate the raise.

To set an example in this election year, House and Senate members separately adopted a budget amendment for the coming budget year that would have imposed a 3 percent pay cut on employees making more than $60,000 a year.

The Senate also adopted a 3 percent cut in the $22,500 salaries of state legislators themselves.

In joint negotiations on the budget, representatives of the Board of Regents and Department of Administration warned lawmakers the cut could be illegal—even unconstitutional.

The Florida Teaching Profession-NEA threatened a lawsuit if the amendment passed, claiming the employee's right to collective bargaining would be abridged.

The DOA advised "an implied contract" is established when an employee accepts a job at a certain salary and that to reduce it would be illegal.

Negative campaign turns voters off

BY RAJU CHEBIUM

STAFF WRITER

The campaign tactics of city commission candidate Dan McDaniel, which some called negative and misleading, were on the minds of many Tallahasseeans who went to the polls Tuesday and may have played a role in McDaniel's defeat.

"I don't like his strategy at all, period," said Clarence White, who voted at Jake Gaither Gymnasium on the Florida A&M University campus. "To resort to such downright negative tactics ... reflects what he would do when he gets elected."

"Between the two, (incumbent Steve) Meisburg was the least painful choice."

White was referring to phone "surveys" conducted by a local company hired by McDaniel. The survey company told many Tallahasseeans that Meisburg was opposed to the coal plant referendum that voters overwhelmingly approved in the Feb. 4 general election. Many Tallahasseeans also said they received pamphlets in the mail from the McDaniel campaign that said Meisburg was opposed to citizens voting for coal.

But Meisburg had in fact publicly stated his support for the referendum. And according to the Tallahassee Democrat, McDaniel apologized Thursday for the misleading statement.

Nancy Smith, who voted at Magnolia Courtyard, agreed with White that McDaniel's campaign tactics turned her off.

"I just didn't like some of the things McDaniel did," Smith said. "He said a lot of things about Meisburg that were not true."

Another voter, who wished to remain anonymous, said she was angry McDaniel would lie outright about Meisburg.

"It insults my intelligence when people lie and you know it's a lie," she said, after voting for Meisburg at Magnolia Courtyard. She said she had gotten a phone call and campaign literature from McDaniel's campaign.

But Ritha McMeans, who voted at Jake Gaither Gym, disagreed.

"I did hear McDaniel more and ... I voted because he is against coal," she said.

John Boyle, who voted at the County Courthouse, said he chose Meisburg because he had a better understanding of Tallahassee's problems than McDaniel.

"He just did not have very much depth of thought and sensitivity to the issues," Boyle said, referring to McDaniel.

Toddler raped

After a 2-year-old girl was diagnosed as having a sexually transmitted disease, the mother's boyfriend was arrested Tuesday for raping the toddler, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said.

When the child's mother was diagnosed with the same disease, the live-in boyfriend became the prime suspect.

The 24-year-old admitted to raping the child while he bathed her. The incident occurred while he was baby-sitting the girl last December when the mother was away at work.

The suspect was charged with capital sexual battery on a child under 11, and taken to the Leon County Jail. Because police would not release the suspect's name, in order to protect the identity of the victim, no bond information could be obtained.

Latest Lab play is long on talent

BY MARTIN ALLEN
STAFF WRITER

It's August, 1945 in a small town somewhere in southern Georgia. The name of the town is not important, because most small Georgia towns look alike and act alike, each of them mutually interchangeable.

Florida Flambeau review

America has just won the second World War, but you don't care. Jim Crow is still alive and well, but you don't worry about that too much either. After all, you have your own problems, don't you?

Welcome to the world of Frankie Addams, a 13-year-old girl, at that worst possible age between tomboy and young womanhood. Her best friends are still the colored help, Berenice, and John Henry, the nine-year-old boy next door.

Frankie is a loner. She hates everyone else in town and is sure they feel likewise. The roots of her isolation stem from her mother's death when Frankie was very young, and her father's being so busy running the family business that he is almost a stranger.

This is the setting of The Lab's current production, an enjoyable if slightly long-winded staging of The Member of the Wedding by Carson McCullers. 1945 is an appropriate time for the issues the play deals with, because not only will the pattern of American life in general never be the same, neither will the lives of anyone in the play.

A small raised platform represents a cutaway view of the Addams' kitchen, allowing us to glimpse the private agony of Frankie (Alice Dodd) and Berenice (Sybil Johnson), the one-eyed cook, bottle-washer and family counselor.

Frankie is upset because her brother Jarvis (David Belisle) has come home to get married. She's not jealous (she thinks), she just knows that this represents her best chance to get out of town, and can't wait for the wedding in a few days.

Berenice's problems are a bit more concrete. In addition to having to tend to the wedding plans and Frankie's crisis, she has to worry about the status of her relationship with T.T. Williams (David Hayes) and her brother Honey (Donavin Dain Scott), a reefer-smoking musician who is constantly getting in trouble with white authority figures.

Wedding

The play consists of three acts, the first two of which are all one long scene. You may find the second act a bit tedious because of this, but it's a necessary structural setup: when act three occurs, things break loose in much the same way as a thunderstorm that has been building all day long.

The performances are excellent, with the stand-out job belonging to Alice Dodd as Frankie. Dodd gives a great deal of depth to her character. You should come away from the play wondering if she really is no older than 13.

In the end, though, it's difficult to tell who the central protagonist is. While acts one, two and the first half of three are centered on Frankie's troubles, the secondary plot line with Berenice converges in act three and takes over the focus almost until the end. The final scene takes place in November of the same year, after both women have suffered a major loss and are left sadder and wiser.

The Member of the Wedding is at The Lab Wednesday through Saturday, February 26-29 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 general admission and free to FSU students with valid ID. For more information call 644-6500 or 644-6488.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE:

Show more initiative and your stock will quickly rise at your place of employment.

In May, a relationship based on mutual respect will develop into lasting love. A financial situation turns to your advantage by June. Children influence an important decision you make next summer. Travel will bring in new business in September. Romantic fires you thought extinguished may still burn brightly. Go slow.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comedian Jackie Gleason, actor
Tony Randall, country singer Johnny Cash, Actress Betty Hutton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An older person has some wonderful news to share. Listen closely — it could mean greater security for your family. Curb a tendency to talk shop when socializing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Paying bills on time protects your credit rating.
A close friend or relative may be willing to arrange a short-term loan. Check both train and flight schedules if planning a business trip.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new financial partnership begins to yield handsome profits. Your personal contacts bring you wonderful luck.
Substitute long-distance phone calls for expensive travel.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Meeting a deadline will put you head and shoulders ahead of your competition.
Improve your communication skills — they will help you land a top job! A long-distance romance begins to intensify.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Learn to express your feelings in a calm, positive manner. Enrolling in night school or attending a seminar will boost your earning potential. Your reliability helps you move up the ladder of success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day to dispose of unwanted items cluttering up the basement or attic.
Renovating your home will add to your comfort while increasing its value.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Home projects could lead to a second income.
Seek the cooperation of family. Some surprising news elicits an unexpected reaction. Improving your appearance will boost your ego.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your mate may urge you to act in a more constructive manner. Learn from your experiences. Do not sell yourself short.
Your creativity commands top dollar!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):
Although you have undertaken a rather tough assignment, any difficulties are offset by the promised rewards. Be careful not to act overconfident. Romance takes on a rosy glow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your associates may not be able to help out today — rely mostly on your own efforts.
Your clever handling of a personnel matter wins you new respect. Spruce up your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Resist the urge to roll over someone who crosses you today. Although you are irritated by other people's lam excuses and shortcoming, this is not the day to say so.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Business must come before pleasure, especially during office hours. A co-worker's ideas tend to be on the extravagant side. Be tactful when offering an alternative suggestion.

Meadors wants strong, steady finish

BY SUE MULLINS

STAFF WRITER

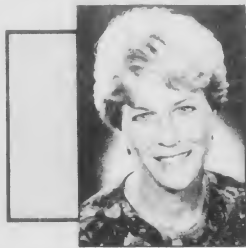

The old Florida State women's basketball team seems to be back in action lately with two blowout victories under its belt in one week. But coach Marynell Meadors warns her team won't ever take another lightly, including tonight's foe, Florida Atlantic.

"After losing those two games we had already counted in the win column, we decided we shouldn't ever count on a win until the last buzzer," Meadors said. "I think the team has learned to be ready to play basketball at the start of every game now."

FSU played out its inaugural Atlantic Coast Conference schedule, ending up at 8-8 and in fifth place, and expected to breeze through the rest of the regular season with a stretch of six straight home games. But losses to ACC cellar-dweller Wake Forest (10-14 and 1-12 in the ACC), and 10-11 Butler last week knocked the Seminoles for a loop.

"We just never got into the game, and we really thought that if we just showed up, we'd win," FSU guard Danielle Ryan said after the losses. "We just weren't mentally prepared."

But clocking Northern Illinois 99-74 on Saturday, then finding their composure and momentum to whip Florida A&M 100-71 Monday, should give the Lady Seminoles the

'I just hope they can decide for themselves that they want to come out and play hard for the rest of the schedule.'
—FSU coach Marynell Meadors

impetus to finish strong.

Meadors said after the upset to Butler that she couldn't kill her team in practice with the prospect of postseason play facing them, but that they would have to work out the mental bugs themselves.

"You can't coach enthusiasm and you can't coach how to avoid mental errors," Meadors said. "I'd love to run them to death in practice but I can't because at this time of the season you're trying to conserve your energy. I just hope they can decide for themselves that they want to come out and play hard for the rest of the schedule."

The Seminoles did play hard on the rebound, with junior Tia Paschal leading the way. The 6-foot-1 forward hit for 23 points and snagged 14 rebounds against Northern Illinois, then scored another 22 points and grabbed eight rebounds against FAMU. Teammates Chantelle Dishman and Ryan have also helped the team bounce back, combining for 34 points against the Rattlerettes.

FSU will need the firepower to beat the team from Boca Raton, because FAU averages about two points per game more than FSU, while allowing two points less. The Owls are also intimately familiar with FSU's style of play, as FAU coach Wayne Allen was an assistant at FSU, and his assistant, Val Harris is a former Lady Seminole.

"We like the way FSU plays—it's very upbeat and defensive oriented," said Allen. "They have tremendous talent and depth, but I think our players can anticipate their play and I think we match up real well against them."

Forward Tiffany Collins poses the biggest threat, besides themselves, to the Seminoles. The 5-foot-11 senior averages 20.2 points and 12 rebounds per game for the 16-10 Owls.

Tonight's game, which begins at 7, will be played in the Civic Center, the Lady Seminoles' home away from home.

turnout and his chances.

He said he believed the results sent a mixed message.

"It could be that people spoke out in the primary and then felt they had gotten their message across," he said. "I thought (my) message was good, but it was hard to get it out."

McDaniel was referring in part to the controversy surrounding the commission's decision last summer to convert one of the city's power plants to coal. Meisburg was one of three commissioners who voted in favor of the conversion to coal, although the decision was later reversed.

Despite a last-minute controversy over McDaniel's phone campaign and mailout brochure, the challenger said he didn't know if it had made a difference.

McDaniel had stopped a phone campaign late last week after it was reported it included false statements about Meisburg's record on the coal plant referendum voters approved Feb. 4. He apologized and said there had been changes made without his approval.

But charges of further misinformation were later leveled against a brochure McDaniel's campaign mailed to about 10,000 households, although McDaniel maintained all the allegations were true.

Meisburg said he believed people had been turned off by the last-minute negative campaign.

He praised Tallahassee for having an educated electorate, adding, "People know that I've done more than the skating rink."

Meisburg said he believed even though the frustration level was high, when people got in the voting booth they didn't forget his past contributions and reputation for fairness.

Although Meisburg returns to a seat he has held for five years, eight-year incumbent Jack McLean lost his seat to Penny Herman in the primary election three weeks ago.

McLean was the acknowledged leader of the five-member commission, and his departure will inevitably change the chemistry between commissioners, Meisburg said.

"To be honest with you, I think there will be a lot of changes," he said.

Endangered species

Proposed legislation could further threaten the wildlife of Florida

BY SUE MULLINS
STAFF WRITER

Endangered species in the Sunshine State such as the red-cockaded woodpecker and the Florida panther stand to suffer from proposed federal legislation resulting from this year's debate over reauthorization of the landmark Endangered Species Act.

And according to Bernie Yokel, president of the Florida Audubon Society, most of the legislation that would weaken the 20-year-old act mainly threatens habitats in which endangered species live.

"There are many attempts being made both federally and locally to weaken the Endangered Species Act," Yokel said last week. "Any weakening of the act is going to make habitat that's now essential even more vulnerable to change and loss.

"The act produces a symbol—the animal—but really, in 95 percent of instances, it tries to protect the habitat," he added.

Economics and endangered species

Just last week, Department of Interior Secretary Manual Lujan announced the formation of a special committee to study the economic impact of protecting endangered species in light of the plight of the northern spotted owl in the Pacific Northwest.

The northern spotted owl, once a plentiful bird of prey in the Pacific states, is biologically considered an "indicator species," meaning that wildlife management officials determine the decline of the species as an indication of the decline of its entire ecosystem. Lujan, who has called the act "just too tough" because it doesn't include human economic predicaments when deciding to list a species as endangered, said the recovery plan for the owl and many other species is too costly.

"What that means is that the administration has created this committee to come up with a plan to undo the Endangered Species Act," said Robert Irvin, special counsel to the National Wildlife Federation.

Spotted Owl of the South

The northern spotted owl has galvanized activists on both sides of the protection issue because its once-vast territory of habitation was the only suitable environs for the bird.

The state of Florida, according to many, has a similar problem in retaining enough old pine forests for its endangered red-cockaded woodpecker to survive. And proposed legislation on the federal level

Video shop owners gear up for fight with state attorney

The battle between local video store owners and State Attorney Willie Meggs is steaming up after an Ormond Beach organization, Friends of the First Amendment, came to town last week to support the stores in their fight to rent adult movies unhassled.

Since the meeting, Tallahassee video store owners have banded together and decided to fight back against the state attorney's attempts to prevent the stores from renting X-rated movies.

"The consensus seems that everybody felt much better after the meeting," said Lisa Roberts, co-owner of Drive-In Movies.

FOFA President Barry Freilich presented the group with tactics they could use to combat the onslaught of censorship.

"We're here to help you put together a winning team," Freilich told approximately 20 store owners and employees gathered at The Spartan restaurant last Friday night.

"I'd like to help you pull off a censor-rookie and put an end to censorship in the state of Florida," Freilich said.

He added that Friends of the First Amendment saw the need to set up a Tallahassee chapter after several local video store owners called his office concerned about a recent attack by Meggs and the American Family Association.

After renting X-rated movies from local stores, Meggs' office sent letters to the store owners warning them the tapes were obscene. Following the letters, all but three of the stores cleared their shelves and stopped renting the videos.

Freilich, who was accompanied by FOFA attorney David Wasserman, warned Friday night's crowd that once a censorship movement gets going, it's not easy to stop.

"You tell me it's gonna stop with X-rated movies and I'm gonna tell you you're wrong," he said. "You'd be amazed to see what's been removed from your local library."

Freilich added that the AFA has called the television sitcom Nightcourt pornographic.

"This is the kind of lunacy we're gonna have to deal with if we don't stand up right now and fight," Freilich said.

Rentals of adult movies account for as much as 30 percent of sales at some of the video stores. And as Wasserman echoed Freilich's statement on the snowball effect of censorship campaigns, he warned things could get worse.

"How many of you people think you can survive without your R-rated movies?" he asked.

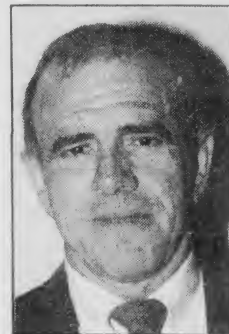

Freilich said David Cayton, of the American Family Association's Tampa office, was responsible for tweaking Meggs' reaction to the stores. Wasserman expounded on Freilich's accusation.

"(David Cayton and the American Family Association) are acting as unregistered lobbyists of law enforcement," said Wasserman. "The group itself is very dangerous and they have no sense of humor. These people have to manufacture these complaints."

Wasserman added that there's a pattern involved when the AFA files a complaint in a community.

"It always appears after a Blockbuster opens up—the AFA moves in when it's hard (for independent stores) to compete," he said.

Another toddler raped

A Tallahassee woman found her 2-year-old daughter being fondled by her uncle as she sat on his lap without underwear on Tuesday night, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Wednesday.

The uncle turned up the house stereo to drown out the voice of the little girl as he molested her. The mother, who had been in the kitchen, immediately left the house with her daughter and returned later with her husband. The suspect had already left the house before they arrived.

The child was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center for evaluation and had no apparent injuries. The 34-year-old uncle was found and arrested Wednesday evening at work.

Warrant out

Police are searching for a suspect who kidnapped and brutally beat his ex-girlfriend and set her house on fire twice, just hours after being released from prison on a murder charge last week, Garret said.

Jessie James Owens was released from prison Feb. 21 after spending three years in prison on a reduced charge of manslaughter. Within hours of his release, he managed to track down his former girlfriend, Sharon Denise Tripp, 35, of 1121 Central St.

Owens was angry because Tripp had not visited him during his incarceration. He approached her as she was leaving for work in the morning and threatened to kill her. He then began beating her in the face and head, before dragging her to a nearby wooded area, where he continued to hit her.

Tripp attempted several times to escape, but each time she was chased down and beaten. She finally got away and was found by police who were called to the area by witnesses. Owens escaped.

At 7:30 p.m. the next day, a fire was reported at Tripp's house. Tripp and her children were not staying at the home at the time because of the attack the day before. No one was injured, but one bedroom was seriously damaged.

The Tallahassee Fire Department initiated an arson investigation because the fire was of a suspicious nature.

Later that night about 10:30 p.m., police responded to a second fire at Tripp's house. After the second fire, the victim's entire house was destroyed.

Arrest warrants have been issued for Owens on battery and kidnapping charges. He is also considered an arson suspect.

Owens is a 30-year-old black man, 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 160 pounds. His hair is styled in a jerri curl and he walks with slumped shoulders. He was last seen wearing a brown jacket and jeans. He has no known address.

Anyone with information is asked to call police at 681-4200. Anyone wishing to assist the Tripp family is encouraged to call the Red Cross.

Yellow-toothed bandit

At 1:30 Tuesday afternoon a woman walking to a dumpster at the Plaza Apartments, 982 W. Brevard St., was robbed of her jewelry by a man with yellow teeth wielding a handgun.

The suspect drove up in a faded rust color Buick and requested directions to University Square. When the 20-year-old victim got close to the car, the suspect displayed a handgun and demanded her jewelry. The gunman warned, "Unless you want to catch this bullet, take it off."

The suspect was last seen driving away toward Brevard Street. He is described as a 22-year-old black man, 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, weighing about 175 pounds. He has short hair, a light to medium complexion and yellow teeth.

Hate crimes statistics

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement recently reported statistics for hate crimes occurring in Florida to the Attorney General's Office, said Linda Booze of FDLE.

During 1991 there were 265 incidents of hate crime reported involving 309 offenses throughout the state. In Leon County, there were 16 offenses reported.

Booze said the report is only preliminary and the FDLE is still collecting more information. A detailed report should be compiled and released by the Attorney General's Office in a couple of months.

Booze could not say whether there was a rise or decrease in the number of reported cases of hate crime.

Another toddler raped

A Tallahassee woman found her 2-year-old daughter being fondled by her uncle as she sat on his lap without underwear on Tuesday night, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Wednesday.

The uncle turned up the house stereo to drown out the voice of the little girl as he molested her. The mother, who had been in the kitchen, immediately left the house with her daughter and returned later with her husband. The suspect had already left the house before they arrived.

The child was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center for evaluation and had no apparent injuries. The 34-year-old uncle was found and arrested Wednesday evening at work.

Warrant out

Police are searching for a suspect who kidnapped and brutally beat his ex-girlfriend and set her house on fire twice, just hours after being released from prison on a murder charge last week, Garret said.

Jessie James Owens was released from prison Feb. 21 after spending three years in prison on a reduced charge of manslaughter. Within hours of his release, he managed to track down his former girlfriend, Sharon Denise Tripp, 35, of 1121 Central St.

Owens was angry because Tripp had not visited him during his incarceration. He approached her as she was leaving for work in the morning and threatened to kill her. He then began beating her in the face and head, before dragging her to a nearby wooded area, where he continued to hit her.

Tripp attempted several times to escape, but each time she was chased down and beaten. She finally got away and was found by police who were called to the area by witnesses. Owens escaped.

At 7:30 p.m. the next day, a fire was reported at Tripp's house. Tripp and her children were not staying at the home at the time because of the attack the day before. No one was injured, but one bedroom was seriously damaged.

The Tallahassee Fire Department initiated an arson investigation because the fire was of a suspicious nature.

Later that night about 10:30 p.m., police responded to a second fire at Tripp's house. After the second fire, the victim's entire house was destroyed.

Arrest warrants have been issued for Owens on battery and kidnapping charges. He is also considered an arson suspect.

Owens is a 30-year-old black man, 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 160 pounds. His hair is styled in a jerri curl and he walks with slumped shoulders. He was last seen wearing a brown jacket and jeans. He has no known address.

Anyone with information is asked to call police at 681-4200. Anyone wishing to assist the Tripp family is encouraged to call the Red Cross.

Yellow-toothed bandit

At 1:30 Tuesday afternoon a woman walking to a dumpster at the Plaza Apartments, 982 W. Brevard St., was robbed of her jewelry by a man with yellow teeth wielding a handgun.

The suspect drove up in a faded rust color Buick and requested directions to University Square. When the 20-year-old victim got close to the car, the suspect displayed a handgun and demanded her jewelry. The gunman warned, "Unless you want to catch this bullet, take it off."

The suspect was last seen driving away toward Brevard Street. He is described as a 22-year-old black man, 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, weighing about 175 pounds. He has short hair, a light to medium complexion and yellow teeth.

1,500 teachers rally against education cuts

BY JAY SCHROER
STAFF WRITER

About 1,500 teachers from around the state gathered on the steps of the Capitol Wednesday morning to protest budget cuts in education and show their support for Gov. Lawton Chiles' proposed "investment" budget.

"Over the years we have clawed and scratched and fought our way to a good school system," said Marlene Greenlee, a special education teacher from Polk County. "And now we're about to see it slide back down."

The rally, which was organized by Florida's two teacher unions, featured a range of speakers including Chiles, Education Commissioner Betty Castor, Senate President Gwen Margolis, Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary, and a variety of educators and teachers.

Singletary, whose department oversees Florida's prison system, said if teachers are not allowed to do their job now because of the monstrous consequences of the recent budget cuts, then he would have to do his job on even more people later.

Over the past 18 months, the education budget has been cut by more than $1 billion, and the current legislative budget proposal would snip away yet another $14.3 million.

Wednesday's protestors came from around the state.

Chiles' proposed budget includes $1.3 billion in new revenues gained by eliminating exemptions in the sales tax and other tax changes. The additional money would be targeted for education, environmental protection, health care and social services.

But even under Chiles' investment budget, education funding would still be below last year's levels.

Ron Sachs, director of communications for the Florida Education Association/United, said after the rally the cooperative effort between his union and the Florida Teaching Profession-National Education Association had spent "a few thousand" dollars on the event for signs, buttons, flyers and bag lunches for the demonstrators.

Sachs said teachers had used their own money for the trip and received the day off by using leave time. After the rally, teachers sought out their local representatives inside the Capitol and made their positions clear.

Laurie Murray, president of the Duval County chapter of FEA/United, said around 200 people had come with the group.

He said several had talked to their senators, but, "Since both were Republicans, they pretty much stonewalled."

Khahala Stamper, a second-grade teacher in Jacksonville, said the previous cuts have already had a negative effect.

"My kids do not receive any art, music or P.E.," she said, adding that cutbacks in the number of teachers' aides mean teachers have less time to spend with students.

"If the state doesn't close some of those loopholes in taxes so people can pay their fair share, we will continue to suffer," Stamper said. "Why does it always fall back on the children?"

Russell Clemmons, a high school math teacher from Orange County, said class size had already been increasing.

He added that without Chiles' "investment" budget, class sizes would continue to rise, creating a situation where "You're just looking at crowd control, not teaching."

Clemmons said legislators were telling him that people would not support tax increases now.

"All the citizens hear is tax, the 'T' word," he said.

But Clemmons said he hoped people would understand that Chiles' proposals call mostly for tax reform, not new taxes.

DISSENTING OPINIONS

Feminism isn't helped at all by sister-bashing

BY KATHARINE HANSEN
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

Ever since the feminist movement began, I have read dozens of snotty, holier-than-thou articles trashing the Miss America pageant and its state and local preliminaries (such as Miss FSU), but never have I read one as mean-spirited, anti-sisterhood, and unproductive as the one written by Mary Jane Ryals in the Feb. 21 issue of the Flambeau.

Such an article catches my attention because I am in the extremely incongruous position of being both a feminist and a Miss America Pageant junkie. Note that I do not say "beauty pageant" junkie. My addiction is limited to the pageants in the Miss America system because other pageants, such as Miss USA and Miss Universe, truly do exploit women. The women are almost exclusively judged on appearance; there is not talent competition; and those pageants are little more than extended commercials for the sponsors who donate "cash and prizes."

By contrast, the Miss America Pageant system in the world's largest scholarship program for women. Women's Studies Director Jean Bryant noted in the Flambeau last week that there are other ways for women to earn scholarships. True enough.

But, (and, mind you, I detest feminist-bashing even more than I dislike Miss America-bashing) I've got to tell you sisters, that as far as I'm aware, we feminists have made no attempt to build a scholarship program for women on anywhere near the scale of the Atlantic City-based pageant. Until we do, perhaps we have no business bashing Miss America.

Of course the great flaw in the scholarship argument is that, to earn scholarships, these young women are required to parade around in swimsuits in front of 70 million TV viewers. That's a potent argument. The current executive director of the pageant says he would dump the swimsuit competition in the blink of an eye if he weren't sure TV sponsors would drop the pageant like a hot potato without the meat parade. He has taken some baby steps in the right direction: The official pageant publications have omitted the contestants' measurements for the past several years. The swimsuit competition has been renamed "Swimsuit and Physical Fitness." The number of points for which the swimsuit competition counts has gradually decreased. And the amount of time the contestants are on stage in their swimsuits has diminished. The pageant cannot be accused of greed—it's a nonprofit organization, and everyone who works on it, including the executive director, is a volunteer. But without the TV coverage and the sponsors, there would be no money for scholarships.

And sometimes I wonder if exploiting oneself in a swimsuit is any worse than being a young man who subjects himself to the possibility of severe bodily injury to win a football scholarship. I suppose that depends on whether you think physical pain and permanent disability are equal to humiliation.

At the time the women's movement started, the pageant probably deserved its bad rap and all the condescending articles. It was hopelessly behind the times. The contestants of the 1960s aspired to little more than wifehood and motherhood. Contestants of the 1970s and '80s wanted to be—and mostly succeeded as—broadcast journalists and performers. But four of the last five Miss Americas represent a new kind of Miss America. They are professionals. One is a nurse of terminal cancer patients who used the money she earned for her year of Miss America appearances to open a hospice. Another is a veterinarian. Two more are in law school.

The outmoded Miss America was discouraged from offering any opinion of substance. Today's Miss Americas, however, are required to have "platforms," issues they plan to talk about during a year in which the public will pay

I have thought long and hard about how to begin this letter, and I have come to the conclusion that the best way to convey my message is to get directly to the point.

Upon reading the commentary pertaining to the Miss Florida State Pageant held last Tuesday and Wednesday evening at Ruby Diamond Auditorium, I felt it imperative to voice my feelings towards the remarks made by Mary Jane Ryals. Although I appreciate the compliments made by Miss Ryals, I am also highly upset with the insinuation that all 20 participants were merely "bimbos" and "Barbie Doll chicks" trying to pull off a facade.

These accusations were obviously made by a close-minded, ignorant person. And although I realize commentaries are strictly one-sided and should be taken with a "grain of salt," I still remain offended and disappointed that Miss Ryals could not see past her own frustrations.

Having been a participant in the pageant, I know how hard not only the 20 girls in the pageant worked, but I am also quite aware of how much time and dedication went into the production by the gentlemen of Kappa Alpha Order and everyone else involved. I had a wonderful experience and felt honored to be a part of an activity that took so much pride in Florida State. So when I read these comments, I not only felt bad for the girls I competed with, but I also felt sorry for the lady making the accusations.

Honestly, do you think it is easy to get up on stage in front of the public in just a swimming suit, or to perform a solo, or to answer a double-sided question with poise and confidence that will allow you to communicate your opinion? These are all accomplishments that take pride and guts. And these three facets of competition are the only ones seen by the audience.

What Miss Ryals fails to acknowledge is the interview each participant must endure prior to the evening events. She too fails to include that this accounted for 30 percent of the pageant competition. Is there some social law that I am unaware of stating women cannot be talented, beautiful and intelligent at the same time? And if there is no such rule, would you not want someone with all these enduring qualities to represent and be a spokesperson for

Commentary is part of a much bigger problem

BY BRETT BUELL
SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

AIDS is sweeping newsrooms throughout this land—starting right here at Florida State University in the Flambeau.

But not the AIDS you think.

This AIDS—American Institution Destruction Seekers—may prove just as damaging as the deadly virus that took Jim Henson's and Freddy Mercury's lives, and will inevitably take superstar Magic Johnson's.

It may prove so deadly because of where it comes from and who it infects. In fact, it may help solve one virus while inflicting the American people with another.

Hate.

Only hate could stop the spread of that deadly delicate virus.

You don't have sex with people you hate. And drug abusers don't share needles with people they hate. They might shoot each other, but they won't share.

But what could cause people who would otherwise care for one another to hate? What would cause the public to ridicule a person for his or her behavior, though that behavior may have been acceptable only days or weeks before? What could cause blacks to hate whites, whites to hate blacks, and groups to accept individuals into their private organizations simply because their skin color is one shade or another?

The answer is simple: The Press.

Every day newspapers show up on people's doorsteps and nearby newsstands and people pick them up to read them. The newspapers report what the president of the United States said and did the day before, what community events you might be interested in, and how your favorite sports teams fared.

If the Flambeau says the Seminoles beat Wake Forest in basketball, you can believe it.

Likewise, if commentary articles discuss an event they say occurred—and then discuss the significance of those occurrences—you may disagree with the event's significance, but you at least know the event being commented on really happened.

Or did they?

Last week this paper ran a commentary holding a fraternity—the fraternity I belong to—up to public ridicule. It said falsely the fraternity I belong to was founded upon the same principles as the Ku Klux Klan. It wrongly compared our members to rapists and put down the contestants of the Miss FSU pageant that my fraternity hosted.

But the writer who created this front-page piece (I hesitate to call her a reporter or journalist) did little to check basic facts of what this whole event was all about.

This Miss FSU Pageant, while hosted by a local group, is part of a much larger organization. The young lady crowned Miss FSU competes in the Miss Florida Pageant. That winner goes on to compete for the title of Miss America.

Past FSU winners have done well.

1991's Miss FSU won the talent competition at the Miss Florida Pageant.

The 1987 winner—who emceed this year's event—went on to become Miss Florida and a Miss America semi-finalist. Imagine a girl who sits near you in your biology, music, English or criminology classes going on to become Miss America. Imagine the pride, the prestige and the honor that bestows on our school.

In Friday's paper it was ridiculed and spat upon.

The local franchise of the Miss America Pageant, run in accordance with guidelines of the Miss America Pageant, with judges approved and selected by the Miss Florida and Miss America pageants, was ridiculed.

But ridicule is a manner of opinion, isn't it? Ridiculing

LETTERS

Readers respond to Ryals' wrath (Part I)

Editor:

The last thing Mary Jane Ryals needs to be doing is criticizing the credentials of others.

As an English major, I have observed Ms. Ryals and her colleagues preening at Finale's Poetry/Fiction nights for the last two years. Initially, my attendance at these readings were assignments for writing classes taught by the participants. I sat on cramped, sticky stools for hours, listening bug-eyed as Ms. Ryals and her fellow "writers" sipped Heinekens and showed off their turtle necks, their hair tousled low and thick over ankhs and crystals. I have watched men and women sit in squalid semi-circles, carefully demarcated by sexual preference (repressed mother-lesbians in front, please, victims of phallocentrism, xenophobia or white males to the rear . . . ) and national origin (ooooohh . . . look, Mary, there's a Negro . . . let's hang out!) gaze droop-lidded at barely-literate readers wallowing in the pretentious yellow spotlight of rape-race poetry or selections from incoherent novels that will never see a publisher's desk.

But that's all right—they're thinkers! Everything screams this at Finale's on a Tuesday night (or Rubyfruit et al.): Hey! . . . in this light, you could be Sartre—maybe Kerouac! . . . Wow! Is that Popular Culture class difficult! Good thing it's legitimate! . . . Know anything about Camus? . . . No? . . . Neither do I—Let's talk about him!

Get off it, Mary—there's no difference between the silliness of a beauty pageant and the silliness of pretentious academia on the prowl. As a "writer," you should have learned that long ago.

BRAVO, BRAVO, another brilliant piece of journalism by a sexual intellectual at the Flambeau. This is perusal to the "story" by Mary Jane Ryals on the Miss FSU Pageant, hosted by the Kappa Alpha Order. Or was it about civil rights, ozone depletion, necrophilia (?), music, literature or George Bush? I am glad that you are an expert in so many areas, oh—the information you must absorb in that cute little skull of yours. Mary Jane (marijuana) Ryals, your article reminds me of an anti-drug commercial where a young man believes he is writing a great paper, but he is so high he doesn't have a clue.

My fraternity has been slandered in your "paper" many times in the past and I am sure it will be again in the future. Much racism stems from a lack of knowledge or understanding of others. It is obvious you have little knowledge or understanding of my fraternity.

I would invite you to meet with me or other members of KA, but I believe you would rather stay in your little glass bubble and concoct your own little fantasies about the world and others in it. You are too busy trying to save the world to realize you aren't accomplishing much besides promoting hatred.

Tomorrow morning while you are eating your granola, strapping on your sandals and reading old D.K. Roberts columns, be sure to look in the mirror. If your reflection isn't laughing at you, be assured I am. Keep up the good work.

Weeks ago when I heard there was to be a Miss FSU Pageant I realized it would present a splendid opportunity to expose such an idiotic and negative institution, but I was disappointed after reading Mary Jane Ryals' recent front-page commentary. Ms. Ryals brought out a rhetorical baseball bat where she could have better used a scalpel. A nearly continuous strain of hyperbole with condescending bits of intellectual name dropping do not a scholar, or social critic, make. Her commentary abdicated credibility. It is necessary, I believe, to expose beauty pageants for what they are. Ridiculous. Ridiculous displays that reinforce a negative female image. But Ms. Ryals' own ridiculous staccato of foreign phrases and almost continuous exaggeration undercut the force of her commentary. Her use of "exploitative" (the adjective she was looking for is "exploitive") shows that although she seems comfortable with a useless stock of foreign phrases, she has a limited understanding of English. And please, Ms. Ryals, keep your thumbnail sketches of Cixous in the sock drawer until you are prepared to supply us with a cohesive sketch of your own. Using "brilliant" to describe Cixous is similar to introducing Jacques Derrida as a "brilliant" textual critic. Thanks for telling us—we know. And if we don't, we should have to look her up ourselves. I considered parodying your "commentary" but I quickly realized such an attempt would end up being guilty either of understatement or hysterics. In short, your article is so absurd and heavy handed in parts that it actually parodies itself. I am disappointed because of the pageant on the overall population percentages or perhaps we should stick to the "Mary Jane Ryals System" (Mary Jane you had better get a patent on that.) Well Mary Jane, I guess you should also make the draft picks for Green Bay Packers next year. With your infinite knowledge I'm sure we can trust in you to do the best job. No, better yet, Mary Jane should probably go through Fraternity rush so that all things are fair and square, or just participate in the pageant.

This letter is in response to your coverage of Miss FSU in the Feb. 21 issue of the Flambeau. I have never seen such a horrible piece of journalism in my life. I even question if you went to the pageant because your facts are way off base. First of all, the winner was Miss Carrie Pollack, a junior voice performance major, and not Miss Jacobs, the international finance major as you falsely reported. Second, the only reason I can see for your outrageous comments is that you lack both the talent and the beauty of the 20 women on stage. Miss Pollack, performing a song from the opera Diefledermaus, won the talent part of the competition which counts for 40 percent of the total points. There is also a pre-pageant interview which counts for 30 percent for both the swimsuit and evening gown portion. Miss Pollack also has the supporting role in an upcoming school opera, and carries a 3.45 GPA. As for your blasting of KA Order fraternity, although they are known as a Southern fraternity, they had nothing to do with the judging of the contest. The fact that the one black girl did not make the cut has nothing to do with the fraternity. Furthermore, I found all of your racist remarks appalling and uncalled for. As for the scholarship, Miss Pollack is an out-of-state student, which means the money will be put to good use. For the Flambeau to run such a misleading, prejudicial commentary on the front page is an insult to every woman who worked hard for the pageant. I strongly suggest Miss Ryals stay away from further commentaries on subjects she knows nothing about.

I am writing in regards to the article entitled "Same as it ever was with FSU's beauty pageant" published in the Feb. 21 issue of the paper. I am astounded your paper would print such one-sided rubbish. Apparently Ms. Ryals has had a sheltered life and has nothing better to do but grind her teeth on the first available issue that pops up.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but hasn't the Miss Florida State University Pageant gone on for many years past in the same fashion that it was carried out this year. I don't believe the "Gentlemen of Kappa Alpha" changed this event to fit into what Ms. Ryals called, and I quote, their "Necrophiliac" ways. (For your further information you might consider purchasing Ms. Ryals a new dictionary so she can more appropriately use and correctly spell adjectives). If you do believe this, I have some quality property to sell you in Kuwait. To compare the Kappa Alphas to the Ku Klux Klan has also been an easy way out for your paper, but I guess the Florida Flambeau takes that way out. Would it be too much to ask the reporters of your paper to interject a wee bit of the relevant facts into each article. Maybe not, I guess the students in Tallahassee need a good laugh or two each day.

As for the pageant itself, it was run in the same way it has been run in the past and will still be run for years to come. As for your reference to the ethnic background of the contestants, this was totally unfounded. The Kappa Alphas did not have a quota of who should enter and who should not. Maybe if we all would do it your way there would be a checklist implemented. Should we base the ethnic content

Editor:

I found Mary Jane Ryals' article/commentary about the Miss FSU Pageant a biting and amusing one. But I also thought it sounded much like the crazed ramblings of a truly ignorant feminist. Isn't this writer aware that indiscriminate bashing like hers only fuels a backlash of more resentment and misunderstanding? I mean that she further perpetrates (sic) the widespread notion that a woman who speaks out against sexual exploitation is nothing but a babbling extremist, even so far as calling her a dyke.

Unfortunately, Mary Jane didn't dwell much on some of the astute questions she did raise: If it's a pageant that emphasizes scholarship, then why not ask the more challenging questions? Instead, her energies seemed focused on name calling, using the same frivolousness she charges those involved with the pageant as having. It's a shame she didn't present a more thorough, intelligent argument that shed more light on why so many of us women are frustrated with how we're perceived these days.

Mary Jane Ryals, where do you get off writing an "article," excuse me, sermon like that about the Miss FSU Pageant. First of all, Mary Jane, you forgot to mention that talent and interview (yes, I said interview) is 70 percent of the score. And no, the question that was asked on stage was not the interview. That was a question randomly picked from the interview. Do you seriously think the interview questions were about baking? Every girl that went through the interview could name every national, state and local politician, their platform and compare them. Not to mention there are a battery of in-depth questions about current world events, how to mend education budget cuts, and yes, questions about comparing ideals of world leaders and the ozone depletion.

Even though you continually referred to the $1,000 apparel, you should know that the majority of contestants rent or make their talent outfits, swimsuits, interview suits and evening gowns. Oh, but wait Mary Jane, you would probably be offended that women still knows how to sew! Too 1950s for you?

Next, you referred to the fact that there was not a fair representation of minorities. This pageant was open to all races, creeds and colors and Kappa Alpha spent all fall semester collecting applications. So don't slam Kappa Alpha for this because if the "Japanese and Redheads" felt so strongly about being represented they should have gotten off their duffs and applied. (By the way, Miss FSU 1990 was a redhead if you did your research.) I also can't believe you were implying the judges were racist when the one African American did not make the Top 10. You made it sound like she should have made it because she was black. That there my friend is racism in all of its glory. There have been many Miss Americas that are African American and they made it on their intelligence and talent. They earned it. By the way, Mary Jane, did you even take a tenth of a second to glance over at the judges' table and see there was an extremely upright African-American judge who himself was chosen Mr. U.S.A. 1992? If I were him, I would be personally insulted by you. Hell, I'm insulted and I'm white!

When you referred to the swimsuit portion, I was wondering, were you watching the same thing that everyone else in Ruby Diamond was watching? You made it sound like it was 20 girls in high heels, G-strings and wet T-shirts being judged by the football team! The official Miss America swimsuit does not even come above the hip bone and can be found in the granny section of the swimwear shop. Furthermore, the contestants did not even stand around far enough to see their rear ends!

Mary Jane Ryals, you need to get off your feminist pedestal long enough to get your facts straight. (Like the name and major of Miss FSU.) The new Miss FSU 1992 is a well-deserving Carrie Pollack who is a vocal performance major.

Congratulations Carrie, you will make a fantastic Miss FSU and hopefully win the title of Miss Florida and then Miss America.

and criticizing an event, the way it happened, and those who put it on is a manner of opinion—right?

Not if that event didn't happen the way the writer said and was put on by people other than that writer said.

Calling one group racists for not selecting a black girl as Miss FSU when a different group is judging is not unfair—it is incorrect.

Criticizing the way the pageant is run—run like any other preliminary to the Miss America Pageant, run in a standard, fair manner praised widely throughout the United States—and then criticizing a different group for making up such rules—is wrong. Not unfair, but incorrect and wrong.

This is the new AIDS sweeping the nation.

Pick up the newspaper and read it.

Go into each article and ask yourself, "What if this really didn't happen? What if the person watched this entire event thought they were watching something else?"

It happened after Miss FSU.

It happens more often than you think.

This is AIDS journalism, and it sits next to well-written articles that speak the truth.

And like the AIDS virus that can only be passed on through exchange of delicate fluids, a virus unable to survive unless mixed with these warm, life-giving liquids, AIDS journalism depends on the truth of the other articles that surround it and the integrities of the other journalists in the field.

AIDS journalism—unlike bacteria journalism that fills tabloid papers that everyone knows are false (i.e. "Martians Invade Philadelphia")—is the greatest threat to our free speech powers.

Americans expect journalists to find the truth and report it as truth. When a group is responsible for injustices, let them be held accountable. Let the public be outraged.

But when reporters don't take the time to check their basic facts before printing them, holding groups who aren't accountable for outrages that aren't even outrages, the new AIDS epidemic has infected our publications.

When you can't distinguish which facts are true and which facts are false until your name is wrongly held up for public ridicule, the epidemic is festering.

We'll see what happens as AIDS journalism takes root on America—first infecting the young, eager-to-learn minds at colleges and universities, and growing through adulthood.

We'll see, though we may not realize, what truths these journalists report years from now are false, and we'll see what groups are unrightly damaged because of AIDS journalism.

Maybe one day there will be a cure.

But for those who pick up their daily paper wondering whether or not the reported events really happened, or when black people are at white people's throats, women at men's, and Americans at Japanese's, the AIDS journalism virus will have destroyed the First Amendment rights essential to living in a peaceful, democratic society—and you'll know it.

Or will you?

attention to what they have to say. Last year's Miss America, Marjorie Vincent, for example, toured the nation speaking out against domestic violence. These platforms are a major part of today's judging criteria. They play an important role in the pre-pageant judges interview and the televised question the finalists must answer. I'd be willing to bet Mary Jane Ryals doesn't know any of this and hasn't watched the national pageant since it became unfashionable for feminists to do.

We rarely see Miss America after she's crowned. She seems to disappear into the heartland, where she makes her appearances. But two of the last three Miss Americas, both African-American, have appeared at Florida A&M University, where they spoke inspiring and motivational words about the importance of education. One young high-school girl in the audience said she had never thought about going to college before she heard one of these fine role models speak. I'll bet Mary Jane Ryals didn't know that either.

Of the 70 million people who watch the pageant every year, 70 percent are women. Probably few of them are feminists like me, but many probably have their consciousness raised enough to be offended by sexism and exploitation. So why do so many women watch? I have two theories. 1) The pageant is not as exploitive as it used to be. 2) Women are basically narcissistic. Although I may be construed as anti-feminist, I happen to believe that women like to watch other women. We look for the things we like about ourselves in other women, and yes, sometimes we even make catty comments about the things in other women that we don't like about ourselves. But perhaps an event that enables women to celebrate and enjoy other women isn't all bad.

I watched my first Miss America Pageant in 1964 when I was 10, and I have not missed one since. In 1987, I covered the pageant as a member of the press. I used to enjoy trashing the contestants' inept talent acts, much the way Mary Jane Ryals did in her nasty article. But today, the Miss America hopeful who is a truly bad performer is a rarity. They're all well-trained and have worked hard to come off well in front of the audience.

Yes, of course the pageant is flawed. Many people believe it exploits women more than almost anything in popular culture. Yes, its roots are deeply implanted in the white male system (although it is clearly not as ethnocentric as it used to be). Yes, it was devised out of greed 70 years ago when Atlantic City merchants discovered a way to extend the summer season an extra week by exploiting young women in a bathing-suit contest. Yes, it encourages women to compete against each other. And, yes, there are those swimsuits.

But perhaps, instead of trashing a sister who is trying to earn a scholarship in a way that is comfortable for her, we'd be better off directing our negativity at NBC, which currently airs the pageant, or the corporate sponsors, who could make a significant contribution to empowering women if they would agree to sponsor and promote the pageant without the swimsuit competition. Or perhaps we assume the war chant legitimate.

In retrospect, I find it sad that above all else, a woman wrote these comments. I should hope that in the future, instead of being jealous and envious, we will see support and pride in our contemporaries.

I am extremely proud to associate myself with the Florida State University Pageant and am so pleased I decided to participate. Through my experience, I have met some of the most kind, intelligent and talented ladies.

If I too had been as close-minded and frustrated as Mary Jane Ryals, I would have blown an outstanding opportunity in my lifetime.

should direct our anger at a society that fails to provide enough opportunities for women to achieve their highest potential and certainly does not provide enough scholarships. (In the athletic realm, for example, including at Florida State, women are awarded about half the scholarships men get.)

The day after Ms. Ryals' article appeared, I attended the third annual FSU Women as Leaders Conference, where I witnessed the pain of a young woman whom Ryals thoughtlessly trashed in her article. Whether or not we as feminists agree with the concept of a scholarship pageant, I am convinced that it accomplishes no constructive purpose for us to disparage our sisters for participating in a program we don't happen to believe in. This kind of sister-bashing is why feminims has become the "F" word. You don't like the pageant, Mary Jane? Fine. But at a time when women need each other more than ever, don't belittle your sisters for doing it their way.

I should also hope that if someone would wish to voice such unpleasant opinions, they would at the very least get their facts straight. For the record, it is Carrie Pollack who now holds the title of Miss FSU 1992.

Palestinian representative speaks on Mideast peace process tonight

It could be a short lesson in Palestinian history. Or a lecture on the role of Palestinians in a post-Gulf War Middle East.

But what it will be is a discussion entitled "Is Middle East peace possible?" by a member of the legislative arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"(I will talk about) the peace process and how it has divided the Palestinian people," Anan Ameri, who belongs to the Palestine National Council, said Wednesday in a telephone interview from her home in Washington, D.C.

In her talk tonight at Florida State University's Fischer Lecture Hall, Ameri said she will emphasize American policy toward the Middle East and how it has changed since the Persian Gulf War that ended roughly a year ago.

Ameri, along with 17 other Palestinian expatriates, represents the U.S. on the national council. The council has about 400 people who represent the interests of Palestinians worldwide and calls itself the government of Palestinians. It has close ties with the PLO.

Ameri

Ameri hopes her lecture will inspire the audience to help the people of Palestine.

"I'd like them to do something about Palestinians... From calling your Congressman to marching in a rally, there are ways to help the Palestinian people," she said.

Taleb Salhab, a Palestinian graduate student at FSU, said he hopes people who attend Ameri's lecture will gain a working knowledge of Palestine.

"I'd like the students to walk away with a basic understanding of the Middle East region and the plight of the Palestinian people," said Salhab, a member of the Coalition for Peace and Justice in Palestine, a co-sponsor of Ameri's lecture. The Tallahassee Peace Coalition and the Center for Participant Education are the other sponsors.

Ameri, who said she lectures frequently at college campuses, also heads the Palestinian Aid Society which provides food, clothing, money, and other aid to needy Palestinians in the Middle East.

She said she came to America 18 years ago as a student and became a citizen about 13 years ago. She holds a doctorate in sociology and taught at Wayne State University in Detroit for about five years.

But she is now a full-time activist.

"I believe people should do something with their knowledge," she said. "There's knowledge for the sake of knowledge and then there is knowledge so that one can make this world... a more fair, more just place to be in."

Meggs hits Drive-In with civil suit

BY JOSH MITCHELL
STAFF WRITER

In the latest volley of the censorship conflict between local video store owners and State Attorney Willie Meggs, a summons was hand-delivered to the owners of Drive-In Movies Tuesday afternoon.

Friends of the First Amendment attorney David Wasserman, who will defend the store along with a group of American Civil Liberties Union attorneys, said Wednesday the summons contained a civil suit filed by Meggs charging the store with violating state obscenity laws.

The two movies cited in the summons are The Realities and The Young Like It Hot.

Wasserman said Meggs likely filed a civil suit instead of a criminal suit because, according to Wasserman, civil suits are easier to prosecute.

"He has to prove beyond a reasonable doubt (with a criminal suit)," said Wasserman. "I guess he didn't want to seem too heavy handed by arresting anyone."

Lisa Roberts, a co-owner of Drive-In Movies, said her attorneys had advised her not to comment on the case at this point, but she did say she wasn't happy with being targeted for the first summons since Meggs sent out letters warning store owners they may be violating state obscenity laws by renting adult movies.

"I'm very saddened that this is where our tax dollars are being spent," she said.

Wasserman said his clients have 20 days to deliver an answer responding to the summons and, following a period of discovery after the response is delivered, they may decide to file a counter suit.

Wasserman said Meggs might be biased in the case because the state attorney may be linked to the American Family Association, which reportedly incited the attacks on local renters of adult movies.

"I hope to be able to find out that (Meggs) is a member of the AFA," said Wasserman.

Friends of the First Amendment President Barry Freilich, whose organization recently set up camp in town to support the store owners, said his group is prepared if a long fight has to be carried out in Tallahassee.

"We've been ready from day one," he said. "(Meggs) is going to have a tough road to hoe, and this could be the end of his political career."

Because the case is pending, Meggs said he couldn't comment on the matter.

Censored from page 1

Roberts, of Drive-In Movies—one of the stores that continues to rent adult movies—noted that FOIA should be of great help in these trying times for video store owners.

"It's a nice little support group," she said. "They just have a lot of good ideas on how to educate the public on this issue."

Beverly Strickland, manager of 4-Star Video, also appreciated the aid of FOIA.

"It's better knowing there's other people fighting it too," said Strickland.

Even though no arrests have been made or trial dates set, Freilich and Wasserman say that once Meggs decides to go through with a prosecution attempt, the local scenario will explode. And according to Freilich, Meggs shouldn't have a problem getting an indictment against stores that rent X-rated videos.

"You can get a grand jury to indict a ham sandwich," he said. "If (Meggs) is inoculated with the AFA needle, then he could go to trial."

Wasserman also said the video stores who complied with Meggs' letter and removed their adult movies aren't free from prosecution because Meggs' office would have records of the "crime" already having been committed.

"Anyone who's taken down their (x-rated) movies shouldn't feel safe now," said Wasserman.

Meggs said Wednesday that since investigation of the matter is still pending, he couldn't comment specifically, but he did say his office plans on pursuing the case.

"We intend to comply with the appropriate Florida statutes in all regards," Meggs said.

According to Freilich, the reason the video store owners, if indicted, would be charged with distributing obscene material instead of pornographic material is because pornography is protected by the First Amendment while, under Florida statute 847, obscenity is not. And, Wasserman said, obscenity is determined by community standards.

Meggs confirmed their statements.

"The statute that we're dealing with is obscenity," he said.

Wasserman said he's already offered to lend Meggs, who apparently was ungrateful, a hand with that determination.

"I've offered him information on the community standards and he didn't have the courtesy to return my letter."

Freilich also had some advice for Meggs.

"You guys are the experts on community standards," Freilich said to the group of store owners. "You'd think (Meggs) would want to ask you about it."

Roberts, of Drive-In Movies, had collected the signatures of 1,055 of the store's customers who support the rental of adult movies on the store's petition as of Friday night.

Strickland, of 4-Star Video, said that of her store's approximately 1,600 members about 300 rent adult movies on a regular basis.

Wasserman provided additional community standards information.

"Be reminded that this is a town of 28,000 college students," he said.

Meggs was brief when asked what he thought about Friends of the First Amendment and their charges that people should be able to view whatever they want in the privacy of their own homes.

"I'm certainly a friend of the First Amendment . . . but I'm not going to respond to these irresponsible allegations," he said.

Wasserman, however, was very intent on getting a response from Meggs.

"I publicly challenge Willie Meggs to a debate in a neutral forum in an effort to educate the community about this issue and the use of tax dollars to promote censorship," he said.

Meggs hits Drive-In with civil suit

BY JOSH MITCHELL
STAFF WRITER

In the latest volley of the censorship conflict between local video store owners and State Attorney Willie Meggs, a summons was hand-delivered to the owners of Drive-In Movies Tuesday afternoon.

Friends of the First Amendment attorney David Wasserman, who will defend the store along with a group of American Civil Liberties Union attorneys, said Wednesday the summons contained a civil suit filed by Meggs charging the store with violating state obscenity laws.

The two movies cited in the summons are The Realities and The Young Like It Hot.

Wasserman said Meggs likely filed a civil suit instead of a criminal suit because, according to Wasserman, civil suits are easier to prosecute.

"He has to prove beyond a reasonable doubt (with a criminal suit)," said Wasserman. "I guess he didn't want to seem too heavy handed by arresting anyone."

Lisa Roberts, a co-owner of Drive-In Movies, said her attorneys had advised her not to comment on the case at this point, but she did say she wasn't happy with being targeted for the first summons since Meggs sent out letters warning store owners they may be violating state obscenity laws by renting adult movies.

"I'm very saddened that this is where our tax dollars are being spent," she said.

Wasserman said his clients have 20 days to deliver an answer responding to the summons and, following a period of discovery after the response is delivered, they may decide to file a counter suit.

Wasserman said Meggs might be biased in the case because the state attorney may be linked to the American Family Association, which reportedly incited the attacks on local renters of adult movies.

"I hope to be able to find out that (Meggs) is a member of the AFA," said Wasserman.

Friends of the First Amendment President Barry Freilich, whose organization recently set up camp in town to support the store owners, said his group is prepared if a long fight has to be carried out in Tallahassee.

"We've been ready from day one," he said. "(Meggs) is going to have a tough road to hoe, and this could be the end of his political career."

Because the case is pending, Meggs said he couldn't comment on the matter.

Censored from page 1

Roberts, of Drive-In Movies—one of the stores that continues to rent adult movies—noted that FOIA should be of great help in these trying times for video store owners.

"It's a nice little support group," she said. "They just have a lot of good ideas on how to educate the public on this issue."

Beverly Strickland, manager of 4-Star Video, also appreciated the aid of FOIA.

"It's better knowing there's other people fighting it too," said Strickland.

Even though no arrests have been made or trial dates set, Freilich and Wasserman say that once Meggs decides to go through with a prosecution attempt, the local scenario will explode. And according to Freilich, Meggs shouldn't have a problem getting an indictment against stores that rent X-rated videos.

"You can get a grand jury to indict a ham sandwich," he said. "If (Meggs) is inoculated with the AFA needle, then he could go to trial."

Wasserman also said the video stores who complied with Meggs' letter and removed their adult movies aren't free from prosecution because Meggs' office would have records of the "crime" already having been committed.

"Anyone who's taken down their (x-rated) movies shouldn't feel safe now," said Wasserman.

Meggs said Wednesday that since investigation of the matter is still pending, he couldn't comment specifically, but he did say his office plans on pursuing the case.

"We intend to comply with the appropriate Florida statutes in all regards," Meggs said.

According to Freilich, the reason the video store owners, if indicted, would be charged with distributing obscene material instead of pornographic material is because pornography is protected by the First Amendment while, under Florida statute 847, obscenity is not. And, Wasserman said, obscenity is determined by community standards.

Meggs confirmed their statements. "The statute that we're dealing with is obscenity," he said.

Wasserman said he's already offered to lend Meggs, who apparently was ungrateful, a hand with that determination.

"I've offered him information on the community standards and he didn't have the courtesy to return my letter."

Freilich also had some advice for Meggs. "You guys are the experts on community standards," Freilich said to the group of store owners. "You'd think (Meggs) would want to ask you about it."

Roberts, of Drive-In Movies, had collected the signatures of 1,055 of the store's customers who support the rental of adult movies on the store's petition as of Friday night.

Strickland, of 4-Star Video, said that of her store's approximately 1,600 members about 300 rent adult movies on a regular basis.

Wasserman provided additional community standards information.

"Be reminded that this is a town of 28,000 college students," he said.

Endangered

could make the problem worse.

The black-capped bird has been called the "spotted owl of the South" because of its potential to pit environmental activists against the timber industry for control of the state's remaining pine forests.

"The red-cockaded woodpecker depends on old pine trees for its nesting and feeding, and the timber companies generally don't let trees get very old," said Don Palmer, a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. "They're not migratory birds and they're very territorial, so Florida has a real predicament with trying to protect this species. The development in South Florida ran them out of that area years ago and now their recovery is more perilous because of the logging and timber business."

To date there are fewer than 800 red-cockaded colonies in Florida, and that is the largest population in the United States. The largest concentration of the woodpeckers is located in nearby Apalachicola National Forest, which is also home to about a third of Florida's approximately 80 endangered species. Florida ranks second only to California in numbers of endangered species.

Legislating species, not habitats

The problem, according to wildlife officials, isn't in getting a particular species on the federal list as endangered or threatened and deserving of protection—the criteria for listing a species are purely biological. Instead, difficulties arise in trying to protect the creature's habitat to insure its survival and recovery. And for that, there is less federal protection, according to Don Wood, the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission's endangered species coordinator.

"The important aspect of listing a species is in designating a critical habitat for it," Wood said. "The amendments to the act made in 1988 have made it onerous to list a habitat for a species, and if there are many more such amendments, the entire act will be too weak to protect any species."

Because of amendments such as these, the process of listing a habitat for protection has exacerbated the ability to list a species.

Steve Cannon/Flambeau

Nature's noble creatures

Sad but true: The Florida panther and American bald eagle, one of each photographed here at the Tallahassee Junior Museum Wednesday, belong to the federal list of endangered species. The animals make Florida their stomping grounds.

Steve Cannon/Flambeau

Most wildlife officials readily admit that it's the habitat that is most crucial for protection.

"If they listed a habitat with a species for protection, which is what should be done, the species wouldn't get listed for four or five years," Wood said. "When economics and politics come into play, the species are the last things considered. But the woodpecker has no critical habitat, and northwest Florida is a critical area for the survival of the species. Not even the Florida panther, which numbers less than 50, has a protected habitat."

Legislation—there's plenty of it

Currently in Congress there are a cluster of such bills that some say would totally cripple the Endangered Species Act. Republican James Hansen of Utah has proposed a bill labeled the "Human Protection Act." The bill and another proposed by California Republican William Dannemyer ask for the federal government to preclude doing anything to protect endangered species unless an economic benefit will outweigh the cost—a notion that enrages many environmentalists.

"These bills are backed by coalitions composed of timber, livestock, mining, and right-to-private-property interests," said Irvin, from the National Wildlife Federation. "Their real agenda is to gut the Act for economic and political purposes. These bills probably won't make it through because the majority of the House supports the Endangered Species Act, but the themes keep reappearing and one may be credible enough one day to make it through."

A particularly damaging piece of proposed legislation, agree environmentalists, is Democrat Les AuCoin's bill which places heavy emphasis on "a high level of timber production, with a low emphasis on roadless recreation and other non-production forest uses." The Oregon senator's bill also includes provisions protecting federal agencies from complying with the Endangered Species Act and other environmental laws for up to three years.

"If the ESA is weakened—and it's already hanging by a thread now—the ability to protect the Florida panther, the manatee and even the Torreya tree will be doomed because to save these creatures, you've got to protect their habitat," said Florida Audubon's Yokel. "There's a movement to remove the panther from the wild, strengthen its bloodline and then return it to the wild, and that may be the only way for it to recover. Without the provisions already in the act you can kiss the panther goodbye."

Recovery of the species, not just its survival, is the main point of contention between environmentalists and their detractors. Recovery of a species means that its population has bounced back to numbers estimated as that before the time of damaging human intervention. The American alligator is one such species, although it is left on the endangered list because of its similarity in appearance to the American crocodile—a severely endangered species.

Recovery should be the goal of lawmakers, according to activists, because once the species returns to normal numbers, there's no need to keep spending money to protect it. But recovery of a species may require that the animal, plant, or even insect in the case of many endangered butterflies, have an extensively protected habitat.

"We encourage the development of the recovery plan because it would protect entire ecosystems for species that share the system," Irvin said. "From a development standpoint, it would require people to think ahead about the entire ecological community and how they're to impact it."

Your Voice needs your bucks this week

BY MICHAEL MCCARTHY

FLAMBEAU WRITER

I turned on V-89 after spending a weekend out of town and heard something strange. "Don't Worry, Be Happy" was playing, but the DJ was changing the rpm's, drawing out the infamous chorus like it was being sung by a hound dog and then speeding it up like the Chipmunks. At the end of the song, the disc jockey came back on and said since nobody had donated any money yet, he was going to play it again. It was no idle threat, and the second time, the DJ sang "Call up, give money" behind the chorus.

Someone caved in and donated. The record was jerked off the turntable, and Nirvana came back on. This is WVFS, the Voice of Florida State, on its pledge drive. It's not polite. It's extortion, plain and simple. No program manager politely explains the virtues of their programs. No community leader tells you how good you'll feel if you'd give your life savings to the station. It's volunteer DJ's threatening to play Barry Manilow and Yoko Ono if someone doesn't call up and pledge. And that's why this is the first pledge drive where I've actually kept the radio on longer instead of turning it off.

This no-holds-barred mentality is what I expect from V-89. Ever since its first broadcast over four years ago, when the former Z-103 pop station was the closest thing to college music (scary thought, huh?), it has given radio listeners a definite alternative to mainstream music. It doesn't have satellite-fed programming or disc jockeys with voices so deep their voice boxes must be in their ankles. These DJ's sound like your neighbors or classmates, except they have names like Michelle the Ninja Death Bitch From Hell and the Love Weasel.

Florida Flambeau commentary

Amazingly, the Voice has never had a pledge drive until now, and they are only holding this one to raise money for a bigger tower (and stronger signal) and to replace decades-old equipment in the studios. Some people would probably prefer V-89's signal to fade away completely. Yet, if you're not used to the music V-89 plays, it quickly grows on you. Some of the music may be harsh or the lyrics inaudible, but to regular listeners, it's audio caffeine. On a rough morning, skip National Public Radio for a dose of Nirvana or My Bloody Valentine, and leave the house bouncing off the walls and ready to deal with anything.

This pursuit to play songs beyond the Top 40 gives Tallahasseeans a rare opportunity to hear songs they would otherwise miss. Where else will one hear, right after Social Distortion, the Peanuts theme song, with Schroeder cranking down on the piano, or hear a Ukrainian band singing Ukrainians-only-know-what, but jamming all the same? Where else will one sample the gamut of local bands, on the Banana Eskimo Show every Monday night and in regular rotation? Where else can one enjoy the radio rants of newsman/philosopher/international sex symbol Lee Harvey?

Even the premiums offered in this pledge drive are unconventional. They have the regular t-shirts, CD's, and various free food coupons, but for hefty donations, the premiums get really wild. If you shell out $100, you can take over the radio station for two hours. Your voice, your music. Few other radio stations would offer such an opportunity. Or, if you and your friends can save, steal or swindle $300, V-89 will invade your apartment or residence hall with a local band and broadcast a party live from your living room. One listener even called up and donated $100 for the privilege of having lunch with the aforementioned gadfly Lee Harvey.

Maybe they can offer such crazy premiums because few students can afford them. But the DJ's wild antics, and the slumber party atmosphere up at the station during the pledge drive are a bittersweet warning of what the local radio scene would be like with the Voice. I remember the days before V-89 all too well, so I'm heading to the pawn shop. My television set should fetch at least $100. I can always catch the Simpsons when they come out in the Sunday comics, but I just gotta have my V-89.

V-89's pledge drive continues through Sunday. Call up with a dollar amount in mind and they just might let you name your own premium. To cough up cash for the cause, call 644-3871.

Play looks at dark side of upward mobility

BY CHRIS PARKER

STAFF WRITER

The alienation of friends going in different directions, the ambivalence of others toward goals of self-development, and the materialistic competition bred by television in these economic hard times are the subjects tackled in Pill Hill, an ensemble piece about one-time mill employees trying to rise above the blue collar work-a-day life, showing tonight at Florida A&M University's Charles Winterwood Theatre.

The play covers the rift that develops among six friends over time as each tries to make the jump to the middle class, and get that house on Pill Hill—the rich, successful northern part of Chicago. In their way are the prejudices of society, and those of their own friends who feel threatened by others' attempts to break out.

When Al (Walter Powell, Jr.) decides to quit his job and go to college like Ed (Leon Rogers) in the play's first scene, he is met with derision by the others, who feel he'll never make it, a reflection of their own fears. When he does succeed, and as each of the group of friends finally quits the mill to pursue other opportunities, the wedge becomes creeping materialism, with each using their car as a symbol of status—their badge of success. Privately, they admit to never feeling satisfied, never quite successful enough, but defend their lack of compassion for each other with the empty rhetoric of capitalism.

"I worked hard. I quit the mill, when I didn't know where my next paycheck was coming from. I took a chance," says Al, in one of a number of the play's powerful monologues. "I don't owe anyone anything."

The selfish striving breeds animosity as each character measures their self-worth by their money, while affable Joe (Earl Palmer) never makes the break from the mill, and ends up left behind, with none of his friends willing to help him and his future dim.

The play's rhetoric is an indictment of the '80s' "I've got mine" attitude, hitting hard on how pride and the struggle for success leads to disdain and division.

Their comeuppance is foreshadowed in the story of Charlie (Tom Cunningham), a veteran of the plant, who left the cotton fields of Alabama to get that "steel mill money." When he returns home in his slick black Cadillac, he is stopped by a pair of cracker cops who make him lick their headlights while his wife and children watch.

The multiplicity and complexity of the issues raised is handled well in the play, which offers a sort of ironic, black reverse of The Big Chill. The price is paid in length, as there are a number of slow moments in the play. The scenes, organized into a passage of time/reunion format, can be tedious at times, and occasionally telegraphed.

Nonetheless, there is a strong pull in the script. It talks to the low feelings of self-worth, and the fear of trying to make it without so much as a foot in the door. The dialogue is extremely accurate in portraying the subtle differences between each character in how they approach success. The problem here is that the emotional pitch remains subdued much of the play, never exploding into conflict except during each act's one or two major speeches.

Leon Rogers is excellent as Ed, the lawyer and the brightest of the bunch, who must pay the price if he is to become a partner in his prestigious, previously all-white law firm. Tom Cunningham is also very good, playing Charlie, the eldest, whose loyalty to the mill goes unrewarded. The rest of the cast is filled out by Ralph Gantt, Jr. as Scott, for whom the promise of professional athletics never panned out, and Cordell Thorn as Tony, the encyclopedia salesman—selling the dream of knowledge to other blacks as a placebo for action and change.

Pill Hill* shows at FAMU's Charles Winterwood Theatre tonight through Saturday at 8 p.m. each night, and Sunday afternoon at 2. For ticket information call 561-2425.

Not all is bleak in video-ville this week

BY G. ADOLPH MOORES
STAFF WRITER

In case anyone actually reads this garbage, you've probably noticed that the last few Video Vaults have been somewhat scathing and merciless. This is not in fact due to the rumor that my brain has been rotting from cancer or that I have joined a neo-leftist, radical, anti-Hollywood support group. It is simply the fact that there is a slew of bad video being released lately. Imagine my dismay having to sit here hour after hour anticipating the next piece of crap with the same excitement I feel when the TV announcer says "on an all new Matlock." Bear with me, March looks promising.

Another You (1991)—It always breaks my cold, little heart to see former favorites of mine take that long, ugly road to self-parody and career embarrassment. Orson Welles's appearance with Pia Zadora in Butterfly was one of those hellacious incidents. Bob Dylan on the Letterman 10th Anniversary Show wheezing out Like A Rolling Stone like some retired rabbi with asthma was another. Now I have to watch an obviously dying Richard Pryor listlessly yell profanity in this pathetic film. Not that Pryor's career had not already been flushed down the bowl, but being so immobile and lifeless it is nearly a crime to watch him flounder so near death. Longtime associate Gene Wilder does his best What About Bob? Bill Murray imitation to help pick up the obvious slack, without humorous results. It's simply too sad to view the once great standup in his present state. Should never have been made.

The Rocketeer (1991)—Energetic adventure film which succeeds up to its overblown finale is the same type of nostalgic moviemaking we ate up in Raiders Of The Lost Ark and Romancing The Stone. It most resembles a trip back to the old Saturday matinee serials of the '40s and '50s with a bevy of modern day effects to make the surface shine. Story deals with a Nazi plot (my favorite kind) to steal designs for a one-man rocket pack that Howard Hughes has produced. The adventure begins here with everyone from the mafia to a suave Errol Flynn-like movie star in pursuit. Fine cast includes Bill Campbell, Jennifer Connelly, Alan Arkin, Paul Sorvino, Terry O'Quinn, Jon Polito and Timothy Dalton. Good fun.

Rover Dangerfield (1991)—Animated Disney flick about a good-timing dog from Vegas (modeled after Rodney) who is transported to the country where he must adapt to farm life. Typical fish-out-of-water story has a few inspired gags, plenty of Dangerfield one-liners and adequate animation but overall there's not really much here. The musical bits are mundane (Dangerfield's voice is bad) and the story is beyond trite. Kids should enjoy it but it doesn't transcend the adult barrier as The Little Mermaid and Beauty And The Beast have.

Straight Out Of Brooklyn (1991)—Tough and gripping drama about project life in Brooklyn's Red Hook district. An unemployed youth must come home every night to his drunk and raving father, abused mother and frightened sister. They have little money to eat and no means by which to escape their trap of urban squalor. The teen plans a last chance robbery to get his family and girlfriend out of their doomed existence. Excellent performances by an unknown cast and the low-key direction by 19-year-old newcomer Matty Rich give the film its stark realism. A very promising directorial debut which puts other such urban dramas to shame. Not to be missed.

Wild Hearts Can't Be Broken (1991)—Odd subject matter

Richard Pryor (above, in better days) is a mere shadow of his formerly feisty self in Another You.

for a Disney release about a young girl (Gabrielle Anwar) who runs away from home to high dive horses into a pool of water. Despite the odd subject this is a standard tale of the irrepressible human spirit, family relationships and the elan of youth (topics very familiar to Disney fans) which works in a most charming fashion. The film calls up themes from The Journey Of Natty Gann but borrows only the most fundamental elements. Cliff Robertson and Michael Schoeffling co-star. Anwar is terrific. It's wonderful to watch a young actor with real talent. A truly heartwarming tale which rarely concedes to the hokum or overly sentimental possibilities of other such fare.

La Femme Nikita is la formidable spy flick

ANDREW ARVESEN
STAFF WRITER

If you've ever wondered what James Bond would be like in drag, then you ought to see La Femme Nikita tonight in Moore Auditorium. This is a movie for all those Thelma and Louise fans who still love violent action movies, but want women in the lead roles and don't want to have to gaze at Bruce Willis's smugly mug in every new shoot-'em-up.

The plot, such as it is, goes like this: Nikita (Anne Parillaud) is a gorgeous young punk/petty thief.

She and her crew are making a boneheaded attempt at robbing a drug store. Soon the place is crawling with gendarmes. Nikita blows one of the cops away and is arrested. She is sentenced to life in prison. Then "Bob" appears.

Bob is sort of like the Army recruiter from your high school, except that he works in prisons. He tells Nikita she's just the kind of person the government needs: a beautiful, desperate sociopath. Her lack of moral qualms and her steady hand with a gun, and of course her fantastic legs, would be just perfect for a secret government assassin. So he gives her a choice. She can go to prison forever and be bored, or she can enter his job training program and get her violent jollies with the government's blessing.

Obviously, she opts to keep shootin'. Bob shows her the ropes and garotes of the superspy trade. Amande (Jeanne Moreau) shows Nikita how to be a real Mata Hari-style femme fatale. Soon our heroine graduates to being a crackerjack servant of "The Agency." She gets a couple of new names, moves to the country, and leads a quiet life between brutal, bizarre political killings.

By the by, Nikita takes up with Marco, a dashing young grocery store bagboy. She falls deeply in love and feels torn between her exciting life as a spy and her desire to settle down to a quasi-straight life with Marco. At this point Bob reappears and the triangle becomes explicit. What will she choose?

Yeah, sure, this story is ridiculous claptrap. But so was From Russia With Love. The important thing is that director Luc Besson keeps the action (read, violence) coming fast and slick. The dark humor of the piece also adds some spice. However, the movie's real secret weapon is Parillaud, who makes Nikita an incredibly compelling, if somewhat two-dimensional, figure. She won the French Cesar award for Best Actress and this flick was top-grossing foreign movie of 1990. So if want to see a pseudo-feminist shootout, be at Moore Auditorium tonight.

La Femme Nikita shows tonight at Moore Auditorium at 7:30 and 9:45. It's FREE for FSU students and $2 for the "others".

Seminoles knock the hoot out of the Owls

BY DAVID BOEHM
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The Florida State University women's basketball team kept its post season hopes alive with a 96-64 victory over the Florida Atlantic Owls at the Civic Center Wednesday night.

FSU, which improved its record to 16-10, went to a full court press early in the first half to shake up the Owls who matched up well statistically with the Lady Seminoles.

"We wanted to establish the tempo early. We felt like if we played aggressive defense we could take them out of the game early," Seminole coach Marynell Meadors said.

FSU forward Tia Paschal struggled early scoring only six points in the first half on 3 of 10 shooting. Center Chantelle Dishman established herself early in the paint scoring 12 while guard Danielle Ryan added six.

The Owls hung on behind the play of forward Tiffani Jones who lit up the Noles for 11 first half points while center Steffani Collins added 10.

"In the first half our defense was sitting back on our heels letting them run their offense. In the second half we came out and made them play our game," Meadors said.

In the second half FSU took control behind the play of Ryan and slammed the door on the Owls. Paschal finished with 20 and Dishman and Ryan Chipped in with 18 each.

Even Innerarity can't save FAMU from UGA

BY TY SIMPSON
STAFF WRITER

Polly Innerarity and the Rattlerettes completed their home schedule in the opposite way it began, losing to the University of Georgia 93-66 Wednesday night.

The Lady Bulldogs stormed into Gaither Athletic Center jumping out to a 17-6 lead and never looked back.

What started as a promising season, turned into a rebuilding year half way through for coach Claudette Farmer and her Rattlerettes due to injuries and the resignation of 'America's Queen of Steal' Shelly Boston.

Innerarity bid a farewell to FAMU, ending what has been a record setting career.

"Florida A&M has been great to me," Innerarity said. "I've enjoyed the people I play with; the fans, the media, have all been great."

Wednesday night's game marked the 113th of Innerarity's four-year stint with the Rattlerettes, tying her with Gail Myrick for most games played in a career.

Her 24 points and three rebounds move her closer to the career records in both categories with at least two games remaining on the schedule depending on how long the Rattlerettes survive in tournament play.

Innerarity is just 45 points shy of Rosa Hudgins' (1,459) all-time career mark. She is also about to catch Esther Myrick for the all-time rebound title, needing only eleven rebounds to catch her.

Shooting to smear Tar Heels

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

It was exactly 74 days ago, up North in Chapel Hill. On Dec. 15, Florida State announced to North Carolina and rest of the Atlantic Coast Conference that it wasn't going to be pushed around in the Seminoles' first year in the league. In its very first ACC test, FSU (18-8, 10-5 ACC) upset the Tar Heels by 12 points.

Now, in their final regular-season game, the 22nd-ranked Seminoles are shooting for a second place finish in the league and a season-sweep over coach Dean Smith's 10th-ranked Tar Heels (18-5, 8-4) tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Civic Center. A win could also give FSU a higher seed in the post-season NCAA Tournament.

FSU head coach Pat Kennedy wasn't available for comment Wednesday but assistant coach Tom Carlson said the team is approaching the game as a "must win" situation.

"It's a must win for us to get back on track," Carlson said. "If we win, we get a better seed and we possibly win second place . . . which is awesome."

Carlson said he still points to the early upset over UNC, even without forward Douglas Edwards (17 points per game) as the turning point in Florida State's season. Edwards missed the contest in Chapel Hill because of a suspension stemming from his role in the brawl with the Florida A&M Rattlers Dec. 7.

"Obviously, when we beat North Carolina it was a great start for us into the league," Carlson said. "It gave everybody a lot of confidence to go ahead through the rest of the games. So much of any athletic event is emotion and playing hard . . . and believing."

The Seminole guards combined for just 23 points in a losing effort against DePaul Sunday. Charlie Ward, who will again start point guard, said the three-day break between games has done the team a world of good.

"These couple of days off helped a lot," said Ward, who's second in the ACC in steals. "Most of the time the (shooting) problem is in the legs."

Ward, Sam Cassell and Bob Sura will start as guards but Carlson said to expect Chuck Graham to see plenty of court time as well.

"The amount of minutes played won't be determined by who starts. It'll be determined by who's playing well in the game," Carlson said.

In addition to Rodney Dobard and Edwards, look for center Andre Reid to get some minutes patrolling the frontcourt.

"We need Andre to come through in this game because he'll have to guard Eric Montross and Kevin Salvadori and all their big guys."

UNC will start Hubert Davis (20.2 ppg) and Derrick Phelps as guards. Montross (7-0) will be the center. Brian Reese and George Lynch are the starting forwards.

Carlson said the team and coaches are counting on an enthusiastic crowd to come out for the last home game of the season.

"If you score two or three baskets in a row and you're down by eight, things get rockin' and rollin' and you hear all those positive vibes kind of pushing for you," Carlson said. "It really helps."

Tickets still remain for tonight's game. They can be purchased at the Moore Center at 8:30 a.m. Call 644-1830 for more information. The game will also be broadcast on ESPN.

Big people at the Moon

BY SCOTT DANAHY
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Brawn and beefcake are the usual focus of attention at most bodybuilding contests and tonight's Mr. and Miss Florida State bodybuilding show is no different.

But tonight's 7 p.m. show at the Moon is different than most flex-the-pecs spectacles for the competitors in that this show isn't about money—for the winners anyway.

The competition, which is presented by the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity, awards no prize money to the winners. The focus of the event is to raise money for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

ZBT vice-president Jeffery Koch said he is very optimistic about the potential of the fund raiser.

"So far we've raised about 1,600 dollars, and we hope to raise between 2,000 and 2,500 dollars total," Koch said. It was Koch who came up with the idea for the bodybuilding show a couple of years ago.

"I've had the idea for about two years, but it was the response to the opening of the Leach Center which made me think that the idea could work," Koch said.

The Mr. and Miss FSU Bodybuilding Show will feature eight men and seven women competing for trophies in a format which will emphasize body symmetry and tone rather than bulk. The competition, which was open to any Florida State University student, is one of the few bodybuilding competitions that doesn't have different weight classes.

"I don't think (no weight divisions) will make that much of a difference," said Daniel R. Ore, who is competing in the show. "If they judge by the format, then it shouldn't be too critical."

Kevin Wright, who is also competing in the event said not having weight classes could actually work in his favor.

"I think that it'll work in my advantage, at 5'8" I've got good size for my height. Guys who are heavier will be taller," said Wright.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your hard work and artistic talent will win public recognition. However, a Pisces tendency toward extravagance will have to be controlled. Keep a tight rein on your purse strings between now and late April! Building a nice nest egg will lead to new peace of mind. September brings a promising business partnership. You will feel more creative than ever by late fall. Stick close to home and hearth in December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Joanne Woodward and Elizabeth Taylor, actor Howard Hesseman, consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This is not a good day to stick your neck out. Mark time until work conditions improve. Your innovative ideas will get better reception if you wait until March gets under way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A happy meeting of the minds makes it easier for you to obtain higher-ups' approval now. Be objective, instead of suspicious, about a co-worker's suggestions to improve productivity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spend some time helping a family member sort out a personal problem. A hobby could turn into a real money-maker. Join a community group if time and energy permit. New friendships blossom.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A promotion or raise may be way overdue. Work harder to improve your personal relationships at work. Joining forces with an associate could prove highly beneficial.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Approach any financial problems with an open mind. Eliminating certain frills will help you meet your obligations to your family. A new romantic interest appears on the scene.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strong desires could push you to dangerous limits today. Putting your reputation or money at risk. Be careful not to burn your bridges. Work is your safety net get caught up in it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may voice strong objections to your plans today. It is important you remain polite and patient. Good vibes are conspicuously absent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Talks and travel lead to success. A forthright approach to romance will prove highly rewarding. Do not be afraid to discuss your worries. Partner may also have something to confide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Domestic and financial changes are easy to implement today. Valuable allies remain in your corner. Show your gratitude. Interesting new information comes to light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those who share your interests are particularly important to your financial future. Now is the time to discuss a work-family conflict. Speak your mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It takes two to make a happy marriage. A secret relationship could be a time bomb. The clock is ticking. Let family members know how much they mean to you. Be affectionate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your personal magnetism helps you win the trust and admiration of influential people now. Special arrangements are made by those who share your long-term goals.

Baseball gives reason for summer hibernation

BY JACK CLIFFORD
STAFF WRITER

Say hey kids, baseball is back and you know what that means. That's right, the NCAA college basketball tournament will begin soon.

Pardon the feigned interest in America's favorite pastime, but is anyone else out there ready to admit that the game of baseball is a snoozer?

So many people go ga-ga over the sport and I've tried to become an enthusiast through the years. But other than an occasional Atlanta game or the playoffs, it would be difficult to remember a full nine-inning game I actually endured. (Until last season, watching Atlanta was always just for laughs.)

Oh, sure the game has its flashes of excitement, but what's happening the majority of the time? Slow rollers, drag bunts, lazy fly balls, i.e. nada. The lack of action can make a person want to commit a suicide squeeze.

Compare that to an almost continuous visual feast of action on a basketball court or nerve-splattering hits on the football field and baseball pales. What's the most charged-up moment on the diamond? When someone cracks a homerun and then jogs around the basepaths. Better keep the amphetamines handy.

Spring training began last weekend for most ballclubs and opening day—Opening Day for you purists—is about six weeks away. From now until then expect the coverage to be, as always, electric.

Cruise through any sports section and you'll come to a "Baseball Round-up" section. Read a little and become spellbound. Learn that: New York Mets' pitcher Sid Fernandez lost 46 pounds during the offseason; Cincinnati catcher Joe Oliver, using roller blades to escape, barely got away with his life after being attacked by a snake near his condo; the bat used by Gene Larkin to drive home the winning run for Minnesota in Game 7 of the 1991 World Series is now hanging above his fireplace.

C'mon, reading Paul Tsongas speeches spelled out phonetically is more entertaining than this stuff.

Of course, if you're not learning about Darryl Strawberry's hangnail, you have to suffer through articles about players' salaries. And pretend that the obscene amounts of money these guys are being paid doesn't make you want to hurl.

The newest New York Met, outfielder Bobby Bonilla, will snag almost Six! Million! Dollars! this year. Pittsburgh pitcher Doug Drabek "settled" on $4.5 million after asking for five. (Geez, he might have to start eating Ramen noodles to make up the difference.) Detroit's El Lardo Cecil Fielder also has $4.5 million due to him in 1992.

Okay, so these three are big stars and the point can be made that their hidden benefits to the team—more fans in the stands, higher concession income, more merchandise sold—is worth such big salaries. (Not that one should actually agree with such a ridiculous argument.)

But what about scrubs such as San Fran's Bill Swift ($2.3 million), Kansas City's Jeff Montgomery ($2.4 million), Toronto's Duane Ward ($2.4 million), Seattle's Jay Buhner ($1.5 million), the Yankees' Greg Cadaret ($1.2 million)? Let me know when you recognize any of these names.

For some, baseball season has this numbing effect on them and they become zombies spewing forth obscure and inane stats—"Well, you know, when pitching in an east-to-west direction, he had a 3.24 ERA against right-handed batters that have last names beginning with the letter Q." Uh huh, and exactly how long ago was your last lucid thought?

Fans try to paint baseball as the perfect sport. That because of its structure—no time limit, at least 51 outs needed to complete a game, etc.—a game of infinite length is always a possibility.

Just imagine, an endless number of pick-off attempts. Wow.

For Wright, who has trained in bodybuilding for eleven years, and has won several competitions, there is a special motivation to compete.

"My grandfather, Stanley Stanczyk was an Olympic gold medalist in 1948, competing in the power lift and the clean jerk," said Wright, who added that the competition was also an incentive to get back into shape.

Shannon Schmidt, who is competing in the women's division, and who won the Southwest Florida competition in 1990, got her start in bodybuilding from her mother.

"I've been doing this for about four years and my mom, who competes, got me into it. She really helps me out a lot."

For some of the competitors who have never had experience in formal bodybuilding competitions, the motivation is merely to prove that they can do it.

"A lot of my friends suggested that I do it, and I've always been curious about the sport," said Ore.

Ore said that despite the fact that this is his first competition, he is optimistic about his chances of winning.

"As I've been preparing for the competition I've learned more about bodybuilding. I've learned that there's more to it than just working out, for me the hardest part was the strict diet," said Ore.

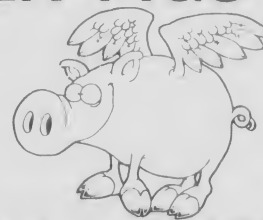

"I feel comfortable and sure of the way that I look, and I feel that I've worked hard. I believe that I'll do good."

Tickets for the show are $5 at the door and $4 in advance.

Disabled students find facilities still lacking at FSU

BY JOEL RISBERG

STAFF WRITER

Getting up a flight of stairs in a wheelchair is no easy task to say the least, and Jim Andriole is angry he and other disabled people have to face that obstacle on the Florida State University campus.

"If you're disabled, you should be able to get into buildings," Andriole said Wednesday. "I want it corrected."

The quadriplegic said he has come across this problem several times in the past, but when he tried to attend a Center for Participant Education class at FSU two weeks ago and could not get into the room where the class was being held, he decided to take action.

"It was totally inaccessible," Andriole said. "This is 1992, but you would think that we were living 20 years ago."

Andriole brought his complaints to the attention of several FSU administrators Monday, but was told the university is doing all it can.

The Federal Rehabilitation Act mandates that all federally-funded agencies provide unrestricted access to all buildings and services. But even though this law was enacted in 1973, many public agencies, including FSU, are still not fully compliant with the law.

In addition, the "public accommodation" portion of a new federal law, the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, took effect Jan. 26. It requires disabled access to all facilities frequented by the public, including retail stores, offices, restaurants, theaters, hotels and other places of business.

"These people are in gross violation of the law, but nobody gives a damn," said Andriole, who is not an FSU student but comes to campus often for cultural events.

Andriole said he was shocked officials admitted many buildings also aren't up to fire code regulations.

"I couldn't believe it. They know they're in violation and they're not doing anything about it," he said. "Does the state of Florida think they're above the law?"

FSU student Vickie Ryder, co-chair of the Association of Disabled Student Advocates, agreed FSU is not doing nearly enough to deal with

BOR rape workshop to be held

BY GLEN TORBERT

STAFF WRITER

Campus rape is usually not a subject university administrators want to talk about, but they do admit improvement needs to be made in the way they deal with sexual assault reports.

Officials from the state's nine universities will take a step toward that goal today as they attend a sexual assault awareness workshop sponsored by the Board of Regents.

During the six-hour workshop at Florida A&M University, administrators will hear from national experts and their own colleagues on the best way to react to a report of sexual assault.

"Our goals are to get the universities to solve rape cases appropriately, quickly and consistently," BOR spokesperson Pat Riordan said Thursday.

The board saw the need to hold such a workshop after administrators at the University of South Florida poorly handled rape allegations against a star basketball player last year, according to Regina Sofer, director of the BOR's equal opportunity programs.

In the USF case, a female student who reported being raped by Marvin Taylor filed a non-criminal complaint with USF administrators. But when faced with pressure from the basketball team and members' girlfriends,

Migrants hope legislation will relieve slave-like conditions

BY JOEL ARNOLD

"Farmworkers feel like slaves."

The sentiment expressed by this sign, held up by one of approximately 30 farmworker advocates present at a press conference Thursday, reflects the advocates' determination to see three farmworker-related bills finally succeed in the state Legislature this year.

Representatives of Florida Impact, a 12-year-old lobbying group of religious organizations, and the recently formed Farmworker Organizations Action Group (FOAG) announced their joint lobbying efforts to improve the lot of the state's estimated 350,000 farmworkers.

"We are not asking for more rights than other workers in Florida," said Tirso Moreno, a representative of the Farmworker Association of Central Florida, one of three farmworker organizations in the FOAG coalition. "We're asking for equal rights."

Specifically, the bills would establish a state minimum wage, provide social service officials with access to labor camps, and require that farmworkers be notified of pesticide use in the workplace.

Currently, Florida farmworkers are exempt from the state's "Right-to-Know" law, which requires employers to notify their employees of toxic substances in the workplace. But Florida Impact and FOAG said they will lobby in support of an amendment to the Workers' Compensation Reform Bill sponsored by Rep. Jim Hargret (D-Tampa) that would repeal the exemption.

Maria Felix, a representative of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee, said the amendment is needed because growers are not adequately educating the farmworkers of the dangers they face when they are in the fields.

"Our kids are dying of cancer and leukemia," Felix said. "The ladies in between zero months and three months (pregnancy) can get child defects ... Sometimes we're picking the fruit and our eyes can't focus to work."

Migrant workers in Quincy during last year's first tomato-picking season.

"The pesticides attack the nervous system and go to the liver," she added. "The phosphates, they never go out for life ...

We're human beings. We have the right to know where they spray so we can be safe from (the chemicals)."

Despite the health threats, the farmworkers, who come primarily from countries in Central America and the Caribbean, still work—and not for much. The average yearly income, in fact, is between $5,500 to $6,000 according to Bill Gutierrez, a member of Gov. Lawton Chiles' Hispanic Affairs Commission.

To help secure a better income for the farmworkers, FOAG and Florida Impact will press for passage of Sen. Jack Gordon's (D-Miami) proposed amendment to the Florida Constitution which would establish a state minimum wage in Florida, one of eight states in the country without its own.

The wage would ensure that a family of four receives an income at least one cent above the poverty level. If approved by the Legislature, the Constitutional amendment would be placed on a referendum this November.

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

GENEVA—Exiled Haitian president Jean-Bertrand Aristide told the U.N. Commission on Human Rights Thursday that the current military government in his country is worse than the old Duvalier regime.

Aristide told the Commission's 1992 annual session that "all the world must say no" to the military officers who assumed power.

"The current military government has provided worse than the Duvalier dictatorship," he said, referring to the earlier "Papa Doc" Duvalier and then his son "Baby Doc."

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia—German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel signed a controversial treaty Thursday that paves the way for future cooperation and renounces any territorial claims arising from World War II.

A crowd of some 2,000 people shouting, "Out with traitors" and "Shame on the castle" gathered in front of Prague Castle as Kohl arrived for the signing of the long-delayed treaty during a two-day visit.

SEOUL, South Korea—North Korea rejected Thursday a South Korean move to allow reciprocal inspections of the two Koreas' nuclear facilities as part of a joint nuclear commission designed to denuclearize the Korean peninsula.

North Korean officials said while it will accept an International Atomic Energy Agency inspection of its nuclear plants at the end of June, it will not grant independent reciprocal inspection rights as proposed by South Korea.

LONDON—The oil spills, well fires and massive bombing of the Gulf War severely damaged the land, sea and atmosphere of the region and created long-term health hazards, the environmental group Greenpeace said Thursday.

In a 41-page survey of the war's environmental legacy, the Amsterdam-based organization said vegetation, animal life and air quality suffered "unprecedented catastrophic environmental damage" from the war that will take years to repair.

UNITED NATIONS—Stung by criticism of its opposition to limiting carbon dioxide emissions, the United States offered Thursday to pay for environmental research studies in the developing countries and give them the technology to combat global warming.

The move could be a victory for Third World nations that have complained that they lack resources to implement environmental programs, but diplomats said the amount of money proposed—an initial infusion of $50 million—may not be enough.

nation

NEW YORK—Jailed junk-bond king Michael E. Milken will contribute a total of $900 million of a $1.3 billion package aimed at settling a flurry of lawsuits against Milken and Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., Drexel's lawyers said Thursday.

Milken, currently serving a 10-year prison term for securities fraud and other felonies, had previously agreed to pay $400 million into a restitution fund as a result of a settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and will now kick in another $500 million.

WASHINGTON—Efforts to reduce health care costs or to cut drug abuse by youth will fail unless the government takes action to discourage cigarette smoking, a coalition of health groups said Thursday.

In a joint letter to President Bush, the American Heart Association, the American Lung Association and the American Cancer Society called for regulation of products containing nicotine, tighter control on cigarette advertising and efforts to counter industry claims about relative safety of low tar and low nicotine cigarettes.

NEW ORLEANS—Republican Patrick Buchanan's challenge to President Bush for the party's presidential nomination has gained the political support of Louisiana GOP Chairman William Nungesser.

Buchanan, during a campaign swing through the New Orleans area Wednesday, said Nungesser had become the first, but probably not the last, state Republican chairman to openly endorse his candidacy.

WASHINGTON—The House Thursday narrowly approved a $93.5 billion Democratic tax "barnstorm" plan designed to permanently raise taxes on the wealthy to pay for temporary middle class tax cuts.

President Bush has warned he will veto the bill if it reaches his desk in its present form. The House vote was 221-209.

The tax cuts are contained in a bill along with Democratic versions of some of the proposals Bush asked Congress to pass by March 20 to inject fresh blood into the lifeless economy.

state

TALLAHASSEE—A controversial bill that would change the way Florida's presidential electors are selected stalled in the Senate for a second time Thursday as lawmakers argued over its impact on elections and political campaigns.

The Senate, which tabled the issue Tuesday, on Thursday postponed a vote on House Bill 1975 until next Tuesday.

Florida electors are now chosen based on the presidential candidate that wins the most general election votes statewide.

MIAMI—President Bush, trying to boost his support in Miami's Cuban-American community, pledged Thursday to seek an end to Fidel Castro's regime in Cuba and said there would be no softening of relations until the dictator is gone.

Bush, in an opinion column he wrote for The Miami Herald, said there have been no attempts to accommodate the Cuban government as feared by some exiles in the United States.

Dirty rat

Student Body President Brian Philpot and his Seminole Party, which dominates the student senate, must think students at Florida State University are incredibly stupid.

Why else would he be so bold as to appoint his own fraternity brother as elections supervisor of this year's upcoming presidential elections? And why else would the senate be so bold as to approve the appointment?

Just one year ago, this Sig Ep bro of his, Tren Hopkins, was plastering Seminole Party posters around campus and helping out in Philpot's campaign. Now, the loyal frat boy holds a position that, corrupt or not, carries a lot of weight in student government elections and requires him to somehow be impartial.

Maybe students are apathetic when it comes to campus politics, but they're not as blindly ignorant as Philpot and the Seminole Party might have people believe. They can at least smell a dirty rat when it stinks as bad as this one.

And this one really reeks.

Surely Philpot could have found an elections supervisor without connections to his own party. But then, why break up the clan?

Last year's elections supervisor, who took a lot of heat for allowing the Seminole Party to replace candidates after filing deadline and was accused many times of partiality, is interestingly enough now the Seminole Party chair.

Hmmmmmm

No wonder students outside the greek system have such a hard time getting turned on to student government elections. Campus politics are usually so corrupt and blatantly controlled by the party in power, who can blame the majority of students for not feeling they have an impact on the outcome of elections?

What will they see next? Glass ballot boxes?

Fight the power

The FSU administration is up to its old bag of dirty tricks once again.

For the second time this school year, the rank and file at FSU are looking to make students and faculty shell out more money to park on campus. The reason: a big, wasteful block of cement in the middle of campus for housing cars.

The schemers behind this extravagant plan say they may implement a hike in the cost of parking permits by the end of this year to pay for building an $8 million garage. But they may also find themselves getting a little more than they bargained for—that is, if students raise any kind of an uproar.

The university's paper pushers have been forcing fee hikes down students' throats for as long as we can remember, and one way they do that is by keeping any such proposals hush-hush until the last minute, when any sort of debate on the matter is futile.

But this time, students may actually be able to stop the steamroller before it builds momentum. One reason is that some student members on the Parking Services Advisory Committee aren't liking what they're seeing.

Just last week an invitation-only brainstorming session was held, in which at least one member of the committee was left out. Among the ideas discussed was an increase in parking permits to pay for the garage's construction, meaning students and faculty would have to pay for the monstrosity before they could actually use it.

We hope student members on the committee continue to inform the press and school about plans being considered. It might just give students a fair shot at influencing a decision that could burn another hole through their pockets.

And that would be a nice change.

'Big and stupid is no way to go'

BY D.K. ROBERTS

SPECIAL TO THE FLAMBEAU

There's this scurrilous feminist joke that asks "What is a man?" Answer: "A man is a life support system for a-er-..." (word that cannot be used in a family newspaper). Florida legislators ask "what is a university?" Answer: A university is a life support system for a football program.

Kidding? I wish I were kidding. Do you think that if big-time TV sports were affected that the ruinous budget cuts being visited on Florida's universities would happen? Of course not. Sports gets most of its money from the bubbas out there who will pay giant booster dues but would never give 10 bucks to help a library. The Legislature can chop away at physics and English and art history, and who's going to howl about it? They figure bubbas vote but eggheads don't.

The thing is that they figure wrong. Slashing the budgets of Florida universities to the bone seems politically expedient—along with destroying social services for the poor and for children (who don't vote either)—because it helps them evade the imperative to consider some kind of strategy for raising revenues through services fees, increased corporate taxes or even (shock! horror!) a state income tax.

But they haven't counted on the growing numbers of pissed-off parents having to pay six years of tuition, rent and beer money for Tiffany and Tad who can't graduate from FSU or Florida in the once-normal time. And they haven't counted on the rage of the middle classes who discover that Tara and Tyler can't even get into FSU or Florida because of enrollment caps on universities whose faculties can't deal with the student population they've got. And they haven't counted on the businesses which will refuse to come to Florida because of the increasing illiteracy rate and the paucity of an educated workforce.

Florida's already got third-world poverty cheek-by-jowl with paradisaal beaches. And Florida's got an infant mortality rate that would raise eyebrows in almost all the struggling nations of Latin America. I guess an impoverished educational system is just the last jewel in our crown of thorns.

I think Florida voters are smarter than we look. I think we are bubbas to the extent that sure, we like our football programs to be prominent. But we also understand that a state with the fourth largest population in the nation needs an educational system that can serve its people, not minimally but well.

DAS CAPITAL

I think we understand that "cutting the fat" from universities is an absolute, though persistent, legislative lie. That's not fat they're cutting, it's muscle. It's flesh. It's bleeding. Our libraries are falling behind in their book ordering and their journal subscriptions. Knowledge isn't something that's preserved in stone for all time—it changes, it expands. Our faculty are teaching overloads, so busy grading papers that they have no time to read up on new developments or to write their own work, contributing to knowledge. Our graduate students are overworked and underpaid: They aren't getting an education so much as being slave labor for an oversubscribed system. Our undergraduates are stuffed into classes designed for half their number, rarely getting the kind of individual attention that makes for a first-rate college experience.

The answer is not forcing faculty to teach extra classes. Nor is the answer denying faculty (like other state workers) the paltry raises promised them previously. Many will leave the state. Many already have.

The answer is to get money from those who have it. Florida is not a poor state. It can afford a progressive state income tax. It can afford to place an additional tax burden on the rich. Florida can no longer afford to be a vacation or retirement haven with no tax base. It can no longer afford to shortchange its students or its teachers. As Florida continues to grow, it must develop a decent program to educate its people properly. Big and stupid is no way to go into the 21st century.

Kerrey challenges Clinton to debate on Vietnam, gulf war

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
TALLAHASSEE—Democratic presidential candidate Bob Kerrey said Thursday he feels sorry for Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and would welcome a debate with him about Vietnam and the Persian Gulf War.

Kerrey, 48, made the statements after speaking to 160 fourth- and fifth-grade students at Kate Sullivan Elementary School.

Kerrey suggested a debate when asked how he felt about Clinton's persistent references to Kerrey's war record and voting record on the Persian Gulf War.

"I will continue to be sympathetic to Bill Clinton's problem, and to any other Americans who made the decision in conscience not to join the service in the 1960s," Kerrey said.

'I find myself not believing the statements that he (Clinton) made, 'Gee I really tried to get in, but I couldn't get in' ... I just don't find those statements believable.'

—Bob Kerrey

Clinton criticized Kerrey this week for voting against involvement in the Persian Gulf last year. He also criticized Kerrey's own anti-Vietnam sentiments when Kerrey returned from service after losing his lower right leg in a grenade explosion while leading a Navy SEAL team raid.

Kerrey, who was awarded the Medal of Honor for his actions in the raid, said he became opposed to U.S. involvement in Vietnam after he spent eight months in a Philadelphia hospital recovering from his wounds.

"I find myself not believing the statements that he (Clinton) made, 'Gee I really tried to get in, but I couldn't get in' ... I just don't find those statements believable," Kerrey said.

Clinton has denied he dodged the draft, but in the fall of 1969 he used an Army ROTC deferment to escape likely conscription. He later asked that his deferment be removed, but received a high draft lottery number that never was called.

Kerrey initially opposed the Persian Gulf War but once the U.S. was committed he supported an all-out effort to end hostilities with a minimum loss of life.

Defending his vote against involvement in the Persian Gulf, Kerrey spoke of Saddam Hussein's longevity.

"He's still in power," said Kerrey. "He's still terrorizing the Kurds in his own country, still a threat in the region."

"So, I'd love to have a debate with Bill Clinton on the Persian Gulf War," Kerrey said.

Earlier, the students posed several questions to Kerrey, several related to his experience as a Navy SEAL, and his thoughts on being awarded the Medal of Honor.

"The best heroes are the ones who don't get a medal at all," Kerrey told them. "The two biggest heroes of my life are my parents."

Asked what he would do as president, Kerrey spoke of his universal health care plan he calls "Health USA."

One small boy timidly asked if in that plan would raise taxes.

"There are some increased taxes in my health care proposal, although the total amount of payments people make would be less," he said.

City, FAMU to cooperate on Canal Street re-landscaping

BY THOMAS AUSTIN
STAFF WRITER

Florida A&M University's Canal Street, one of the main routes leading onto the campus, will get a face lift thanks to an agreement between the university and the city of Tallahassee.

Tallahassee City Commissioners appropriated $30,000 to fund the cooperative venture between the city and FAMU's School of Landscape and Design Wednesday to beautify the road.

A request by FAMU President Frederick Humphries for the city to improve the appearance of Canal Street has resulted in the agreement which will see the city supply plant materials and pay for necessary irrigation systems, said Rhett Miller, director of Public Works.

A FAMU student will be responsible for the landscaping design to be approved by public works officials. Once FAMU receives materials for the project, it will begin installation.

"This would give the students some hands-on design work and then see the fruits of their labor," Miller said.

The city will also be available to assist FAMU during various stages of the project.

John Davis, former city engineer, was the first to propose the idea of FAMU contributing design and labor for the project.

Lou Murray, FAMU's assistant vice president of administrative affairs, said getting students involved is an attractive solution to Canal Street's poor appearance.

"According to the department chair of landscape design, it would be an excellent set of experiences for his student body," he said.

FAMU's School of Landscape and Design has been involved in several community beautification projects, including Lafayette Park, the grounds of several Tallahassee high schools, and the interior of the Senate wing of the state Capitol.

"(We) generally do it as a community service, where the students need a real-world experience and we can do it for somebody who normally wouldn't be able to afford it," said Sam Hand Jr., coordinator of FAMU's Landscape Design Program.

"Or they make a contribution to the program, such as scholarship funds or things of that nature for the students," he added.

The first stages of the Canal Street project are expected to begin in the next few days with Hand, a registered landscape architect, overseeing the students' work.

Cornell Black studies scholar to speak at FAMU convocation today

BY CATHY AREU
FLAMBEAU WRITER

The director of Africana Studies and Research Center at Cornell University will stress the importance of studying African-American history in the nation's classrooms this morning at Florida A&M University.

According to James Turner, the keynote speaker for FAMU's Black History Month Convocation, multicultural studies are vital to understanding the truth about human history. He says the unfortunate exclusion of African-American achievements short-changes students who are only given a narrow and biased view of events in U.S. History.

"I want African-American History Month to be not just a symbolic gesture but to be taken seriously all year round," Turner said Thursday.

Turner said he will address the growing national debate over reconstruction of U.S. History to pay tribute to black leaders outside of Black History Month and diversify American education.

He also said he will draw upon key role models of achievement in the 19th and 20th centuries who emphasize academic excellence and social responsibility for African Americans. He added that the male and female role models offer a positive vision for the future, especially for young people.

Turner is a member of the American Sociological Association, the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History and the Executive Board of the African Heritage Studies Association.

According to Turner, Tallahassee was one of the key places in the South for the advancement of African Americans during the civil rights movement. He added that many local Black leaders were important to the nationwide movement.

"I feel privileged and honored to be part of this occasion in one of the nation's key institutions," Turner said.

Turner will speak today at 10:10 a.m. in Gaither Gymnasium.

Farmworker Self-Help, said farmworkers desperately need the new minimum wage to stay afloat.

"People say it's a recession," Romo said. "We've been living in a recession all our lives."

Moreno agreed the wage is necessary. "We deserve that," he said. "We might be turned down by the industry people ... but we want the citizens to decide."

The other significant piece of legislation the farmworker advocates said they will lobby for is the right for officials to inspect labor camps to ensure the workers have safe housing and are enjoying their legal rights.

The farmworker advocates said that without access, many of the farmworkers will continue to live in deplorable housing, be deprived of their pay and remain physically mistreated by crew leaders, some of whom have been convicted in the deaths of workers who complained about conditions.

"People would be killed and nobody would know about it," said Luckner Millen of the Farmworker Association. "We are human beings and we live in the United States. How can things like that happen here? We need to wake up. We need to open our eyes."

Robert Williams of Florida Rural Legal Services said the access law would help to end the system of indentured servitude, which still exists in certain areas. Williams said that in these cases the growers have a monopoly on housing and the markets the farmworkers shop from and can thereby charge the farmworkers exorbitant prices, miring them in debt.

"Even though it is not as common as it once was, (indentured servitude) still exists in Florida and it still exists in the Southeast," Williams said. "The workers are always in the hole, always in debt. (The grower) tells workers they can't leave until they pay their debt."

"We need to let the light of day into these situations and clean up these situations."

she withdrew her complaint.

Now administrative teams from all of the public universities, led by the vice presidents for student affairs, will discuss how to avoid such a fiasco.

Sofer will be one of the speakers at the workshop, and although Thursday afternoon she hadn't decided exactly what she was going to say, she did know what she wanted administrators to leave with.

"They are professionals and we are looking for them to comply to standards that would ensure student safety on campus," she said.

Florida State University officials say they're going to the workshop ready to learn but also to demonstrate how assault cases are handled on their campus.

For example, FSU has set up the Sexual Assault Task Force, which is chaired by Assistant Dean Jennifer Buchanan.

One function of the task force is to provide a way for rape victims who don't want to file charges with police to get emotional support and help.

"We do have an informal reporting network ... that gives us an anonymous report to pass around," Buchanan said Thursday.

One function of the task force is to streamline communication with victims so that they aren't referred to endless line of names and faces. For instance, when a victim goes to a health official or seeks legal assistance, both offices are part of the task force and can direct her to other forms of help she may need.

Buchanan said at the student's request, a task force member could send out letters to the victim's professors saying she had been through "a crisis" without being more specific.

FSU Vice President for Student Affairs Jon Dalton praised the task force and added that due process for the accused must not just be in place but practiced as well.

Dalton also said FSU may come away from the workshop with ideas for improvement.

"We can benefit from other ideas as well," Dalton said.

FAMU officials would not comment Thursday on their participation in the workshop.

FSU is ranked No. 3 and may debate its way to top

BY CATHY AREU
FLAMBEAU WRITER

Football and baseball aren't the only top-ranked programs Florida State University has to brag about.

The school's World Affairs Program recently beat out debate teams from such prestigious universities as Princeton, West Point and Georgetown to come in third place at Harvard University's National Model United Nations Conference.

"The team out-performed, out-debated and out-resolutioned the other teams," Fred Hernandez, director of FSU's World Affairs Program, said Wednesday.

The program's 24 members traveled a total of 55 hours on the road last week up to Boston, where they also captured an honorary delegation award.

The Harvard Conference was conducted like a United Nations meeting in which each of the 126 schools attending represented a different nation. FSU was Algeria.

"It's not the size or the power of the country you were representing that counted," said Catherine Oliver, one of FSU's debaters. "It was the way we worked with others and our knowledge and debating skills that mattered."

Hernandez added the team's involvement and performance at the convention improved FSU's overall academic status nationally, and managed to catapult the team into the No. 3 spot in the polls.

The program's future goals include increasing travel, gaining more members, maintaining its high ranking and beating its old nemesis, the University of Chicago, Hernandez said.

In the near future, the World Affairs Program will hold a high school conference for Florida and Georgia students and, for the first time, sponsor an all-college conference for schools around the nation.

State budget battle continues

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

TALLAHASSEE—A conference committee approved a compromise $30 billion fiscal 1992-1993 budget Thursday and within two hours Gov. Lawton Chiles said he would veto the measure, which he said had "no future."

The package combines House and Senate budget bills and does not include any new revenues or taxes. It does hold $527 million in cuts to existing programs and leaves $150 million in the state's rainy day reserve fund.

The budget divides up lottery revenues, giving 70 percent to public schools, 15 percent to universities and 15 percent to community colleges.

Education funding would be reduced from 1991 levels by $72 per public school student.

Stabbed by broken bottle

Police found a man bleeding from the chest after he was stabbed with a broken beer bottle by a woman in Frenchtown Wednesday morning, Tallahassee Police Department spokesperson Annette Garrett said Thursday.

Witnesses told officers the woman was jealous after she saw the 59-year-old victim talking to another woman and began arguing with him. The suspect grabbed a beer bottle from an outdoor trash can, broke it on the sidewalk and charged at the man. She stabbed him once in the chest and then fled the area on foot.

The victim was taken to Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center by ambulance where he was treated and released. The suspect has been identified and is still being sought.

Flim-flam

A fast-talking con man swindled employees at three Apalachee Parkway hotels in just 15 minutes Wednesday night, Garrett said.

At 8:30 p.m. the suspect went to the Marriot Hotel at 1018 Apalachee Parkway and connived a clerk out of a dollar. At about 8:45 a similar incident occurred at the Holiday Inn, 1301 Apalachee Parkway. This time, however, the suspect confused the clerk with a series of money exchanges and made off with $150.

Minutes later, the same scam was used at the Howard Johnson, 1355 Apalachee Parkway. This time $70 was taken.

The employees at all three hotels gave similar descriptions of the man. TPD is looking for a 25- to 30-year-old black man, 6 feet tall and 170 pounds. He has a dark complexion and a gold tooth. At the time of the incidents, he was wearing a dark coat and a NBA cap.

Nat Adderly blows the 11th Harambee Arts and Cultural Heritage Festival open tonight at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center

Harambee Festival serves up rich and spicy cultural gumbo

BY CLAIRE COHEN
STAFF WRITER

One of Tallahassee's most popular and exciting cultural events returns this year, bigger and better than ever.

The 11th Harambee Arts and Cultural Heritage Festival invades the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center with all the color, artistry and excitement of previous years, and more than 20,000 people are expected to flock to the event, which opens tonight and runs through Sunday.

Those sampling Harambee's delights should expect to be dazzled and entertained by a rich cultural stew spiced with such delicacies as stilt dancing, music that runs the gamut from gospel to reggae to traditional, art, films, storytelling and more.

According to Harambee Arts and Cultural Heritage Council President Wilma K. McKay, this year's gathering will "commemorate a decade of African, African-American and African-Caribbean cultural expressions."

The festival takes its name from the Swahili word meaning "let us all pull together" and has grown from the first small event, which drew about 400 visitors in 1980 at the Northwood Mall. Each succeeding year has seen the festival grow in popularity and draw participants and visitors from all across the country.

This year's theme—"Continuation and Rediscovery"—is very appropriate, according to council secretary Beverly Barber. The festival was not held last year to allow the council and other volunteers to regroup and work on the long-range planning and reorganization that the growing festival needed.

According to McKay, Harambee provides an opportunity to see a wide variety of folk and fine artists creating and displaying such diverse works as basketry, tapestry, doll-making, weaving, quiltmaking, drawing, painting and sculpture.

McKay said the festival relies on volunteers and receives funding through self-generated money and through the co-sponsorship of the Florida Arts Council, the Division of Cultural Affairs, Florida A & M University, the Division of Supported Research, Florida State University and the Leon County Tourism Development Council.

The festival opens tonight with a community get-together that will begin at 5 p.m. and run until midnight. The public is invited to welcome vendors, artists, performers and other participants and to help set up and decorate the exhibit hall in the civic center.

The public is also encouraged to contribute to the "Harambee Heritage Quilt" by bringing 10x10-inch squares, which will be attached by participating Harambee quilters. The completed quilt will be auctioned to raise money for the festival.

Friday's events will conclude with a concert by jazz cornetist, composer and former Tallahasseean Nat Adderly. Adderly is known for his be-bop style and such compositions as "Hummin'" and "Jive Samba." The concert's $10 admission charge will also be used

Here's Big Mark's guide to lots of Mardi Gras fun

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

"Oh man. Wow, Mardi Gras, man. That's gonna be the weirdest."—Billy (Dennis Hopper), from the film Easy Rider

Students are traditionally forced to limit their pre-Lent purging of the soul to the weekend prior to Mardi Gras' culmination, Fat Tuesday. And this year is no exception.

As a service to those readers pious enough to make this weekend's pilgrimage west to New Orleans, the Flambeau presents a guide to the Crescent City's hottest spots. Some of these have been haunted by Flambeau staffers, some have come to our attention simply by word of mouth. Where possible, we've added each establishment's weekend entertainment lineup and cover charge.

Mardi Gras is, as you know, a spiritual spiritual occasion. And so, for practice, repeat after me, "Forgive me father, for I have sinned."

The French Quarter is still the heart of the madness but it'll be impossible to see everything and still have time to wait in line at Pat O'Briens (718 St. Peter) and then stand around wondering why their famous Hurricanes taste so much like the cheap whiskey and Kool-Aid you swilled in high school. Save your money and keep on moving. There's plenty to see in the Quarter, or you can take the streetcar uptown.

Cajun stomp with the best of 'em at the Cajun Cabin Restaurant (501 Bourbon). Allen Fontenot and the Can't Hardly Wait Boys play on Friday and Saturday. And there's just a one-drink minimum.

Tipitina's (501 Napoleon) consistently features New Orleans' best rock, soul, zydeco and blues. But don't expect to walk right in. It'll be packed. The Neville Brothers play there this Friday and Saturday nights. Doors open at 7 p.m. and the show starts at 10:30 p.m. Bring your money clip, though—tickets are $15. If you can, stick around and catch The Radiators for $12 Sunday night at 10:30 p.m.

Here's Big Mark's guide to lots of Mardi Gras fun

BY MARK NESSMITH
STAFF WRITER

"Oh man. Wow. Mardi Gras, man. That's gonna be the weirdest."—Billy (Dennis Hopper), from the film Easy Rider

Students are traditionally forced to limit their pre-Lent purging of the soul to the weekend prior to Mardi Gras' culmination, Fat Tuesday. And this year is no exception.

As a service to those readers pious enough to make this weekend's pilgrimage west to New Orleans, the Flambeau presents a guide to the Crescent City's hottest spots. Some of these have been haunted by Flambeau staffers, some have come to our attention simply by word of mouth. Where possible, we've added each establishment's weekend entertainment lineup and cover charge.

Mardi Gras is, as you know, a spiritual spiritual occasion. And so, for practice, repeat after me, "Forgive me father, for I have sinned."

The French Quarter is still the heart of the madness but it'll be impossible to see everything and still have time to wait in line at Pat O'Briens (718 St. Peter) and then stand around wondering why their famous Hurricanes taste so much like the cheap whiskey and Kool-Aid you swilled in high school. Save your money and keep on moving. There's plenty to see in the Quarter, or you can take the streetcar uptown.

Cajun stomp with the best of 'em at the Cajun Cabin Restaurant (501 Bourbon). Allen Fontenot and the Can't Hardly Wait Boys play on Friday and Saturday. And there's just a one-drink minimum.

Tipitina's (501 Napoleon) consistently features New Orleans' best rock, soul, zydeco and blues. But don't expect to walk right in. It'll be packed. The Neville Brothers play there this Friday and Saturday nights. Doors open at 7 p.m. and the show starts at 10:30 p.m. Bring your money clip, though—tickets are $15. If you can, stick around and catch The Radiators for $12 Sunday night at 10:30 p.m.

Smitty's hosts head-bangin', sock-rockin' metal madness

BY GLEN TORBERT
STAFF WRITER

It's the classic oxymoron, a combination of peace and violence. That's Lillian Axe, with a name that even strikes a chord of irony.

Stevie Blaze, the lead guitarist, said he was watching Stephen King's Creepshow when he got the idea of naming his band after a senile old lady. The name Lillian fit best, and the word "Axe" seemed like an appropriate addition.

"Everybody kept coming back to that name," Blaze said Tuesday in a phone interview.

Lillian Axe is headlining Rockfest II, a five-band all-ages show this Saturday. With Trash Palace, Shurlocke, Pit Fiend and Nuisance, hard rock fans should have a full day of excitement.

A self-proclaimed "melodic rock" band, Lillian Axe's guitarist promised to give an exciting, powerful show. "When the band's playing these songs, it's like a multi-dimensional type of stimulus," Blaze said. "We emit a lot of energy on stage."

Saturday's show is Axe's first date on their U.S. tour. Tracks from Poetic Justice, released Jan. 14, and a compilation album released last November, Out of the Darkness—Into the Light, will be played at the concert.

Lillian Axe had troubles with their previous label, MCA, but now that they're on Grand Slamm/I.R.S., they're getting some much needed support, Blaze said.

The songs range from "Ghost of Winter," a mysterious, ethereal but rockin' tune which Blaze said describes what runs through his head when he's "laying in bed at night and not able to sleep. It's a

Sharla's back— with her posse

BY KATI KAIRIES
ARTS EDITOR

One of the Tallahassee music scene's leading ladies returns to her stomping grounds tonight with a new band, a new sound and a new set of songs.

Sharla Benedict, former front woman for local faves Begs and Achin', moved to Athens, Ga., several years ago, just after the release of her solo album Mayan Television. She said she's spent her time there writing new songs and polishing her chops on an instrument many may not associate with her previous sound.

"I've gone electric," Benedict said in a telephone interview last week. "I've got a lot of new stuff that's more sonic. It's got a harder edge."

Mayan Television, which was recorded here in Tallahassee at Flamingo Studios in one wild weekend, has plenty of edge itself. Songs like "Push Me, Pull You" and "Weasel in the Grass" rock hard, but Benedict is probably best known for more acoustic compositions such as "Thin Ice," "Intelligent Species," and "Empty Room." She's no stranger to the slam pit, though, having paid her dues in the seminal Tallahassee band the Shakes.

Benedict's new band is called Medusa Oblongata, and includes another former fixture on the local music scene, Pete Hagerman, on lead guitar. And electric guitar isn't the only new musical avenue she's strolling down—Benedict says she's learning to play the drums, too.

"I'm going to play drums in an all-girl band," Benedict said. "It's going to be called 'Swallow'."

Medusa Oblongata, featuring Sharla Benedict, plays tonight at the Grand Finale. After they whip the crowd into a frenzy, the band Bob from Athens, Ga., will take the stage. Support your former local musicians!

TSO lures listeners with pure Pops magic

CHRIS PARKER
STAFF WRITER

The Tallahassee Symphony Orchestra offers a treat this weekend with their very first Pops concert, an appeal to an audience that may not usually come out to see them.

Maestro David Pollitt, in his first year directing the orchestra, expressed the desire to get more young people who may not listen to classical music heavies like Mozart or Stravinsky out to see the orchestra. The experience of seeing and hearing a live orchestra performance should encourage anyone to come out. The fact that in this weekend's concert they're performing some of the "William Tell Overture" (the Lone Ranger theme to you couch potatoes), and a number of Rodgers and Hammerstein's most popular show tunes, should seal it.

The show kicks off with with Racini's "Overture," and moves from that to selections from Leonard Bernstein's ever popular West Side Story. The lively, sometimes jazzy, sometimes sad arrangements are contrasted by Tchaikovsky's "Capriccio Italien," a moody, impressive piece.

The second half opens with a tribute to one of America's classic songwriters, George Cohen, and is followed by what should be the most popular part of the show, songs from Broadway musicals. Hearing them done with a live orchestra is like the difference between movies and theatre.

The Broadway show tunes might as well be a Rodgers and Hammerstein medley with more than half the selections taken from the dynamic duo's popular shows, such as The Sound of Music ("My Favorite Things"), The King and I ("Something Wonderful") and South Pacific ("Cockeyed Optimist").

The Tallahassee Symphony Orchestra performs at Tallahassee Community College as part of TCC's Artists Series tonight and Saturday in Turner Auditorium on the TCC campus. For ticket information call 922-5390.

CALENDAR

MUSIC, MUSIC, MUSIC! HERE, THERE, AND EVERYWHERE! Gracing the stage of the Grand Finale tonight is Sharla Benedict and Medusa Oblongata, opening for Bob (Bob the band, not Bob the guy). Saturday, to celebrate Leap Year and Imbolc (a time of cleansing and newborn lambs; a festival of the Triple Goddess Brigit, whose breath gave life to the dead). Finale's hosts an embarrassment of musical riches on two stages simultaneously for 12 hours, from 2 p.m. until 2 a.m. Local heroes preparing for growth and renewal include Bloodhound, the Casual T's, No Say No (oh, yes, yes, yes!), Bob Anthony, John Kurzweg (and Binky), the beautiful Jen Kermee, "Cousin" Pat Puckett, and so much more.

WHOA, WAIT A MINUTE, DUDE! WE GOT A CLEANSING FEST, a Rock Fest, and... a HempFest! That's right, a leetle soiree Saturday afternoon on the steps of the Old Capitol will rally in honor of herb. Zombie Birdhouse, The Kind, Kevin Bogle, and Johari Window will provide entertainment. It all fires up around 2.

AFTER ALL THAT FEST-ING, YOU CAN CATCH THREE OF Tallahassee's best up-and-coming-atcha bands Saturday night at the Club Downunder on the FSU campus. Mung (formerly Fifth Column), the mighty, mighty Skull Train (featuring Woody the Wonder Drummer), and Steamy Cup O' Joe (best band name since Beef) do the dishonors starting at 9:30. As always, FSU students with IDs get in without having to pay; others must fork out a paltry $3.

IN THE CLUBS AND BARS AROUND TOWN, THINGS HOP. they do, indeed. At Bimini's, John Blue plays Happy Hour Friday and Saturday nights, while the Blue Monday Guys mop up after him. Sunday afternoon from 4 until whenever, Bimini's hosts a jam session, with John Blue directing traffic, and a drum set and P.A. provided. As if that wasn't enough, Sunday night is Dead Night, with all Grateful Dead music.

REAL MEN WITH REAL INSTRUMENTS PLAY REAL MUSIC for real people at the Mill on the Parkway Friday and Saturday nights. Y'all already know what's going on at the Grand Finale. At Club 506, the FAMU Comedy Show yuks it up—go have some laughs. Snidely Whiplash and Room 19 do Bullwinkle's Friday and Saturday, while Mattox Creed works both nights at the Hole in the Wall. The Nightcrawlers wriggle all over the Flamingo Cafe Friday and Saturday nights, and the Bang blows up the Armadillo Cafe Friday and Saturday.

THE TALLAHASSEE BACH PARLEY PLAYS THEIR SPRING concert Sunday afternoon beginning at 4:30 at the Epiphany Lutheran Church on Thomasville Road. The program includes selections by Johann Sebastian Bach (of course) and Telemann. Admission is by donation at the door. The Parley provides free babysitting. Call 877-6904 for more information.

DRUM ROLL, PLEASE...AND NOW, THE ICING ON THE cake, the cherry on the banana, the piece of resistance... A final musical fest for the weekend, a benefit for the presidential campaign of former California Gov. Jerry Brown at Yianni's Cafe, Sunday afternoon from 2 until 6 p.m. This fest features some of Tally's finest, including Tim Fitch, Jen Kermee, "Cousin" Pat Puckett, Kevin Ogden, and more. Admission is $5 and all proceeds go to benefit the Brown campaign. How can you resist?

Mick Buchanan rounded up most of the musical dogies in this report.

House of Voodoo (739 Bourbon).

Benny's Bar (938 Valence) is famous for late night jam sessions, killer blues acts and a seriously diverse audience. Willie Lockett plays there Friday night. Don't worry about getting there late. Half the city will just be waking up when the band stops playing.

"The majority of the buildings on campus are moderately accessible but there are a couple that have absolutely no access," she said. "I don't know what they can do about it, but they're not really trying." FSU Disabled Student Services Director Robin Leach, who attended Monday's meeting with Andriole, admitted FSU is far behind where it should be in terms of handicap access.

"I'm sure we are behind, as every university in the state is," Leach said Wednesday. "We're trying to get more money to make changes more quickly."

More than 200 students are registered with disabled student services, but Leach says the number includes all disabilities, including learning disabilities.

Freddie Groomes, director of human resources at FSU, said the university is doing its best to comply with regulations.

"We're working towards that end," Groomes said. "It's been prioritized."

Groomes pointed out that FSU has more disabled students than any other university in the system. She believes this is attributable to a commitment by the university to serve disabled students.

Groomes also said the age of FSU's buildings is a major factor in their lack of handicap access.

"Our buildings are old," she said. "We've not been able to address all of the concerns."

Leach stressed that no future construction on campus will be inaccessible to disabled people.

"We won't be constructing or renovating anything which is not completely accessible (to disabled people)," she said.

But Andriole said at least one of FSU's recent constructions, the Opperman Music Hall, had no handicapped access after it was built. A temporary wooden wheelchair ramp was later installed.

Andriole also pointed out that Leach, FSU's administrative leader for handicapped students, is not disabled herself.

"I can't believe they didn't employ a disabled person to be in that office," he said. "It makes no sense at all to me."

pseudonym for Father Time."

Then there's "Living in the Grey," which has two meanings. On one level, it's Blaze voicing his disagreement with "how so many people live in black and white. It's formulating your own ideas and not being suckered."

But there is a more tragic side to the song as well.

"It's (also) about a girl who is unable to deal with all that and who commits suicide and what a waste that is," he said.

to pay festival expenses.

Saturday and Sunday will feature a number of events taking place simultaneously in several rooms of the civic center's lower level. The exhibit hall will be the site of vendors and exhibitors of folk and fine arts, books, jewelry, and clothing. Entertainment will take place from 10 a.m. to midnight on the exhibition hall stage.

One of the most unique and popular performing groups returning to this year's festival is the Omowale Cultural Society. The group uses dancing, singing, language and dress to promote the cultures of Senegal, Ghana and Nigeria. Perhaps the most unique part of their act is the performance of traditional African stilt dancing.

Several smaller areas of the civic center will also house events. The Harambee Art Gallery in Room A-1 will feature art works in various media, as well as presentations of storytelling, poetry and traditional African drumming. The African/Caribbean Museum in Room B will feature more art works and artifacts, as well as presentations on West African language and culture.

Lillian Axe will be looking to break away from the tiresome sound-alike hair bands that have flooded the music scene with worthless "pop" metal.

"(We) stick to our guns musically. We've never ever once tried to follow the flavor-of-the-month route," Blaze said.

You can judge for yourselves Saturday.

Rockfest II is an all-ages show at Smitty's on 319 Bannerman Road. Just take Thomasville Road past Killearn to Bannerman, then take a left and drive till you see the sign. Tickets are $10 in advance at Vinyl Fever and $12 Saturday. Gates open at noon and the excitement starts at 1 p.m. For more info, call 545-5130.

For the fourth year, a mini film festival will be included in the weekend's events. Two films will be shown at various times throughout the weekend. The first, Quilombo, is a Brazilian film about 17th century Brazilian slaves who escaped to mountainous jungle strongholds where they formed self-governing communities known as "quilombos."

The second film is Malcolm X. This 1972 film is based on the autobiography Malcolm X wrote in collaboration with Alex Haley. The film traces his life from his early days as a drug peddler and pimp to his conversion to Islam, rise to leadership in the black community and finally to his assassination.

The 11th Harambee Arts and Cultural Heritage Festival opens tonight at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center and runs through Sunday. Tonight's events will take place from 5 until 10 p.m. Admission to the Nat Adderly concert is $10. The opening ceremony will take place Saturday at 9 a.m. and other scheduled events will take place from 10 a.m. to midnight. Sunday's events will begin at 10 a.m. and end with a closing ceremony at 5:30 p.m. Admission to the Saturday and Sunday events is $2 for everyone 12 and older, and free for children under 12. Tickets to all events can be purchased at the door.

Get the broom ma, it's a SWEEP

BY JIM VERTUNO
SPORTS EDITOR

Seasons like this just aren't supposed to happen are they?

Teams like Florida State, which was mediocre to good at best in the past, just don't waltz into the Atlantic Coast Conference and sweep traditional powerhouses like North Carolina do they?

Well, with the 1991-92 regular-season finale, the 21st-ranked Florida State Seminoles threw tradition to the wind.

With three players scoring more than 20 points and using streaks of dominating basketball in the second half, FSU rolled past North Carolina 110-96 Thursday night in the Civic Center to secure the second seed in the upcoming ACC Tournament.

FSU's 11th ACC win was the most ever by a rookie conference team and it was the first time the Tar Heels have given up that many points since they lost to Kentucky in the 1988-89 season. FSU is only the 17th ACC team to sweep the Tar Heels in North Carolina's league history.

Tenth-ranked North Carolina (18-6, 8-5) is also the fourth ACC team to be swept in the season series with FSU (19-8, 11-5) this season. The Seminoles also won both games with North Carolina State, Wake Forest and Georgia Tech.

"This is great, of course, and it

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1992

Jeane Dixon's

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New acquaintances short trips and pleasant visits with relatives make the coming months especially fun. Partnership matters become more complicated in March but will sort themselves out by June. Getting along with your associates will make a tremendous difference at work next summer. A delightful love affair begins in September. Be careful not to neglect your family. Christmas should find you surrounded by those closest to your heart.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: race car driver Mario Andretti, actress Bernadette Peters, Broadway star Tommy Tune, actor Gavin MacLeod.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): A day when expenditures, gifts and favors are in the spotlight. You may be tempted to play games where romance is concerned. Think twice! Mate admires your honesty.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): End the work week on a sound financial note by refusing to send good money after bad.
Emotions run high tonight, stay on an even keel. Rehashing an old argument would be a mistake.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):
Negotiating a fair deal may be difficult today. Charm and tact help you get your price. Your social life accelerates. Do not let a casual flirtation ruin a promising relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A great day to show the generous side of your nature. After all, friendship is a two-way street; you will only get back what you put in! Plan a special treat for mate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not be in too much of a hurry today or you could miss the chance to attend an interesting party.
An older person may need your help.
Travel is best postponed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Slow down and enjoy the diversions the weekend provides. You sometimes rush past things that could be a lot of fun. Include family members in any celebrations you host.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone tries to persuade you to invest time or money in a risky future. Resist the temptation. You would be jeopardizing savings you will need in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A quiet day would suit you best. Avoid taking on more than you can handle. Romance is likely to be upper most in your mind. A change of scenery proves very welcome.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will profit from listening to others now.
Your determination to have everything your own way could both cut into your fun and hinder romance. A loved one counsels caution.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have a better outlook on the future now.
You find yourself attracted to someone who normally would not be your type. Go ahead, take a chance on romance!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You should be able to take special pride in your actions now. Keep your money where you know it will be safe. A moment's carelessness could cause loss, confusion or delay.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Consider all of your options if your original plans for today fall through. Your pleasure will be doubled if you share an afternoon outing with a loved one. Let romance grow slowly.

Wieners and warm weather for FSU weekend

BY PAUL SHIRER
STAFF WRITER

Florida State takes on four of the nation's top baseball teams this weekend in what Floridians call the arctic zone—that is, Minneapolis, Minn.

However, Frostbite Fear isn't entering the Seminoles' minds considering these games will be played at the Metrodome in what's been dubbed the Oscar Meyer Classic (yes, wieners and baseball).

"I wouldn't want to play at any other place in Minnesota at this time of the year," FSU Coach Mike Martin said.

Martin says this not only because of the climate control in the dome, but also because his team has a winning history there. Back in 1988 the Seminoles breezed through the annual tournament with four wins and no losses.

To go undefeated this time around, FSU will have to get by No. 23 Minnesota tonight, No. 24 Texas A&M on Saturday and No. 8 Mississippi State on Sunday.

"This is obviously a big test for our baseball team," Martin said.

A test, but one FSU is favored to pass at 9-2 and ranked No. 4. Surprisingly, the Seminoles' success has come via not only pitching but power.

Considered a pitching and defensive team in the preseason, the Seminoles have taken on a new character, blasting nine homers in 11 games. Chris Roberts, the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Week, has done most of the damage with three.

Roberts' 14 RBI, .366 batting average and 1-0 mark as a pitcher make him by far the cornerstone of the team. But Roberts has had a great deal of help: Nandy Serrano bats .366 with four RBI, Chris Brock hits .324 with a homer and eight RBI, Link Jarrett and Bob Armstrong are hitting .400. The list goes on.

"We're hitting the ball pretty well so far," Martin said.

Pitching-wise, the Seminoles have also been tough. Roger Bailey, who'll be on the mound tonight, already is 3-0 with a 2.66 ERA. Paul Wilson, 0.00 ERA, will pitch Saturday and Roberts will go on Sunday.

Mississippi State should be FSU's stiffest competition this weekend. MSU is only four notches behind in the ratings and it beat the Seminoles the last time out, that back in 1990 in the the NCAA South II Regional.

says great things about our program," said FSU head coach Pat Kennedy. "You never know when you're going to get the opportunity to sweep programs of this caliber, if you ever do again."

FSU needed to win for more reasons than just establishing itself as the new bully on the block. The Seminoles had lost their last two games and needed to break out of a slump before taking the next two weeks off before the ACC Tournament.

"We were motivated because we knew that we had to get out of a slump," Kennedy said. "We kind of chuckled that we were saying we needed a win and we were playing North Carolina of all people. Five or six years ago you just chalk it up as a loss."

What made the difference for FSU in this win was outside shooting that seemed to disappear in the two straight losses. Guards Sam Cassell and Chuck Graham led the Seminoles with 25 and 24 points respectively and Doug Edwards added 23 from the inside. But add Bob Sura's 14 points to Cassell and Graham and it's easy to see where the real difference in the game was—the guards.

"It wasn't like they had time to shoot either," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "It seemed like they had hands in their faces the whole time but they kept knocking the shots down. Maybe we should have left them alone."

Cassell and Graham getting hot again spoiled a record-tying performance for UNC's Hubert Davis who led all-scorers with a career-high 34 points. Davis scored 23 points in the first half and set a Tar Heel record by making eight 3-pointers. But he was conspicuously silent in the second half as FSU moved Sura over to defend him one-on-one.

"Bobby did a great job on Davis for about eight minutes there in the second half. What I liked was that when we moved from our press to go back to man-to-man we didn't lose our aggressiveness," Kennedy said.

FSU fans got into the act, too. With 13,446 attending the game, it made the second largest home-crowd ever for an FSU basketball game. Only the Duke game Jan. 30 drew more fans.

"The crowd was our sixth man tonight," Cassell said. "It gave me chills to have all those people cheering like that."

"I relish this game," Kennedy said. "We've proven that our kids can play at this level."

With this season, FSU has proven it to a lot of people.
